MONEY
YOU'RE AFTER?

If you are like the rest of us you are looking around for some place to make some money.

If you knew where you could make some real money on a small investment, say $25 or as much more as desired, you would hustle some to put your money down. Now honestly you would, wouldn't you? Well, then, why don't you do as a great many of us have done, and that is buy a lot in ARLINGTON HEIGHTS TERRACE.

They offer the biggest opportunity for money making of any lot buys in the city. They are located between Pico street and Washington boulevard, just west of Crenshaw. Best of car service now with proposed subway right at hand. Street improvements are in and paid for. There are now over 100 homes on this tract. Gas, water, phones, electricity and if there is anything else that's good that we have forgotten to mention it's probably there. You will expect a big price after all this, won't you? Well, prepare for disappointment.

LARGE

THE HOMESITE
YOUR HEART HAS YEARNED FOR.

TEN MILLION DOLLARS could not ARTIFICIALLY create such a delightful combination of Los Angeles home surroundings.

Here are the requisite features for your complete happiness, as found at MONTROSE:

FIRST —Right in the green north foothills, 1400 feet above the sea, with hills and mountains right at your back door, and green gardens and fog-hung lowlands stretching out as far as the eye can reach.

SECOND—The healthiest place around Los Angeles, because you're above the fog, the smoke and dirt of the city. The mountain air is crisp and bracing, and the mountain water, pure and sparkling. It's the foothill elevation that you need.

THIRD —Trolley now building, will ACTUALLY BE RUNNING in another thirty days. This, together with perfect auto boulevards into Los Angeles, brings MONTROSE nearer to Broadway than much of the southwestern part of the city. The completion of the trolley will cause a great rush of people to this open tabernacle in the hills.

FOURTH—There are broad, winding boulevards, with sidewalks, curbs, gutters and wide parkways. There are no small lots, but instead, large 90 and 100-foot villa sites. All vacant lots and parkings to be kept clean and free from weeds until 1920. Careful building and other restrictions. These are a few of the reasons why MONTROSE will be the "Suburb Beautiful."

FIFTH —Low opening prices; many of these large home sites for as little as $600, on easy terms. Imagine getting a lot 100 by 200 in the cream of Hollywood, for such a figure.

PUT THESE STATEMENTS TO THE TEST.

Take our free auto trips to MONTROSE—leaving at 9:30 and 2:00. Phone now for reservations.

FOR SALE—
TO BUILDERS AND BUILDING COMPANIES.

Do you know that there is not a modern house for sale in Laurel Canyon on reasonable terms or at a reasonable price?

Do you know that there is a constant demand for houses in Laurel Canyon and that they could be sold as fast as completed?

Do you know that no builder or building company is operating in Laurel Canyon District and that the field is the only one adjacent to Los Angeles not covered by the closest competition?

Then why flock to one section, the low flat land of Los Angeles selling under strongest competition, when there is a demand for high land among good neighbors in a developed section?

DON'T FOLLOW A LEADER; BE ONE YOURSELF.

We can offer from one to fifty lots among property owned by such prominent people as H. V. Platt, general superintendent of the Southern Pacific Company; Mrs. E. A. Summers, the oil queen; Faris & Walker, proprietors of the Fifth-street Store; G. J. Birkel of G. J. Birkel Music Company; M. D. Sedam, superintendent of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company; Hon. R. F. Del Valle of Public Service Commission; Miss Helen Mathewson of Hershey Arms Hotel, any many others, on the easiest terms to a builder or building company who has the foresight and energy to enter a new field. We will prove our faith by the proposition we will make.

Laurel Canyon residents have the benefit of every reasonable convenience and daily household deliveries of every sort; golf, tennis and best of school facilities; nothing lacking and offering more than any other similar priced property.

Lots 50 feet front, $300 and up; large villa lots of one-quarter to one acre, $500 and up.

Will be glad to send illustrated folder, price list and map free. Agent on ground every day. We solicit your early investigation.

City lots are scarce at this price.

Fine street work, gas, water, electricity and phones all in and paid for. Have you watched the increase in property of this kind during the past year or two? Have you watched how rapidly our city is growing in population each year? Can you foresee value after 1915? Why are people buying so much property? Real estate is the most conservative investment to be found if judgment is used in buying. Some stocks are good investments but most all are uncertain. Our lots are priced so as to give the investor a chance for a big profit during the next two years. Figure out our easy payment plan, such as we offer, and see how high your percentage of profit will be. See our tract today. Will be running in 60 days.

The electric line will positively be in operation to Montrose by May 15. This is guaranteed. In fact, we will agree to buy your lot back at a 10 per cent. advance at that time if it is not so.

Think of the tremendous increase in values due to the solving of the transportation problem.

Our opening prices are SO LOW that you can't afford to pass them by without at least an investigation.

Our large villa sites are larger than three ordinary city lots, and can be bought now for less than you would pay for one 50-foot lot in the city.

For as little as $600, on easy terms, you can get one of these large home sites, with all city improvements, cement walks, curbs, gutters, wide 9-foot parkings, and fine winding boulevards.

Careful building and other restriction will make this the highest class suburban district in the foothills.

The elevation of 1400 feet, gets you up above the fog and dirt of the lowlands.

The view of hills and mountains, of orchard and valley and of the rugged outlines of Catalina looming out of the blue Pacific, all go to make the scenic attraction beyond compare.

Take our free auto trips to this beautiful country and see for yourself; it's far better than it is pictured here. Our autos leave several times daily, from this office. They go out through Hollywood, Glendale, and then up the winding romantic Verdugo road to Montrose, the most picturesque trip in Southern California.

FOR SALE—

OH! OH!! OH!

MILLIONS IN THIS.

I have about 20,000 acres of land with 15 miles ocean frontage less than 18 miles from Los Angeles; the biggest and best money-maker under the HEAVENS today. Not an acre of waste land in this.

Would you consider this proposition at less than $200 per acre? Every acre "A1," no grading or spending a fortune to get it in shape. (It is in shape now.) Under cultivation with an income. Plenty of water and ready for subdivision.

I will not communicate or answer any correspondence unless you can qualify to my satisfaction in the sum of $1,000,000 within 90 days; the balance I will make on very easy terms and satisfy any one that I can qualify in the aforementioned amount, that this is a proposition well worth your time and money (if you've got it.)

I prefer to deal with principals, but the real estate man (I've been there) will be considered if he has the client that can qualify and the make-up to make good.

No class of speculators of small amounts will be considered for a moment. Good reason for selling and why.

Communications answered, after consideration, in not less than three days from date of receipt.

Arrangements will be made in reply to meet principals. Address J, box 385, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE.

The 20 acres advertised yesterday has just been sold, but here is an extra good one—20 acres fine soil for alfalfa or fruits and ready now for subdivision. One city block from electric, 30 minutes from our office, nicely located on two good streets, 5 acres now in alfalfa, 10 more ready to seed, nice family orchard, 12 inches water at small cost. Price [illegible]. Land farther out, not as good, nor as well located, selling for [illegible] to [illegible] per acre in small pieces. This can be cut into four beautiful 5-acre pieces, each fronting on the electric, only one to two blocks from the station. This will make an elegant 20-acre home or a big profit RIGHT NOW if subdivided.

FOR SALE—A STOCK AND GRAIN RANCH of about 5000 acres fenced and cross-fenced. Six sets farm buildings. Owned by an eastern party, who will be in this city the 20th of this month for four or five days, and authorizes us to sell at $20 per acre. We know this ranch, and the location, and while it is regarded as the best grain and stock ranch in its location, we know the location to be one of the best in the State for the raising of apples, grapes, apricots, peaches, almonds and walnuts, and would gladly join a syndicate to purchase and colonize the tract. We believe we might use $50,000 of clear Los Angeles or eastern improved property in the purchase, and with $50,000 cash we could arrange to have the balance carried on a long-time loan.

FOR SALE—
SNAPS IN REAL ESTATE. Here are properties offered for sale at about half price. The owners are simply up against it and must raise money immediately. $5500; 10 acres, near Pomona, improved, mostly full-bearing oranges, some peaches, fruit frozen, trees now budding; should produce fair crop of oranges next season. Owner in Oklahoma, can't meet mortgage, $4000, now due; must sacrifice.
$10,000—10-acre full-bearing orange grove near Ontario, trees smudged, should produce good crop next season, considerable good fruit now on trees, can be shipped. Owner has 3 orange groves, the loss of the orange crop this winter leaves him in straitened financial circumstances. $4500 5-year mortgage can be assumed.
$6000—Think of it, for 20 acres, mostly full bearing, half 'cots, half peaches, about value of bare land; owner a widow lady, owning other real estate, does not want the care of the property. Near Ontario, where there is a good cannery and a good market for deciduous fruits.
$8500—Near Ontario, only $10,000, buys 20 acres, all set recently to peaches; nice uniform trees; owner is needing money now, or would not offer at this ridiculously low figure.
Best buy in the well-known La Verne district, where until the present unusually cold season oranges have escaped injury by frost; ten acres, some Valencias, mostly navels, near the foothills, owner planted the trees and must raise money immediately. Has other orange groves; this grove one of his best, will be sold to the first cash buyer at a snap bargain price. Don't submit me any exchange on these properties. Sale propositions only. Don't waste my time unless you have money to invest, and are looking for bargains in homes or A1 real estate investments. Wise buyers are picking up the real estate bargains I am offering. Monday, March 10, sold to cash buyer who has been raising oranges over 20 years, an eleven-acre orange grove on Euclid ave. March 13 closed a deal for 40-acre alfalfa ranch. The Examiner will insert this ad. in Sunday issue, March 16; the Express in Saturday's issue, March 15. The owners of these properties desire me to sell as soon as possible. Ten years in the realty business at Pomona. The Pacific Electric cars pass directly in front of my office, Pomona, nearly every hour. Come and see me. I can make you money. Several good exchanges of Pomona city and country property, but submit only actual values.

FOR SALE—STOCK RANCH—
I offer for sale 320 acres in Sonoma county. It is mostly open, rolling land, good soil, as evidenced by large black and live oaks, laurel, and madrone trees.
Property is well fenced and cross-fenced. The house is roomy and comfortable with running hot and cold water in kitchen and bathroom. There is a large barn and stable, stone milkhouse and other necessary buildings.
The rainfall never fails, and the property is abundantly watered by several trout streams and creeks. In addition are many large perennial springs of purest water.
There are about 60 acres that will grow alfalfa, and 250 acres adapted to grain, hay, etc.
There are also [illegible] acres of [illegible] land suitable for apples, grapes, prunes, pears, oranges and walnuts. The growing of deciduous and citrus fruits on adjoining land prove the adaptability of this acreage in these productions.
Conservative stock men estimate seven acres to carry a bullock in this locality, therefore this range will safely carry 220 head of cattle or 2500 sheep. It is also well adapted to hogs and Angora goats.
This property is offered on a stock ranch valuation of $35 an acre. It has much merit and must be seen in order to fully appreciate its value; present and future. For further information address A. V. McCORMACK, 1017 W. 32nd st. or phone Vermont 1735 for appointment.

LITTLE LANDERS PLANS ANNOUNCED.

A Garden City Colony.
In the Mountains near Los Angeles.

The Little Landers of Los Angeles, modelled on the famous Little Landers of San Diego, will be established immediately in the Valley of Monte Vista, three miles west of Montrose and Crescenta. Fifty families are already on the ground, and hundreds more enlisted among prospective colonists. It is expected that the colony will spread over thousands of acres, and become an important vegetable and poultry supply source for the homes of this city. Co-operative buying and marketing direct to consumers is one of the important features of the plan. Another feature of the Little Landers' method of settlement is organized social and intellectual life. A fine clubhouse, library and auditorium to be known as "Belton Hall" in honor of the author of "A Little Land and a Living," will be erected immediately at a cost of $5000, under direction of George Harris, rustic masonry artist, who built the well-known private clubhouse for Mr. Robert Marsh. A new schoolhouse, store and hotel are also provided for.

The name of the new settlement will be "Los Terrenitos," which is Spanish for "the little lands." It will be a garden city of quarter, half and full acres, 2000 feet above sea level, within 15 or 16 miles of the heart of Los Angeles.

These plans were announced by William E. Smythe, to a large and enthusiastic audience at the Woman's Clubhouse last evening. Mr. Smythe will lecture every evening at 8 o'clock during the week at the headquarters of the movement—the House of th Little Landers, 920 South Figueroa street, Los Angeles.

Literature free by mail.

800 ACRES of good land near two railroads and with a splendid market for any and all products. SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY—

FOR SALE—BEST SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY lands, low prices direct from owners. Are you looking for subdivision tract, alfalfa, fruit or grain farm or stock range? Meet owners direct avoiding boom prices and excessive profits to agents—I will be at the Hollenbeck Hotel, Los Angeles, several days this week representing many San Joaquin Valley property owners who desire to meet buyers personally and they have authorized me to offer some of the very best land in the State at prices that will surprise you. Thirty years' residence and long connection with the Southern Pacific Land Department qualifies me to know the soils and all statements made will be strictly reliable.

$[illegible] per acre improved grain and stock farm [illegible] acres. 1800 acres is the very strongest sediment bottom land; has produced 45 sacks of grain to the acre. Half of ranch can be irrigated from streams and many large springs that flow throughout the year. Many improvements. This is one of the best watered farms in the State, produced about $20,000 last year. This is a rare bargain, owner can no longer care for it. 10,000 acres free range goes with the place.

$[illegible] per acre improved farm near Merced River. Now in grain. One section nearly level balance rolling, suitable for oranges, lemons and other fruits, which ripen early in this section. 1000 acres, one body.

$[illegible] per acre, improved farm, 400 acres, [illegible] acres very choicest sediment silt soil. Artesian well has been flowing for years. Adjoining ranch produces the largest crops of alfalfa I have ever seen anywhere. I saw three tons per acre harvested on the sixth cutting last season. Land level, water 12 to 18 feet.

$[illegible] per acre, [illegible] acres in artesian belt near Livingston, Merced county. Land level, rich sandy loam soil.

$[illegible] per acre, 2140 acres first-class orange land Fresno county, adjoining foothills. Five miles from important town.

$125 per acre, improved farm, 30 acres near Atwater, [illegible] acres alfalfa, house, barn, all level, good income ranch.

I have twelve other places, mostly small orchard and alfalfa farms that I would submit to homeseekers as they are all some of our best land and paying goods incomes. If you want a good home at bedrock prices, call on me at Hollenbeck Hotel. After Wednesday my address will be Merced, Cal.

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY—

FOR SALE—

The OROSI FARMS

is the name of a choice tract in Tulare county where water, soil, drainage and foothill protection are of the best.

We sell our land in 20-acre tracts, as many as you want; or we will sell a 10-acre tract.

You pay 1-4 cash ($[illegible] to $[illegible] an acre,) and the balance in 1918. This gives you an opportunity to grow crops that will make you a living and pay out on the land.

We give 10 per cent. discount for cash and we give a special discount for cash any time within 4 years.

We absolutely guarantee water on every lot.

The Orosi Farms is safe for oranges. The navel crop is shipped by December 15th. Even nursery stock was not hurt by the recent cold snap.

Diversified crops are the farmer's safeguard. The Orosi Farms soil is choice for oranges, but it is also admirably adapted to the growing of olives, peaches, figs, seedless grapes, table and wine grapes, melons, berries, Turkish tobacco, alfalfa, etc., etc. We will be glad to quote specific instances showing that the above crops yield $150 to $300 an acre. With such returns possible our lands cannot long remain at present prices.

Are you in the market for land? If so, send for our folder with map.

Excursion Wednesday, March 19th.

GOVERNMENT LAND—

STATE LAND—

NAMES AND ADDRESSES ON FILE OF PERSONS I HAVE SUITED MAKE THE FOLLOWING STATEMENTS: A dealer and an oldtime searcher of records writes: "I got your lists and am thankful for same." Another dealer who purchased a bargain for himself writes: "Am much obliged for the information." A very busy doctor, who could only get away for a few hours at a time to see and buy land writes: "I am inclosing check for $[illegible] as per agreement. Have just received deed from the State for [illegible] acres. Any further information from you would be appreciated." Twenty years ago I helped put an ARTESIAN WELL down one afternoon near this [illegible] acres. One very busy dairyman wrote me last month: "I have answered some letters of inquiries about your work. I shall surely give you all the assistance possible in selling land." He has bought a large amount himself. Another person who himself first ordered writes this month: "I have interested several persons in your offer to get State land, and I think that I shall be able to send you MORE ORDERS before long." A prominent attorney and judge stated that "Mr. —— called at my office yesterday, the first time I had seen him in many months, and he assuredly gave you a good send off. I am sure that our relations will be eminently satisfactory to both of us, and I trust that I may benefit by your advice. Permit me to thank you for your compliance so promptly. I shall investigate these pieces at once and make an effort to effect a purchase, and shall mail you my check in accordance with my promise contained in my former letter, when I am the possessor of a parcel of land." Another prominent attorney writes: "I hesitated to send you an advanced payment and now I hesitate to say how many thousand dollars I would take for the land I bought through you." A Santa Rosa man writes: "Your list of State land received today, and was surprised of nearness to me of same." An Oakland man writes his list was stolen and I sent other lists. Here are a few other quotations: "Lists received and am more than satisfied; I sure got good value for the money paid you." "Piece purchased for $[illegible], worth $[illegible]; one piece bought by me for $[illegible]; owing to sickness, I will take $[illegible] for a piece which I figure cost me $[illegible]." One purchaser may subdivide and lay out a town as railroad runs through the land that I searched out for him. Other references in new revised circular.

State now sells State land every month regardless of present value at prices arranged by law years ago. You need my lists to SEE, SELECT AND BUY STATE LAND FROM OFICIALS, also particulars AND LETTER OF INSTRUCTIONS. Write me fully any questions you wish. No trouble to answer questions. I will not send an agent to bother you. I can direct you fully by registered letter and save railroad expenses. I SHOULD BE PLEASED TO INFORM YOU ABOUT SOME STATE LAND NEAR YOU. I will make a FREE SPECIAL SEARCH FOR YOU CONFIDENTIALLY about any piece of land you may want to know about when you send in your order as per my circular for 25 pieces nearest any town you mention. Write me, "SEND ME, FREE, NEW, REVISED CIRCULAR REGARDING STATE LAND." JOSEPH CLARK, Experienced Searcher of State Records, office and residence, 1511 K street, Sacramento, Cal.

OIL PROPERTY—

PROMOTERS OR INVESTORS—INVESTIGATE.

I have one of the best oil propositions that is on the market today. In a well developed field but one that is not well advertised nor has it ever been boomed. Three large companies operating very extensively there now own or control practically all of the property in that section, therefore little is heard of same. Oil is all above forty gravity paraffine base, and the price today is but [illegible] cents at the well. Over a dozen wells with an initial flow over 25,000 barrels have been brought in in the past two years and some still flow very freely. This property is under my absolute control, having been in the family since 1852, is located in the heart of the field and can and will be delivered if a satisfactory deal can be made. Will either sell outright for cash or terms, or will consider proposition looking toward quick development. For particulars call or write.

Among other attractive features will be a very large veranda across the front, a large lobby and amusement room, each being over 40 feet long, roof garden, passenger elevator, etc. I have built many fine apartment houses, but this one is the best yet, and the best part of this proposition is the location, which is up on the hill near Fourth and Hope, only five minutes from this office, where you can keep all your apartments rented all the year at top prices. I can convince any sane person in ten minutes that this is the best location in Los Angeles today. I will lease this building for ten years to a responsible tenant for $[illegible] per month. BUSINESS INVESTMENTS—

ABILITY AND CAPITAL APPLIED TO NATURAL RESOURCES WILL CREATE WEALTH.

The greater the ability employing capital, the greater the return. Have you any capital not working, or not bringing the largest return of profit consistent with safe, sensible and fair dealing between man and man?

Have you any land not earning more than interest on the money invested in it? If so, you should sell it. Any responsible person will pay interest for the use of your money.

Have you a valuable, large tract of acreage for sale? If so, your whole duty is not only to collect the money for it, you should be sure the land is fit for what you have sold it for. You should be sure that you are giving the buyer as much or more than he can get for his money anywhere else. It takes a man of ability with an aggressive and persistent intelligence, continually sustained by enthusiasm by a comprehensive selling plan, to get the greatest profits for the seller and the greatest benefits for the buyer. If a thing is worth doing, do it well. Ask the man to do it who knows how. He is the best and the cheapest.

I am the man with the right kind of ability and knowledge gained by experience, a persistent, intelligent sort of man who is not handicapped by the experience of the knockout route in business.

The 100-point man in the real estate business is not the man who has made the most money. The man self-educated, who has made $100,000 within thirty-five years from the time he first saw daylight, should be rated higher than the man who has made a million with $100,000, if he has had the advantage of having experienced people superintend his education and preparation for his life's work.

If you are the man with capital looking for the man who can get the greatest returns for you by safe, sensible and fair business methods, I am the man looking for you. If you want a man who will work for you for a salary or a commission, you don't want to meet me. My intention is not to try to exploit you, neither will I submit to exploitation.

Intelligent labor creates capital. Capital employed by an aggressive, intelligent, practical man in promotion and development of natural resources of our old earth will create, not exploit, 25 to 100 per cent. on the investment. Are you making less? Are you dissatisfied with it?

The discontent of the average normal, healthy man and woman of this world has been the first cause leading to thought, education, government, co-operation and industrial achievement, all of which are the means of satisfaction and of greater development of man. I want to meet the man with cash, land or assets, who is impressed by what is said and implied in this statement. C. N. GILL, 20 Chestnut Place, Long Beach, Cal.

THE WYOMING ERVAY OIL CO., WITH A small capitalization now has title to 1280 acres and a most favorable option on 1280 acres adjoining, which without doubt is in the greatest high gravity oil fields in the United States today.

The company has already contracted to put down several wells on its property this spring and has arranged to finance this part of the work. It has just been decided to sell 20,000 shares (par value $1.00) of the treasury stock at 25 cents per share (ground floor price) to cover other necessary expense.

No salaries to be paid until substantial profits are earned. This company is composed of business men of standing with the best of bank references.

Our business is an open book and any one who will take the trouble to investigate will be convinced of the good faith and unusual merit of this offer.

The profits of our wells will be enormous. Other oil companies in the same district are making millions of dollars annually. No promoters considered.

I have one of the best oil propositions that is on the market today. In a well developed field but one that is not well advertised nor has it ever been boomed. Three large companies operating very extensively there now own or control practically all of the property in that section, therefore little is heard of same. Oil is all above forty gravity paraffine base, and the price today is but 90 cents at the well. Over a dozen wells with an initial flow over 25,000 barrels have been brought in in the past two years and some still flow very freely. This property is under my absolute control, having been in the family since 1889, is located in the heart of the field and can and will be delivered if a satisfactory deal can be made. Will either sell outright for cash or terms, or will consider proposition looking toward quick development. For particulars call or write.

A CONSERVATIVE INVESTMENT. A company is being organized to take over an established manufacturing business, a virtual monopoly, product conceded superior to anything on the market. No competition worth mentioning. Manufacturing profit 200 per cent. The business now clearing over 20 per cent. per annum. Contracts on hand insure large returns on the investment. More in sight. Capable of enormous expansion Turning away business. A bona fide, legitimate business proposition—not a mere prospect—the equal of which is rarely offered to investors. Special advantages to those who come in previous to incorporation. Address K, box 303, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE.

Why not buy Pan-American? It has interest in 5 wells in the richest oil field in California. Buy now, for it must advance. Ask for recent circular. F8721. MONROE & CO., 619 S. Spring st.

YOU—
SOMETHING.

You cannot afford to miss reading what I have to tell you. Unless I and the BANK PRESIDENTS, HEADS OF OUR LARGEST INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISES AND SOME OF OUR MOST LEVEL HEADED BUSINESS MEN ARE MISTAKEN, the opportunity this announcement presents is one of the best, if not the BEST INVESTMENT in California today.

And we are NOT mistaken. Six months ago there might have been some element of doubt, but during this period our product has been THOROUGHLY TRIED and TESTED and it's MERIT is PROVEN beyond all question. I will not ask you to take my word for this. YOU will be CONVINCED by the TESTIMONY of a "cloud of witnesses," from the officials of a hundred million dollar California corporation down to the owners of the humblest homes.

OUR business is not prospective or speculative. It is SOLID and SUBSTANTIAL and we are booking orders at better than two thousand dollars a week right now. This is just the beginning and is ONLY an INDICATION of the increasingly large volume we will do as our facilities for taking care of it are increased.

In fact, we are limited in volume and profits only to the extent of our ability to fill orders promptly.

We do not have to create any demand.

WE SUPPLY A UNIVERSAL NECESSITY.

Edison did not have to create a demand for light—people were already using gas, and before gas, kerosene oil—all Edison had to do was to let the people SEE the superiority of electric light and the PEOPLE THEMSELVES DID THE REST—they bought electric lights so fast that stock in the company increased from $100 TO $4000 in ONE YEAR.

WE SUPPLY A COMMODITY JUST AS NECESSARY AND JUST AS UNIVERSALLY USED AS LIGHT, AND THE SERVICE IS JUST AS FAR SUPERIOR TO PRESENT SERVICE AS THE ELECTRIC LIGHT IS AHEAD OF THE KEROSENE LAMP.

I could not begin to give you an adequate idea in this brief space—it is too revolutionary—the results accomplished are too wonderful—but I will be glad to explain in detail at a personal interview, or I will send you our twenty-four page booklet, which gives all the facts. YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF to investigate right now. CALL OR WRITE TODAY.

We make a specialty of loans where the borrower is not drawing a salary, by taking chattel security, and in no case are any papers recorded or any publicity.

We also make loans to people drawing a salary. Why? Because a person drawing a salary has a steady income and is easily able to meet our payments, and not because that is our security.

The salary is not bought, neither does the EMPLOYER or any one else know of the loan.

L. A. SUBMARINE STOCK.

The Submarine Boat which was launched January [illegible], 1913, sank on that date because the vents from the ballast compartments were inadvertently left open. These vents being open made it very difficult to raise the boat to the surface again. On January 24 the boat was raised to the surface by means of barges and compressed air.

Since that date we have been rushing the repair work as fast as possible, and in a few days the boat will be demonstrating that the L. A. Submarine Boat Co.'s stock is really worth what we claim for it—$[illegible] per share.

All I ask is an opportunity to show you, and then if you care to sell your stock I will buy it and I will make you a better offer than you can get from any one else.

See others, but before you sell, see me.

If you buy Mammoth Channel Gold Mine stock now you will be in on the ground floor at [illegible]c, and it looks to be the best investment at the price on the market today. Call for particulars as we are agents for the stock here.

The latest reliable news from the Steifer mine is that the water is up in the incline, caused by the power lines being broken down with a heavy snow storm, and putting the pumps out of commission. They are now building a concrete base for the electric motor, which has arrived after a delay of four or five moths and when that is thoroughly tried they will connect the motor with gearing to the hoisting apparatus. Then if it does not take too long to pump the mine out they should be ready to mine not later than June 1, 1913.

We will buy—Pick and Drill, Copper Creek, P. B. Steifer, Anti-Friction, Jerome Verde, Submarine Boat.

PRIVATE WIRELESS STATION.

Watch Factory in the City of Halle Will Receive the Time by Hertzian Waves.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, March 15.—The first private wireless telegraph station in Germany has just been erected at Halle. It belongs to a watch and clock factory there, and is designed to receive time signals sent out by the big government station at Norddeich.

The army and navy authorities in Germany foresaw from the beginning the dangers and embarrassment, above all, from a military point of view, resulting from the indiscriminate construction of private stations, which was so well illustrated in the United States at the time of the Titanic disaster, and with the aid of the law giving the government a monopoly of the means of communication have interposed an absolute veto on the construction of private wireless equipment.

Even the station now licensed will be equipped with receiving apparatus only, adapted to catching the time signals and nothing else. Fifty other watch and clock factories have applied for permission to erect similar receiving stations.

SACRED LAKE DISCOVERED.

Mysterious Body of Water in Darkest Africa.

Big Python and Crocodiles Guard Holy Place.

Thousands Make Pilgrimage to Strange Tomb.

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

LONDON, March 15.—From Southern Nigeria comes news of a remarkable discovery just made by P. Amaury Talbot, a district commissioner and famous traveler. It is the "Sacred Lake of Life," on which, according to popular belief, the existence of 100,000 people depends. When Mr. Talbot returned to this country from extensive travels in unknown parts of Nigeria, he announced as one of the most interesting discoveries the finding of the Lake of the Dead in the Oban country. This he visited after great difficulty, and in spite of the fact that porters and carriers refused to proceed to the dreaded spot.

The scene about the lake, he said, was full of mystery and dread. The surface of the water was absolutely still, and round about were ten feet high, bushes bearing what looked like great tufts of creamy flowers. The place was a sanctuary for all wild things, for no hunter would dare to penetrate the bush to this fearsome place.

As Mr. Talbot stood at the edge, gazing out over the water, its quiet was suddenly broken by a broad ripple, and little fish were seen to spring agitatedly above the surface. A great python was crossing, and this, it was learned, shared with the crocodiles the guardianship of the Sacred Lake. Nothing was allowed to trouble the water or even to touch its outer edge for fear of famine and pestilence ensuing. Hither, the natives believed, came by night the ghosts of long dead Ekoi, to drift in sad companies, hopeless and wailing, over the surface of the water.

On his return to Nigeria he found that the news of the discovery of the Lake of the Dead had brought to light the fact that another sheet of water to which mysterious powers were ascribed existed in the neighborhood of Ikot-Obo, the chief town of the Ibibios, and one afternoon Mr. Talbot and Mr. Eakin, accompanied by Mrs. Talbot and her sister, set out to endeavor to locate it. Hereto, the knowledge of the lake had been kept a jealously guarded secret from all Europeans, and not even the natives, with the exception of the high priests, had been allowed to approach the sacred water—the dwelling place of the greatest deity of the race.

FULL OF GREAT FISH.

Access to the lake was through a sacred grove so cunningly contrived that a stranger might pass within a few yards, yet never find the holy pool. Mr. Talbot and his party, guided to the spot, found that the water was full of great fish, on the welfare of which depended the life of the Ibibio race. The fish were so tame that they fed from the hand of the reigning high priest, the only native human being allowed to look upon the water. Formerly, many victims were annually sacrificed here, though at the present day human life is not permitted to be taken.

Countless legends had grown up around the spot. It was said to be placed by its first guardian, the Thunder God, under the care of a python and a leopard, who ceaselessly kept watch and destroyed any one rash enough to seek to penetrate its mysteries. It is especially sacred as the dwelling place of the most powerful deity—the Great Mother—Isu-Ma (the face of Love,) whose symbol is a holy rock facing the entrance.

Nearby the travelers found a second pool auxiliary to the lake itself. In the center of this is a palm tree, near which, in the water, are stationed a man, a girl and a boy, who bear the name of the goddess, as they were granted to the parents in direct answer to prayer.

REMARKABLE TOMBSTONE.

During the past few weeks many thousands have made the pilgrimage to Leeds to gaze upon a remarkable monument. The tombstone has been erected by a well-known Leeds man to the memory of his wife, who died about two years ago. It is a replica of the porch of the house where the husband lived with his wife, on the broad step at the bottom being a large figure in white marble—almost life size—of the dead woman, who apparently has just stepped out of the house, for the door is ajar. The doors are of polished black Aberdeen granite and are fitted with knobs just as if they were the doors of the house itself. The figure of the woman is leaning forward slightly as she might be stepping out of the house to greet her husband. She is in evening dress and carries in her hand a bunch of flowers.

MURDEROUS MILLINERY.

An animals' health and utilities exhibition and conference is to be held at Caxton Hall, Westminster, during the week beginning April 21. Some of the exhibits will be unusually interesting, notably in the sections dealing with humane dress, steel traps and animal surgical appliances. Mme. Sarah Grand will preside over the section devoted to "murderous millinery," in connection with which there will be a display of exquisite hats made without the aid of feathers. Furs which apparently are seal, but which could only be identified as imitations of seal by an expert furrier, will be shown.

The Society for the Suppression of (Cruel) Steel Traps will exhibit the traps of various designs sent in for their prize competition for the best trap which will either "humanely catch" or "humanely kill" its victims.

LENT BY THE GAEKWAR.

One of the Four Panels That Constitute the Pearl Carpet of Baroda Viewed by London.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

LONDON, March 15.—[Special Dispatch.] The Gaekwar of Baroda has lent to the Victoria and Albert Museum, South Kensington, one of the four magnificent panels which together constitute the celebrated "Pearl Carpet of Baroda."

These panels, with other intended gifts, including a canopy (the "Pearl Veil") and a set of gold carpet weights encrusted with diamonds, were prepared in the reign of Khande Rao Gaekwar (1856-1870,) probably at the instigation of his Mahommedan wife, as an offering to the tomb of Mohammed at Medina.

The panel, which is suggestive of the wonders of the whole carpet, consists of an arabesque design embroidered in pearls and colored glass beads with applied gold bosses and studs set with lasque (flat) diamonds and cabochon (convex form) rubies, emeralds, and sapphires.

In the center a conventional full-blown flower encloses a large boss of soft gold mounted with a rosette of diamonds, the field filled in with jewelled palmettes and flowers, proceeding from leafy stems scrolling, encircling and interlacing on a close ground of iridescent seed-pearls. In the border are twenty-four diamond rosettes.

INDORSES DIET FOR HAPPINESS.

SCIENTIST SHOWS UP WHAT PARISIANS EAT.

Averages Their Daily Consumption of Meat, Vegetables, Liquors and Other Viands and Recommends List as Panacea to Those Inclined to Be Gloomy.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

PARIS, March 15.—[Special Dispatch.] Prof. Armand Gautier has been asked to discover exactly what a human being ought to eat to be in good health and in perfect spirits. This question has been so often mooted and so deeply studied by German scientists that Prof. Gautier was embarassed. But he suddenly hit upon an ingenious idea. The best thing was to take the average Parisian as an example. A real, proper Parisian, he argued, is always happy, always in good health, and in perfect spirits, and he is, moreover, an omnivorous being. He does not hesitate to devour other animals, his inferior brothers, in the shape of meat of all kinds, and he is at the same time an eclectic vegetarian without being a teetotaller, for he will take his wine and even his absinthe when he can afford it.

GAUTIER'S STATISTICS.

Prof. Gautier, therefore, sought out the Octori statistics and the result was a brilliant one. There are exactly 2,800,000 inhabitants within the circle of the Fortifications, and consequently within the Octori sphere. These 2,800,000 eat per day and per person twelve and one-half ounces of bread, twelve and one-half ounces of green vegetables, one-half pound of meat without bones (why bones) and one-fourth pound potatoes. So much for the solid foods which form the body of the daily menu. The drinks are apportioned as follows: Sixty cubic inches of water, thirty cubic inches of wine, and twelve cubic inches of milk.

If we want the proportions of the minor articles of consumption they are as follows, in metric grammes: Dry vegetables, 40; fresh fruit, 70; sugar, 40; eggs, 24; cheese, 8, and various fats such as butter, etc., 28. Nothing more is needed to make a person, healthy, happy and "spiritual."

YOU MUST "PATCH."

If You Want to Be Really Up to Date Make a Crazy Quilt or Something Like It.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

LONDON, March 15.—[Special Dispatch.] If you want to be really up-to-date, you must "patch." Society is always eager to welcome something new in the way of amusement, and its latest craze is the patchwork party.

For the benefit of those who are as yet uninitiated a few words will explain how this new and fashionable game is played. Each competitor—the more the merrier—is provided with an outline sketch and a gummed sheet of paper on which are printed a number of colored patches which, when cut out and affixed to the outline sketch will produce a complete colored patchwork picture, and which resembles a Post-impressionist masterpiece. Armed with a pair of scissors the patchwork artist cuts out the pieces as neatly as possible and sticks them on to the outline picture in which he or she considers to be their proper positions. The result is harmonious, artistic, or grotesque, according to the skill of the competitor.

When the pictures have been completed they are judged on their merits by some one or more persons who have undertaken that duty, an prizes are awarded to the most successful ladies and gentlemen. The beauty of patchwork is that it can be run on a big or a small scale.

WISHES HE WERE A DOG.

Insane Patient in French Asylum Would Change Places in Order to Fill Up on Absinthe.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

PARIS, March 15.—[Special Dispatch.] Some time ago a commission of Town Councillors paid a visit to an asylum. They were much interested in the work of the resident doctor, who makes a special study of effects of alcoholism. This doctor has a dog, to which he administers twice daily a strong dose of absinthe. The animal likes his diet, but it does not like him. He has the air of a very dull and dreary dog, indeed. After leaving the laboratory the commissioners visited the rest of the asylum. When passing through the ward reserved for alcoholic patients they found their way barred by a wild-eyed gentleman, who said he had a request to make.

Tell us what it is, said the Councillors, soothingly.

"Gentlemen," said the lunatic, with dignity, "my request is this—to be allowed to take the place of the laboratory dog."

FRANCE FEARS TEUTON ARMY.

Votes Vast Sum to Increase War Efficiency.

Proposes to Encourage Men to Re-enlistment.

Press Is With Government in New Programme.

BY PAUL VILLIERS.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

PARIS, March 15.—[Special Dispatch.] There is a ring of the old and bold France in her palmiest days in the reply of the war ministry of the republic to the gage thrown down by Germany's enormous military preparations. The French Chamber is to be asked to vote $130,000,000 to place the army of the republic in a state of perfect efficiency to cope with any contingency.

Something like a feverish anxiety lest she find herself hopelessly outdistanced as a military power by Germany has seized upon France.

Public opinion has been deeply stirred by the action of Germany in raising her peace footing to 865,000 against France's 600,000—a crushing superiority which has aroused the French government to instant action. As a result of many Cabinet councils, the government has decided:

Parliament is to be asked to vote, without delay, an extra budgetary credit of about $30,000,000 for the completion before the end of the year of certain reforms in material, etc.

Before the coming vacation, Parliament will be asked to vote a second credit of over $100,000,000 to cover the cost of any army programme to be completed within a given period, like the German programme of 1911 and of 1912. This programme will deal with the strengthening of fortresses, the perfecting of artillery ammunition, heavy artillery, and aeronautics.

TO INCREASE EFFICIENCY.

In order to increase the efficiency, it is proposed to restore to their regiments men now employed in the administration services, to encourage enlistment and re-enlistment, and to increase the number of native recruits in Algeria, Tunis and West Africa.

As, however, it is probable that these measures will prove inadequate to satisfy the military authorities, the Minister of War has been asked to prepare a bill containing measures for dealing with a deficiency. Of possible solution of the shortage in effective troops the most important are:

(1) The return to the three years system of service with the colors.

(2) The re-establishment of three years service for the cavalry only.

(3) Thirty months service for all arms.

Should any opposition be made, the government will immediately make the adoption of their programme a question of confidence. In this attitude they are encouraged not only by the general sentiment of the country, but by politicians of all classes and the press, of all shades of opinion. The government's proposal to re-establish the three-year service is an extra "blood tax" which is likely to result in dangerous feeling against Germany.

MACHIAVELLI'S PLAY.

Machiavelli's "Mandragora," which so disgusted Pope Leo X that His Holiness issued a special warning against patronage of the play, is rather highly seasoned for a twentieth century audience, even a Parisian one; and the thoughtful M. Antoine sent a circular to his subscribers asking them to leave their daughters at home when they came to see the translation in verse of Machiavelli's famous play by M. Emile Bergerat, which he has just brought out at the Odeon under the title of "La Nuit Florentine." To unsqueamish people the piece, translated into deliciously fantastic verse by the veteran poet, was a delight.

DECORATION A SURPRISE.

The decoration conferred on Mlle. Helene Dutrieu, the first aviatress to whom the ribbon of the Legion of Honor, has just been awarded, could come as a surprise only to those who did not know of her wonderful record in aviation. Of all the women who took to flying, she is the only one who has, as it were, kept pace with the leading aviators, and has in many instances surpassed them in her achievements. Her first flight was on a "Demoiselle" of M. Santos Dumont. Then she practiced for a while on a Sommer biplane at Bouzy, in the Ardiennes, and the next that was heard of her, was that she was making sensational records at Odessa, where unfortunately she had a very serious accident, which nearly cost her her life.

Having recovered, Mlle Dutrieu returned to France, and made a number of flights on a Farman biplane. Her best performance, in 1910, was to be on the very last day of the year, December 31, when she won the Coupe Femina. It was also a test as to who could support the biting cold longer—Mlle. Dutrieu, who flew for three long hours, or the timekeepers who, with their usual male vanity, had imagined that it would all be over in five minutes.

CONTEST FOR SUPREMACY.

All the Nations Are Getting Anxious to Have the Greatest Ships in the World.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 15.—The contest for supremacy in size of Atlantic liners which has been waged since the Oceanic was launched in 1871 will begin a new era this year with the launching of several 50,000-ton boats. On May 28 the Imperator, the first 50,000-ton steamship, will begin her maiden voyage. On April 21 the Aquitania, slightly larger than the German boat, will be launched on the Clyde, while the Britannic, bigger than either of these rivals, is rapidly taking shape on the stocks at Queen's Island.

Since 1871 the length and beam of Transatlantic liners have been more than doubled and their gross tonnage increased twelve-fold. The limit in their size, however, does not depend upon the designers, but upon the harbor authorities.

When giving notice the other day of his intention of calling upon the Southampton Board for the expenditure of $500,000 for the widening and deepening of the navigable channel, the Mayor remarked that within the next three years steamers half as big again as the Olympic would be using the port.

STOCK LETTER.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury Bldg., Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, March 15.—The Supreme Court will assemble Monday and there will probably be the usual expectancy of a decision in the Minnesota rate case, but aside from that it seems likely that the outcome of the Union Pacific affair, taken in conjunction with the status of foreign political and monetary conditions, will govern the course of securities prices.

The California commission says its information is too meager to render a decision on the Union Pacific dissolution plan. Unless the plan is approved today by the commission and the Circuit Court the syndicate will dissolve.

J. P. Morgan's doctor in Rome says his patient has been suffering from nervous prostration, but will soon be well.

Contempt proceedings may be instituted against the Toledo, St. Louis and Western because of its effort to withdraw from the arbitration to settle the firemen's wage dispute.

Chairman McCall says the subways contract is the best bargain any municipality ever made.

Lackawanna will file today an answer to the government suit instituted a month ago.

Failures this week were 282, against 280 the previous week.

Reports show that the iron and steel trade is prosperous, with more activity in pig iron.

Twelve industrials declined .11 per cent.; twenty active rails declined .33 per cent.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

Union Issues Exhibit Better Feeling. Amalgamated Is Weaker, and Associated Strong.

There was a good range of activity yesterday morning. Union stocks showed up somewhat better, with Union Oil a little stronger at the close. Provident opened a quarter of a point up, and closing quotations showed a better feeling although some shares sold at $100.25 during the latter part of the session. Amalgamated was weaker on a few sales. California Midway was down on a limited number of transactions. Associated Oil was again a feature with sales at a quarter of a point above Friday's high figure. One cause assigned for the strength in this issue is the rumor of a dividend. This rumor seems to come with periodical regularity, however, and is not substantiated by subsequent events.

National Pacific was irregular. A feature was the sale of five shares of Western Union Oil at $100.

First National Bank stock touched a new high with the sale of five shares at $750. There was scattered trading in the industrial issues.

SAN FRANCISCO EXCHANGE.

Market Is Rather Quiet, With Some Comstocks Off a Little—Tonopahs and Goldfields Improve.

[Special service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 15.—Goldfield stocks were a little firmer on a small volume of business. There were no changes in the Manhattans. Tonopahs were better. Comstocks were unchanged to two points weaker. In the outlying camps stocks were very quiet. The row between the Mexican and Union companies promises to develop into something unpleasant.

WHEAT TOUCHES NEW LOW PRICE.

THREE MINNEAPOLIS FLOUR MILLS CLOSE DOWN.

General Liquidation Prevented Rally in Grain Pit at Chicago. Belief Spreads that Europe Has Overbought Because of General War Scare.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 15.—Wheat today made a new low price record for the season. Belief that through fear of war spreading, European countries had overbought and therefore soon would diminish its imports, had much to do with breaking the market. The close was unsettled, ranging from last night's level, to 5-8@3-4 down. Corn finished a shade to 1-4 off, oats at a decline of 1-8@1-4 to 1-4@3-8, and provisions less expensive, by 2½ to 10. General liquidation on the part of holders prevented the wheat market from developing any material rally. This was partly due to primary receipts for the week being nearly double the total at the corresponding time a year ago. Besides, Minneapolis reported three flour mills closing down on account of the slowness of buyers. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equaled 285,000 bushels. Primary receipts of wheat for the day were 710,000 bushels as against 436,000 bushels a year ago. Bear leaders in corn ignored the fact that the largest holdings of the cereal are in powerful hands. Selling was encouraged by big reserves, liberal receipts, increasing stocks and above all, by a killing discount on cash deliveries. Oats weakened through dread that supplies carried over into the new crop season would prove the largest ever known. Provisions suffered because of larger receipts of holdings. Prices were also affected by weakness in grain.

Local Stock Market Activities

By Jno. O. Knight.

Associated and Amalgamated Oil stocks assumed leadership of the local market during the week, with First National Bank stock also figuring in the trading at a new high record of $750 per share. This is a gain for First National of about $50 per share in sixty days. Various rumors accompanied the advance in Associated. There was renewed talk of prospects of an approaching dividend disbursement, and another story to the effect that Associated is to figure in a large deal in oil properties that is being negotiated. Whether any of these stories have any basis in fact cannot be determined at this time, but transactions were in large volume both here and in San Francisco, with buyers apparently ready to take blocks of any size. The close yesterday was at the top, 47¼ being bid for hundred share lots. Amalgamated Oil Company succeeded in bringing in its No. 12 well in the Fullerton field during the week at a rate of 1500 barrels a day. According to official report, this company's income is now considerably in excess of its dividend requirements at the rate of one dollar per share per month or 12 per cent. on par. Last quotations on the stock yesterday were $88.50.

Both German American Savings Bank and Citizens' National figured in the week's trading at higher figures, the former going at $365 and the latter at $264.

Great Republic was quoted at from $11.50 to $12.50. Western States Life was offered at $12.50 and $9.50 was bid for International Indemnity. There was some inquiry for San Francisco Life Insurance.

Sun Drug has advanced ten points within the last fortnight to sales at $1.19. It is reported the company is preparing an aggressive campaign for the development of its business.

Sales of Los Angeles Dock & Terminal 6 per cent. bonds were made during the week at from 79 to 80. Pacific Wharf and Storage stock was easier, the market having quieted down again after the recent large purchase by C. A. Canfield and associates.

Almost the entire list of Home Building stocks were lower. Los Angeles Investment Co. sold down to $4.05 on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. Mason Opera House Home Builders was traded in around $2.02½. Southern California Home Builders at .32½. Western Building and Investment at from $1.02 to $1.04, and Home Makers around 12½. San Diego Construction Co. was offered at $1.10.

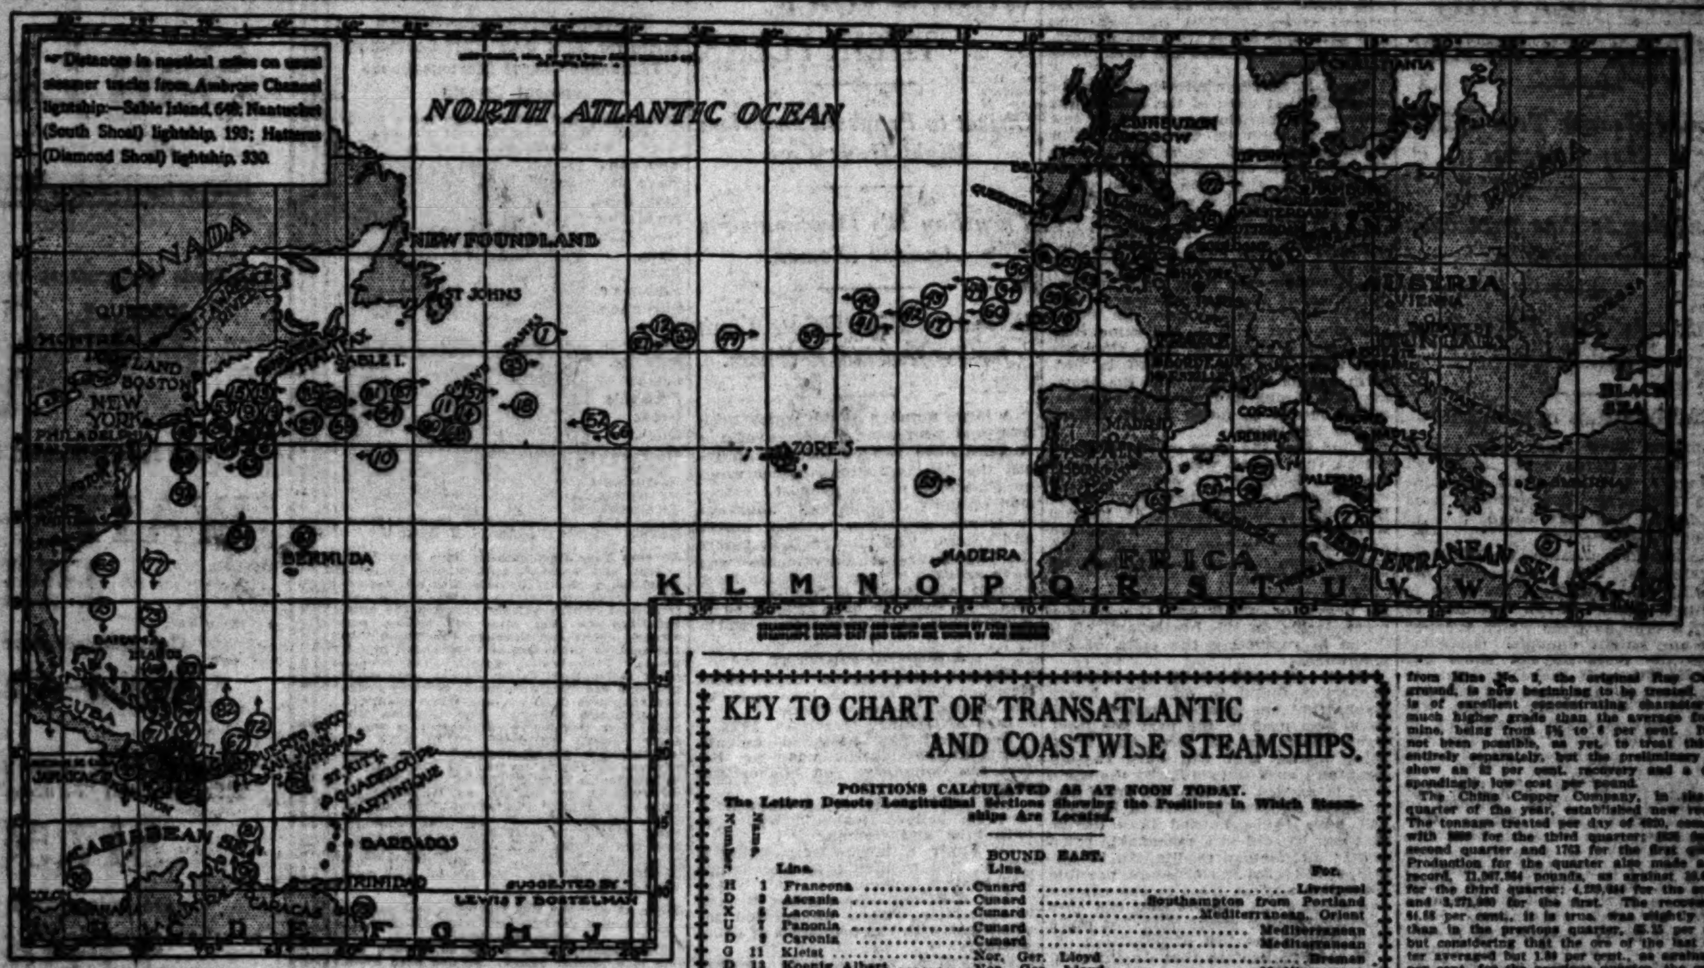
Largest Fleet of Passenger Steamships Within a Year on Atlantic Today.



Distances in nautical miles on usual steamer tracks from Ambrose Channel lightship:—Sable Island, 648; Nantucket (South Shoal) lightship, 193; Hatteras (Diamond Shoal) lightship, 330.

SUGGESTED BY LEWIS F BOSTELMAN

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, March 15.—[Special Dispatch.] Ninety-eight steamships, the largest fleet shown on the chart at any time within the last year, are indicated today, their approximate positions as of noon being represented by the numbered circles. Of the total number, sixty-five appear in the trans-Atlantic service and the others in service between this city and American tropical and sub-tropical waters.

The largest group of steamships is in an almost unbroken formation, extending from the forty-fourth meridian of west longitude, at the forty-sixth parallel of north latitude to a point off the American coast at the fortieth parallel of north latitude. Of the steamships in this group the greater number are in the trans-Atlantic service.

Of the trans-Atlantic steamships shown, seventeen are in the Mediterranean service, nine of them proceeding west and eight of them steaming east. Many especially well-known steamships, which are shown steaming toward the Mediterranean, are the Caronia, of the Cunard line, D 9, and the Cincinnati of the Hamburg-American line, L 49.

As usual in the winter season, many well-known steamships, vessels which ordinarily are in the trans-Atlantic service, are shown in special tourist service to the tropics. Among them are the Megantic, of the White Star line, E 70; the Laurentic of the same line, A 69; the Grosser Kurfuerst of the North German Lloyd line, D 72, and the Victoria Luise, and the Moltke, both of the Hamburg-American line, and the Brookline, are shown respectively, at B 65 and D 67.

Steamer Yosemite, now discharging a partial cargo of lumber for Charles McCormick Lumber Company at San Diego, will return here tomorrow and, after taking passengers and freight for San Francisco, will clear for Portland to reload.

Steamer Wellesley completed discharge of 800,000 feet of lumber for Pacific Lumber Company at Wilmington and cleared today for Eureka, direct, in ballast to load return cargo for same company.

New steamer William Chatham will go to Redondo Beach tomorrow to complete discharge cargo of poles and piling.

New York Cotton Market.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 113 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, March 15.—The cotton market, after having a range of about 20 points for the week, closed today only a few points above a week ago. There has been very little interest in the market. It seemed to be fairly well balanced between good and bad reports that apparently had only a 10 or 15 point effect, one way or the other. Each decline has been met by European and mill buying while an advance of 10 points will be met by Wall street and Southern selling, the market is evidently waiting for some incentive that will warrant a more decided move. Possibly the census report next Thursday will furnish that incentive. Severe rain storms have occurred in the cotton belt the past week, especially in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, but it can neither be said that this was a favorable or an unfavorable factor just at present, although ideal conditions could have dispensed with this precipitation. If continued a week or ten days hence it must be reckoned with as a market influence. The southern spot situation has loosened up considerably the past week, and a good demand for the raw material is no longer a rumor, but a fact. October cotton closed considerably higher than this date last year, and as it advanced 80 points from that time up to the end of July, after a crop 300,000 larger than this one, some of the same crop scares and other causes to advance the market well into the summer, may be expected. Prices are now on a basis of another record crop and history shows that this is never a certainty until late in October after the frost scare date has been passed. Many things happen in the meantime. How about short crop? No one seems to figure on that, but sentiment is overwhelmingly bearish and cotton is sold with the hope that ideal conditions for six months will prevail. The purchase of October cotton now and on any future setbacks seems advisable.

COPPER INDUSTRY.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 113 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

There was no London metal market yesterday.

As has been recently predicted, the extensive work of getting the Ray mine into shape to furnish a large tonnage has a very telling effect and while the actual progress is perhaps no greater than it has been in the past, it is becoming much more apparent to the ordinary observer. The seventh section of the mill was put into commission on the morning of January 29; it started more smoothly than any other section and has been doing better work. Several times this month the record for tonnage has been broken, on some days over 7500 tons having been milled. It is quite certain that a new record for production per day will be made this month and it is not unlikely that, although a short month, a new actual high record will be reached, about 4,000,000 pounds being produced. A better average grade of ore is being treated, which means a higher recovery and, consequently, a lower cost per pound. The ore from Mine No. 1, the original Ray Central ground, is now beginning to be treated. This is of excellent concentrating character and much higher grade than the average for the mine, being from 5½ to 6 per cent. It has not been possible, as yet, to treat this ore entirely separately, but the preliminary tests show an 82 per cent. recovery and a correspondingly low cost per pound.

The China Copper Company, in the last quarter of the year, established new records. The tonnage treated per day of 4020, compared with 3600 for the third quarter; 2626 for the second quarter and 1763 for the first quarter. Production for the quarter also made a new record, 11,067,384 pounds, as against 10,602,679 for the third quarter; 4,259,944 for the second and 3,271,500 for the first. The recovery of 64.88 per cent., it is true, was slightly lower than in the previous quarter, 65.15 per cent., but considering that the ore of the last quarter averaged but 1.89 per cent., as against 1.98 per cent. for the previous quarter, the milling efficiency was really decidedly greater. Two conditions made for a higher cost and smaller net profits than in the previous quarter: first, the shovels operating on stripping have been encountering more low grade material as the outside stripping lines were approached, and in connection excavation between adjoining ore bodies. Still, this material was too good to throw away, and was accordingly put through the mill. Second, the price of copper fell off sharply. This was further accentuated, as far as the figures of earnings were concerned, by marking all copper down to very conservative figures.

The Braden Copper Company produced 1,686,000 pounds copper in February. Owing to a partial shutdown the smelter production totaled only about 1,358,000 pounds. Recovery on the ore treated by the mineral separation process averaged 75 per cent.

Braden Copper Mines Company management is understood to have under contemplation the doubling of mill capacity from 2000 to 4000 tons of ore daily. Such additions would involve less cost in the neighborhood of $250,000 or $300,000. The old mill showed a recovery of about 70 per cent., the Mineral Separation Company plant about 75 per cent., and the new mill about 67 per cent. The Mineral Separation plant is expected eventually to return 85 per cent. recovery—at least such was understood the Braden management by the owners of this process. The Braden smelter has not fully responded to expectations and has been referred to in well informed quarters as the property's drawback. The mine is far ahead of the mill, and could produce sufficient ore to operate a larger plant, but thus far the mill has not reached capacity of 2000 tons daily.

BOSTON COPPER MARKET.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building, Los Angeles.]

BOSTON, March 15.—There was no change in local market today. The volume of business was very small. Everyone has adopted a waiting attitude. On the whole, however, the position of the market looks strong in spite of all bad news of the past six weeks, including politics, war reports and tight money. The bears have failed to bring out any new liquidation and the level of prices is practically unchanged. It is understood that there is a scarcity of offerings and it is believed that the next change will be a substantial rally.

New York Curb Stocks.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 113 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, March 15.—Prices on the curb were heavy with trading active in spots. United Cigar Stores was weak, selling around 90. Oil shares were dull and practically unchanged. Coppers were quiet. Boston coppers opened nominally at last night's closing prices. Business was very quiet and there was an odd-lot market. It closed dull and uninteresting.

Vanquishing Frosts.

GROVE HEATING ONLY SOLUTION.

Orange Grower Tells of His Experiments.

Smudging Is Poor Protection Against Cold.

Smoke Injures Both Fruit and Trees.

BY CHARLES B. FULLER.

Sufficient time has now passed since the extreme cold nights of January 5, 6, 7 and 8, to determine more accurately the damage from the freeze that has extended over the entire citrus belt of California.

The loss in fruit alone to California growers has been enormous, not counting the setback to the trees in localities which cannot produce as heavy a crop as trees which escaped with only slight damage. In some places the trees do not show any effect at all from the cold, while in other localities the trees are stripped of their entire foliage, which will retard their strength in growing to maturity the coming crop and the fruit will be undersized, but no doubt will be of good quality.

The freeze of this and last year covered such a great amount of territory that some places that escaped last year were hit hard this year and those that were hit so hard last year are in the best condition at this time, so I think we can safely say that a frostless belt in California cannot be safely guaranteed.

The one great question that is confronting the orange and lemon grower of California today is, "Can I protect the crop from frost and save the trees from its damaging effect?" I can answer this question in this way. Being a grower myself, and having lost last year a large crop of fruit, and not believing that such a thing would be repeated in the year following, I worked along without protection, and again lost my crop the night of January 5. I had estimated the crop at 25,000 boxes of fruit.

I at once made careful investigation of methods used in heating orchards and worked hard during the four nights following, with good results.

EXPLODES THEORY.

The old method employed by the growers, who followed the advice of men of high standing in horticultural matters to get good results, was to produce from their fire pots a heavy smoke, or smudge, which would make a blanket of smoke over the groves, which would retain the heat and keep it inside the orchard. According to my tests, wherever I found great quantities of smoke, I found less heat and poor results.

In some orchards I made tests with what is called the "smudge pot." I find frozen fruit throughout the grove and a bad effect on the trees and fruit from escaping smoke and soot.

I found the best results from the burning of crude oil in a heater which seemed to turn the smoke to a gas and burn the gas through a chimney with a clear white smokeless flame, which raised the temperature from eighteen degrees outside the orchard to 29½ degrees inside the orchard, with a heater burning to every other tree in the grove.

I find that all the fruit in this grove next to the heaters is in excellent condition and the fruit in places where the heaters were not burning is slightly damaged. My conclusion is that had one heater been placed to each tree in this grove, every orange and lemon in it would at this time be absolutely free from frost and could be guaranteed as such.

The groves all around this one I mention contain seriously damaged fruit and trees. These groves, however, were not protected from the frost.

COST AND SAVING.

The expense of protection on my grove, properly equipped with one heater to a tree and the same amount of oil used to each heater as in the grove above mentioned, would have been $4400, which would have resulted in the saving of 25,000 boxes of fruit, which, in the present circumstances, would be called very cheap insurance.

The cost of insurance for the ensuing year, deducting the first cost of the heaters, will be $2000, if we have to use the same amount of oil and fire the heaters the same number of hours as was the case this year. On the other hand, if we do not have any freeze, the cost will be only the labor of placing the heaters in their places in the grove and their replacement in the storehouse, which will be practically nothing.

After traveling over the entire citrus districts, I have not heard a grower speak unfavorably of orchard heating, the only question being as to which is the best appliance to install in the orchards.

The subject of the care of damaged orchards is a very vital question and as conditions are so different in groves one must make a study of his own place to accomplish the best results.

The freeze having been so general in the last two years and the subject of frost protection so much talked of throughout the State, the result will be in the near future that people, looking over our great producing sections, seeing in the citrus groves the most dreaded of all things, appliances to prevent frost damage, will be glad to know that California has adopted a system of orchard heating so practical that the growing of the orange and lemon is safe in every place and that the matter of location will be only where one would rather live and he will be safe, knowing that whatever he wishes to raise can be matured and marketed without damage from cold.

The California orange and lemon, grown under climatic conditions existing here, mature in such shape that they carry in shipping longer and reach far-off markets in better condition than fruit of their kind grown in any other part of the world.

EXPENSE OFFSET.

By practical and systematic heating of the orchards, all fruit can be shipped from California free from frost injury to all markets, sold to such good advantage that the returns to the grower will be so much more than under the present conditions, that the cost of heating and frost protection will be easily offset by the increased selling price.

The California auction, which was to have been in operation here at this time, received its setback on account of the freeze, with many eastern representatives of large produce firms on the ground at the time. We are assured that the California auction will be here in another year, which will result in many eastern buyers paying cash for fruit in California, and with only slight frost the protected groves will receive the best prices for the fruit.

Trees in places where the frost was so severe that most of the foliage was lost are at this time putting out new growth to such an extent that it is going to be a hard proposition to keep the new fruit coming at this time in blossoms on the trees so the effect from the coming hot weather will not drop the crop that the trees are trying so hard to hold. In normal years a few very warm days as late as September will make a large shrinkage in the maturing crop from what is commonly called the September drop that a tree which has to grow its leaves and the fruit buds at the same time will suffer a great deal more than the one with only one function to perform at this critical time in the growing of a strong and vigorous blossom, which means so much in the setting of the new fruit.

I find that the trees on my orchard where the leaves were unhurt from the cold weather are coming out in such shape that the next crop under favorable conditions will be normal while the trees defoliated by the cold are blooming in such shape that the coming crop cannot possibly hold on the tree and reach maturity.

The expense of orchard heating will be heavy or small and the grower must decide on the heater and oil it burns in regulating the price of his insurance.

Crude oil contains all the heating properties found in oil. The heavy smoke that has escaped from the various pots used in the past has injurious effects on the trees and fruit. Some heater that will burn the oil clean and burn the smoke at the same time is needed. Crude oil, being the cheapest oil used in orchard heating, will have to be burned in a heater that can be sold at a reasonable price and if satisfactory results can be obtained will give the cheapest possible insurance against frost to the grower and replace the heaters that can only burn the higher grade oils, that more than double the cost of operation.

There are heaters that do this and the orange grower must decide on the most economical heater as it will mean a great saving to him at the end of the year's work.

MUCH "BUNK," SAYS "BEE."

Local Impresario Asserts Real Music Lovers Are Few and of Little Class in This City.

"Commercialism is the meal ticket for modern genius." This is the statement made yesterday afternoon by L. E. Behymer at the goodfellowship luncheon at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. "Bee" is a member of the club, but this was his first appearance at one of the luncheons and he was called upon by Chairman Haldeman to present his views on "Uplifting Art." "You can sum it up in a word of four letters," continued the Oscar Hammerstein of Los Angeles, "and that word is 'bunk.' "

Behymer reviewed the past twenty-seven years of music in this city and told amusingly of the securing of subscriptions for the first appearance here of Theodore Thomas and his opera company at the old Hazard Pavilion.

"Then, as now," he said, "publicity brought out the hundred. If Mrs. Jones's name was in the paper as a patroness because her husband had 'come through,' woe betide Mr. Brown if he also had not subscribed, and this insured the insertion of Mrs. Brown's name in the same list.

"It's the same today. The minimum of those who attend grand opera are music lovers, the maximum are those who wish to parade their 'rocks' and buzz wagons.' Calls like these were frequent: 'Hello, is this Mr. Behymer? Is it Thais or Mary Garden who sings in 'Natoma' tonight?'

"Nowadays you can't do a thing small in Los Angeles without being a piker. I was one of the thirty-two burglars who went to Rochester and got the Shrine convention for Los Angeles. We weren't entitled to it, but we got it, and the extra receipts here Shrine week were a million and a quarter dollars."

Previous to Behymer's address the boys had sung the new song, "I Love You California." Speaking of this, "Bee" said: "Mary Garden will take that song and California and Los Angeles famous because she thinks that the boys of Los Angeles are a bully bunch.

"Yet for the most part our musical pretenses are all bunk. We are rated as fifth musically in this country and yet we have done nothing to deserve the place. Right in our own music rooms we have the most wonderful instrumental records of Indian music that were ever made and yet they have never been heard locally. We sell more cheap records here than are sold in any other city in the country.

"To show you how they appreciate music in some of the eastern cities, I but cite the fact that the Chicago Athletic Association bought the entire Chicago Grand Opera Company for a night, to entertain the members' wives and sweethearts."

Two members of the New York Athletic Club were present as specially invited guests of Clarence Rundel, chairman of this week's luncheon committee. They are Dr. W. B. Gifford and Dr. C. C. Howard. Dr. Howard told the L.A.A.C. boys of some of the big times the "Huckleberrys" of N.Y.A.C. have, just by way of keeping Broadway on the map.

TOBACCONIST TALKS.

Philosopher Behind Showcase Gives Observations—Habit Worse in This Climate—Pipes on Increase.

What is the maximum number of cigars that can be consumed in one day by a human smokestack? There are different views concerning this important question. A curious-minded person went up and down Spring street yesterday afternoon and questioned tobacconists on this point. It was agreed that no man could smoke more than twenty-five cigars a day unless he stayed up at night to keep the fire agoing. The cigar stand dealers say that many men smoke fifteen to twenty cigars a day, but generally their wives do not know it. They are not always 5-centers, either, but the 10-cent or two-for-a-quarter kind.

"And do you know that the tendency is to smoke more in this country than in the East," one of the cigar stand owners said, rolling out the "bones." "When I was in Philadelphia I seldom smoked more than ten or a dozen cigars a day, but out here it takes about twenty to satisfy me. Must be the climate, some way.

"There is another thing I've observed. Men smoke more on bright, sunny days than on cloudy ones. The reason? Why, on sunny days their lips get dry and they feel like they just must have a smoke to relieve the situation. And here's more news of the trade: Pipes are increasing in popularity and cigarettes, except with the Mexicans, are slightly on the decline. Chewing, too, is not so popular as it once was because of the popular disfavor against it."

For Fair Play.

WOMEN VOICE THEIR PLEAS.

Object to Proposed Injurious Eight-Hour Law.

They Say It's Discrimination Against Women.

Object to Eight-Hour Limit for Professional Workers.

A large number of the young business and professional women of Los Angeles have banded together to resist the discrimination against women embodied in the proposed extension of the California eight-hour law to women-executives, woman nurses and others. The bills are now before the Legislature at Sacramento and have aroused intense opposition from women who would suffer by them. The bills seem to have originated in labor union jealousy of women workers.

A SIGNED PROTEST.

The following signed communication has been sent to legislators by Los Angeles women workers:

LOS ANGELES, March 15, 1913.

Dear Sir: The proposed amendments to the eight-hour law are before the Committee on Labor and Capital.

We are in favor of an eight hour law, but believe it should apply to both men and women.

To apply a law to women that is not applied to men is a discrimination against women.

Any discrimination against women is absolutely unfair, unjust and inconsistent with the principles of equal suffrage.

Occupations now open to women are too much restricted, and to extend the eight-hour law to include women not now affected by it, will still further narrow the field in which women may seek employment.

The women wage-earners who are now filling important and responsible positions will have to seek employment in industries that are already overcrowded.

Such a law will not only deprive the capable, ambitious woman of the hope of advancement, but it will make the condition of her less-fortunate sisters still worse by forcing the better-equipped and more competent woman into competition with those who are now doing the lower-grade work.

We would have no objection to the proposed bill as it stands, if it were applied to men engaged in the same kind of work as are the women who will be affected by it.

While the advocates of this measure are claiming it is for the purpose of benefitting women, it will, in fact, have the opposite effect. Any restriction which applies only to women engaged in industrial and commercial work, must have the effect of lessening their ability to compete with men, for where women are doing the same kind of work as men they cannot escape competing with them.

But if an eight-hour law applying to both men and women is impossible at this time, at least remove some of the restrictions placed upon them by excluding women doing trained work, such as secretaries, bookkeepers, stenographers, cashiers, women in control of a business, or acting as executive heads of a branch of business, many of whom are financially interested in the business.

ANOTHER LETTER.

A clever business worker of this city has addressed the following to a member of the State Senate:

LOS ANGELES, March 13.

Senator McDonald, Sacramento, Cal.

Dear Sir: I understand that you have made the assertion that the objections the business women are making to your bill are fancied grievances, and that things will adjust themselves. Do you wish me to send you ten girls, upon whom to my own knowledge the present law has worked a hardship, and some have lost positions?

If your, or any of the other proposed eight-hour laws goes through, it will hamper at least 2000 women in this city, and a great number will lose their positions. To explain what I mean by hampering—where girls are only working seven hours daily and Saturday afternoon off, but are required to work ten, twelve and fourteen hours for a few days four or five times a year, in justice to their employer, don't you think they ought to have the right to stay? Do you think employers want employees in executive positions, who, while well fitted have not the power to attend to business when these emergencies arise. Girls in our positions usually get one or two weeks' vacation with salary, do you not think that we are pretty well paid for any time we have put in over the eight hours?

Women in executive positions cannot be gauged by hours. Have you heard of any woman dying from overmental activity?

Do you put the railroads and banks under the same class of legislation? No, you do not. How can you legislate, placing girls in factories, etc., with girls in business and executive positions?

Personally, I think this drastic law is the selfish desire of one class of labor to legislate against another. I mean the jealousies exhibited by the union labor classes over the encroachment of women and girls on positions formerly held by men. Is this not class distinction of the highest order?

If we were not in an equal suffrage State, I would not expect our Senators to give this side of the question as much fairness as I do.

Be fair! I appeal to your fairness as an American citizen in an equal suffrage State, to remember that a large army of women wage earners will suffer intensely if you do not make some provision in your bill for our protection. We are thankful for equal suffrage, which gave us equal opportunity, but please do not take our equal rights away from us.

AMBITIOUS GIRL HIKERS.

Plan to Walk From Here to San Francisco—Mayor to Start Them on Their Way Tomorrow.

Carrying a message from the Los Angeles Ad Club to the San Francisco Club a message aimed to advertise the wonders of California outdoors, Miss Grace L. Brown and Miss Margaret Scarborough, Los Angeles girls, will leave the lobby of the Alexandria Hotel at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning to walk up the Coast to the Bay City.

The two girls will be wished a pleasant journey by Mayor Alexander, spokesman of the occasion, who will also present them with huge bouquets of flowers. Members of the Ad Club and many others will witness the start of the 500-mile jaunt.

Both the young women are experienced "hikers" and familiar with the difficulties they may encounter. They plan to walk eighteen miles a day, completing the journey by easy stages rather than attempt any "record."

At every hamlet and city where they stop they will be officially received, by prior arrangement, and they expect their long tramp to do much to attract country-wide attention to California climate and its joys for the pedestrian as well as motorist. The young women are university graduates and have many friends here.

he most remarkable series of ations in downtown real estate e history of Los Angeles came a whirlwind conclusion yesterday the Main-Broadway-Hill Street Company, of which Louis is president, sold to a quartette [illegible] the four remaining lots the Huntington block, bounded by Twelfth, Main and Hill and which only a little over ago was transferred bodily by Huntington to the syndicate for a consideration of $3,000,- The great unimproved prop- at the edge of the business dis- subdivided by its pur- into forty-four lots, has to realize the enormous to- $4,046,300, making the volume of business transacted in the block in less than two weeks in excess of $7,000,000, this figure including the syndicate's purchase price. The profits of the resale of the property have aggregated over $1,000,300.

Yesterday's buyers are reported by Robert Marsh & Co. and R. A. Rowan & Co., the brokers who have swung the sensational deals in the former Huntington property in their entirety, as follows:

W. T. Collins of the Collins Millinery Company and Walter R. Wheat, a local oil operator, bought 72x120 feet at the northwest corner of Twelfth and Broadway for a given consideration of $180,000. Carlos G. Closson and Dr. L. M. Closson, recently from British Columbia, bought fifty feet on Broadway, near Twelfth, for $87,500, Richard M. Bishop assisting in the handling of the deal. M. A. Richardson bought fifty feet adjoining the southwest corner of Eleventh and Main for $90,000. J. F. Bishop paid a given price of $87,500 for fifty feet on Main, half way between Eleventh and Twelfth. The total consideration involved in the four sales was reported at $445,000.

FORMER PURCHASES.

The largest individual purchase in the block has been that of William Randolph Hearst, who paid approximately $1,000,000 for a parcel of land extending from Hill to Broadway and having frontages of 323 feet on each of these thoroughfares south of Eleventh street. A New York architect will at once begin the preparation of plans for the handsome structure which is to be erected at the Eleventh-and-Broadway corner of the purchase for the Los Angeles Examiner.

The repurchase by H. E. Huntington of the northwest corner of Twelfth and Main, 173x119 feet, for $325,000, was reported in last Wednesday's Times. Huntington plans the early erection on the site of a building which is to house the corporations with which the railway magnate is identified and plans for which were drawn about a year ago by Myron Hunt. A perspective of this structure has already appeared exclusively in The Times.

Other investors in the block, with the amount of their investment, follow: F. W. Braun, $288,315; I. H. Stratton, $155,000; Frank M. Boswell, $87,535; J. Harvey McCarthy, $82,535. Alex Morphy, $82,535; I. H. Norton, $70,000; Henry Newmark, $65,300; Meyer Lissner, $65,000; Charles G. Andrews and W. W. Mines, $65,000; V. J. Rowan, $77,500; A. L. Schwarz, $82,500; Harry Gray, $155,300; J. Brummett, $155,-; Schwarz Land, Building and Investment Company, $87,500; C. Antoinette Lichtenberger, Marie M. Lichtenberger and Isabel D. Meyer, $87,500; W. M. Loftus, $82,500; P. Newmark, $77,500; Frank B. Ranger, $77,500; Dr. W. W. Hitchcock, $82,500; Charles P. Grogan, $82,500; A. Sieroty, $82,300; Charles H. Sharp, $182,000.

In addition to Hearst and Huntington, I. H. Norton and W. T. Collins have announced their intention of improving their purchases with substantial, modern buildings. Others, it is stated by the brokers, will soon begin building operations.

Workmen on Friday attacked the high board fence which extends along the Hill-street frontage of the block and it is expected that the old Childs house at Eleventh and Main will be removed with two weeks. The entire property is to be cleared and ready for the projected street and alley improvements within the next thirty days.

The contract for the cutting of Broadway through the block from Eleventh to Twelfth street will be awarded next Thursday and the work itself will be rushed. The arrangements for cutting the same thoroughfare through from Tenth to Eleventh to make the street continuous from Twelfth to the Broadway tunnel are said by those directly interested to be progressing.

TO OPEN BRANCHES.

The growth of the country lands department of the Janss Investment Company, established a year ago, has necessitated a reorganization of that branch of the Janss activities. By the change Howell W. McIntire becomes manager and under his direction branch agencies will be opened to handle ranch and country properties in the five counties of Southern California.

GRADING FOR NEW ROAD COMPLETED.

LINE TO CRESCENTA SECTION TAKING SHAPE.

Bridge Over Verdugo Creek Near Completion—Cars to Be Running in April—New Banking House Handsome Structure—Street Work Going Ahead.

GLENDALE, March 15.—All grading for the extension and improvement of the Glendale and Eagle Rock Railway, which will connect Montrose and the La Crescenta district with this city, was completed yesterday and it is expected that the laying of ties and rails will begin Monday. The line is to be laid with broad-gauge ties and eighty-pound rails. When traffic warrants, the gauge which for the present will be narrow, will be standardized so that cars may run directly from Montrose to the Pacific Electric station in Los Angeles.

The last bridge over Verdugo Creek, one of the most expensive parts of the construction work, will be completed within ten days, according to engineers, and the car line will be in operation as far as the south line of the Sparr ranch by April 5. Work on the transformer station is being rushed at Montrose.

In the handsome three-story brick and steel frame structure which is being erected by the First National Bank of Glendale, at the corner of Brand boulevard and Broadway, this city will boast one of the finest banking houses in a place of this size in the Southwest. The building, which was planned by Tuttle & Hopkins of Los Angeles, is designed along classical lines and is faced with white enamel brick. It occupies a ground area of 36x100 feet.

The bank will occupy the entire first floor of the building, the second and third stories being given over to offices. The banking quarters will have tile floors, marble wainscoting and mahogany and marble fixtures. Two-story reinforced concrete vaults will be installed. The building complete will represent a cost of about $35,000.

The bank has in the past year entirely outgrown its present quarters, which are in the future to be made use of for a savings bank department. The officers of the institution are: W. W. Lee, president; M. P. Harrison, vice-president; Ed M. Lee, cashier, and H. E. Francy, assistant cashier. Others than the officers who are enrolled in the directorate are: W. H. Holliday of Los Angeles, and F. U. Emery and D. Griswold of Glendale.

Peter L. Ferry has been awarded the contract for the improvement of Doran, Dryden and Campbell streets, the work to be started at once and rushed to completion. The improvements will consist of grading, macadamizing, curbing and sidewalking.

J. R. Mitchell has sold his house and lot on the corner of Louise and Ninth streets, to W. S. Jackson, recently of the East.

NEW VERMONT SQUARE.

Sales during the week in New Vermont Square are reported by the Southwest Land Company as follows: Mrs. Emma Griesemer, lot on Santa Barbara, between Western and St. Andrews, $1425; F. L. McDonald, Forty-second place, between Western and St. Andrews, $1175; Frank Newman, Forty-third street, between St. Andrews and Gramercy, $1175; Robert W. Tanner, Santa Barbara, between Western and St. Andrews, $1550; Mrs. Eva M. Tarbell, Western, between Forty-first street and Forty-first drive, $1900; J. J. Holderman, Santa Barbara, between Gramercy and Arlington, $1200; Mrs. Bird Jacobs Davidson, Santa Barbara, between Gramercy and Arlington, $1275; Alexander Crew Estate Company, Forty-first place, between Gramercy and Arlington, $1175, and Samuel MacCorkell, Forty-first place, between St. Andrews and Gramercy, $1175.

NEW LINE SURVEYED.

A survey has been completed by the Los Angeles Pacific Railway Company for an extension of the Franklin-avenue line through Beachwood Park, Hollywood, to connect with the present Brush Canyon line by loop. This proposed line will open up a new scenic foothill route and will provide transportation for many foothill residents. Following the announcement of this survey the Albert H. Beach Company announces plans for the expenditure of $150,000 in improvements for Beachwood to the summit of Mt. Cahuenga, which has been practically inaccessible for lack of trails or motor roads. Approximately 500 acres of canyon and hill side sites are to be developed under the enlarged plans of the company.

GLENDALE PARK.

Glendale Park, a new residential subdivision in West Glendale, was formally placed on the market last Saturday. The tract immediately adjoins the Kenilworth tract. The Edwards & Wildey Company, owners and agents, report the following Glendale Park sales: P. J. Garrity, 50x150 feet, Ridgeway and Fair Oaks, $550; E. G. Carpenter, lot on First street, $350; K. L. Salt, lot on First street, $400; J. B. Eastman, lot on Alexandria street, $375; Mrs. Estelle D. Rosa, lot on Myrtle avenue, $350; C. L. Bullard, 100x132 feet on Myrtle avenue, $750; R. T. Greer, 92x165 feet on Fair Oaks avenue, $850; Gordon G. Hair, lot on Alexandria, $425. Kenilworth Tract sales are reported as follows: A. A. Tayler, lot on Burchett street, $575; Alice E. Jacobs, lot on Pioneer drive, $575; Mrs. Estelle D. Rosa, lot on Burchett street, $575; W. J. Thomas, lot on Myrtle street, $575; Mary Taylor Gibilyn, 106x245 feet at Sycamore and Alexandria, with six-room house, $4750.

EXTENSIVE PLANTING.

One thousand acres of citrus land will be planted at Fontana this spring by Thomas D. Campbell & Company, the work commencing tomorrow. A large extra force of men will be employed from now until late in the summer planting five, ten and twenty-acre groves in oranges, lemons and grapefruit. When this big job is completed a total of about 3500 acres will be under cultivation, according to officials of the company. Arrangements have been made with the Santa Fe Railroad to run special semi-weekly excursions to the Fontana groves between March 15 and April 15.

NEW FIRM IN FIELD.

J. M. Dunn, Walter C. Stickney and Edwin R. Post, real estate dealers from Spokane, Wash., have opened offices at 911 Story building, under the firm name of Dunn-Stickney-Post. The firm will make a specialty of low priced British Columbia farm lands, and will conduct a general real estate business.

Fine Improvement for West Sixteenth Street.

Structure to Contain Stores and Living Suites.

Other Important Projects Taking Shape.

The advance of West Sixteenth street as a business and semi-business thoroughfare is evidenced in the plan of Morris Cohn, one of the directors of the Central and Pacific Improvement Corporation, to erect at the northeast corner of Sixteenth and Courtland one of the largest and most modern store and apartment structures yet projected in Los Angeles. Cohn was formerly associated with R. H. Raphael, president of the same corporation, in the West Sixteenth enterprise, but announced yesterday that he had taken over the control of the property. Plans for the contemplated improvement are being prepared by E. H. Dorr.

The structure planned will be four stories in height and will cost approximately $190,000. It will cover a ground space of 130x181 feet and will be of steel frame and brick construction. The exterior will be handsomely faced with pressed brick, the trim being of stone and terra cotta. Architecturally the structure will be one of the most attractive of its type in the city.

The first story will be divided into eight store rooms for commercial purposes, and will contain also a large and elaborately-finished entrance lobby, a sitting-room, writing-room, parlor, dining-room, ballroom, billiard-room and kitchen. The three upper floors will contain 140 rooms, divided into two and three-room apartments. On the second floor the architect has planned a large open court, the floor of which will be converted into an open-air terrace and garden. At the end of the court on each floor will be provided a lounging room for the general use of the guests.

The building will be provided with steam heat, hot and cold water, vacuum cleaning, elevator service and other conveniences and will have the latest built-in effects. The baths will be in tile.

OTHER IMPROVEMENTS.

Among other apartment-house and hotel plans now taking shape may be mentioned the following:

A Thrilling Tale.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL CONFESSION OF DYNAMITER M'MANIGAL.

Whole Narrative of Frightful Series of Crimes Instigated by the Ironworkers' Union Put into Book Form by Ortie. Implicates Gompers in Guilty Knowledge.

IN all probability through with his duties as a witness for the State and Federal authorities, Ortie E. McManigal, associate of J. B. McNamara and for years a member of the "dynamite crew" of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, has been allowed to make public in book form his confession of guilt. He tells in a graphic and circumstantial way the story of various crimes committed at the instigation of President Ryan and former Secretary McNamara of the Structural Ironworkers' Union.

McManigal declares, in his interesting book just published in Los Angeles, that Sam Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, said to the McNamaras on the occasion of his visit to the County Jail: "Stand pat, boys, or we will all be ruined." This statement was overheard by witnesses, says McManigal.

THE NEWS.

He starts his story by telling how the news of the murder of a score of employees of The Times was received in Indianapolis by J. J. McNamara, who "loaned" his brother to the San Francisco labor union bosses.

He states as follows: "The morning papers of October 1, 1910, carried the news of the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times Building. Twenty persons were killed, caught like rats in a trap, as they were laboring as free American citizens to provide for their families. Some of them were burned to death. Others were killed instantly by the explosion; others leaped from windows and lingered for days before the tender mercy of the grave, kinder than the heart of the man who had caused their suffering, relieved their pain.

"I was overwhelmed with a sense of doom and naturally I sought the mind which had mastered mine and was guiding it. I went to the office of J. J. McNamara and found him cheerfully reading the details of the horror.

"'Seen the morning papers?' he asked with a smile.

"'It's about as bad as it can get,' I replied, soberly. 'Did J. B. do that?'

"'I shouldn't be surprised if he did,' J. J. replied.

"'But think of the people,' I said.

"'That's all right. This will make them sit up and take notice, and that's what J. B. went out to the Coast to do.'

"For a moment there was silence between us and then he said:

"'I don't know that I like this mixing in with other unions. That wild San Francisco bunch did this and it seems to me that if we take care of our own line of work we'll have our hands full. But it sure did shake things up.'

"I was too blue to talk further about it, and J. J. began talking of work for me to do and told me that he had a letter from F. C. Webb in New York, referring to a depot which the Phoenix Bridge Company was erecting for the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Worcester, Mass. Webb said that Roxy Kline was superintendent of the work and that he thought J. B. or me would handle it better. McNamara said he wanted an immediate echo in the East of the noise in the West and told me to take eight quarts of glycerine and get Worcester as soon as possible. I arrived there on October 3 and set the blast on Sunday night, October 6. One was put under a derrick car and one on the end of a girder on an overhead street crossing. It went off at midnight and was highly successful.

"I went to Boston, remained there a few hours and traveled through Worcester that morning to Springfield, where I had orders to look over the municipal group of buildings and report as to whether it was worth an explosion at that time. I stopped in Springfield at the Hinckley Hotel as William King. That same evening I arrived in New York to find Webb, but he was out of town. The next morning I went to Pittsburgh, where I bought some more clocks and spent the night at the St. Charles Hotel as J. W. McGraw. I arrived in Indianapolis on October 15.

"J. J. McNamara and I again discussed the Times Building explosion. J. J. said he had learned that J. B. had caused the destruction and that he was 200 miles from Los Angeles when it went off.

"'He hid in San Francisco two days and then got to cover elsewhere,' said J. J.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Later in his confession McManigal tells how J. B. tried, as he believes, to kill him when they were out in the woods. Ortie says:

"On November 4, J. B. McNamara came to Chicago and told me he had an explosion in sight. I told him I was going hunting on Monday and hated to give it up. He asked me many details of the trip and finally asked if the party could stand an addition of one man. Louis Zeiss, a brother of my old roommate, Fred Zeiss, Willie and Charles Lawrence and Marion Sharp were going with me and I said I supposed they would not care.

"J. J. then told me that he wanted J. B. to go to the woods and hide for awhile. We did not know then that Burns was after us and never learned of it until we read it in a magazine article some time later.

"J. B. has changed so much his own sister did not know him," said J. J. "You and J. B. stay up there until the close of the hunting season no matter what the others do. J. B. calls himself Frank Sullivan, and for heaven's sake don't make a slip on his name. When you get to the woods and are settled send me a note. Our old friend the carpenter is looking well, and address it to J. J. Sandusky, P. O. Box 1, Indianapolis. Then I'll know you are all right in the woods.

"That night Hockin called me on the telephone and asked me if I had seen the 'queer guy,' meaning J. B. At that time there was some suspicion that J. B.'s mind had become unbalanced. He urged me to stand pat if I met anybody in the woods, a warning which had a great deal of significance, had I but known it, as we were followed by Burns detectives into the woods and kept under watch during our entire stay. The detectives passed as hunters and J. B. even posed for photographs for them.

"We got to Kenosha on Sunday, November 5, and before breakfast J. B. called me on the phone at Sharp's house. He was at the Eikelman Hotel. Our party went down town and met him and I narrowly checked myself introducing him as Brice, by which name I almost always called him. We had several drinks and J. B. was rapidly getting drunk.

"When I went with J. B. to get a hunting license for him, a most accurate description of him was taken. This made him uneasy and suspicious. He had grounds for uneasiness but not for suspicion, as a number of hunters are killed in that country every year by being mistaken for deer in the woods, and the authorities are careful in issuing licenses.

"ZIP!"

"On November 7 we made camp five miles southeast of Conover, Wis. On November 9 I was hunting alone in the woods when I heard a pistol shot and the zip of a bullet as it whistled by my ear. I mounted a stump and saw J. B. a hundred yards down a hillside. I suspected from the first that he was trying to kill me and I have never changed my mind. I went down to him and asked him what he was shooting at. He said:

"'A rabbit.'

"The ground was covered with snow and I found no tracks. I taxed him with trying to kill me and he admitted he had shot to scare me.

"We sat down on a log, silently for some time, when suddenly he burst out:

"'If ever they catch me they'll take me back to Los Angeles and hang me without a trial. I never expected to kill so many people.'

"He said he got to San Francisco four days after leaving me at Chicago. E. A. Clancy, international first vice-president of the Bridgemen's Union, introduced him to M. A. Schmidt and Dave Caplan.

"Schmidt had an infernal machine for setting houses on fire which was somewhat similar to the one I was using. The release of the alarm shot a bolt through a small bottle contained within a can and broke it. The mixture of the liquids in bottle and can produced a flame. He said a friend of Olaf Tveitmoe had provided the chemicals. This was the first I ever head of Tveitmoe of San Francisco, secretary-treasurer of the State Buildings Trades Council.

"J. B. said the 'Coast bunch' was lavish with money and that he had been given $3000 in three months. He got it $500 at a time.

"He told me of setting explosions at Seattle and Oakland as well as of the Times affair. Schmidt and Caplan helped him get the nitrogelatine, 80 per cent. strong, from the Giant Powder Works at Giant.

"'Tveitmoe ordered Schmidt, Caplan and me to look over The Times,' said J. B. 'Schmidt picked up a woman in San Francisco so I insisted that he stay there. I registered at two hotels. I lived at the Baltimore, on Fifth street, and made the machines at the other, the name of which I don't remember. I set twenty pounds of nitrogelatine attached to a machine in the Times Building, among some ink barrels. The whole shot was in a suit case. I've seen the place where I set it called Ink Alley in the newspapers since. It was [illegible] o'clock the next morning [illegible]

"'Then I went to the [illegible] Harrison Gray Otis [illegible] charge under his window [illegible] went to the home of F. J. [illegible] laar, secretary of the [illegible] Manufacturers' Association [illegible] ization of the open-shop [illegible] Angeles, and placed [illegible] ready to explode under [illegible]

"'After setting them I [illegible] for San Francisco and was [illegible] away when the explosion [illegible] The Times bomb was the [illegible] go off.

"'I remained in San [illegible] days. Caplan and I [illegible] containing four machines [illegible] Francisco Bay as I was [illegible] to take a train east. I [illegible] a claim check and told [illegible] and get a suit case which [illegible] in the Ferry building [illegible] contained one of Schmidt's [illegible] some fuse and three copies [illegible] Francisco Bulletin, dated [illegible] 1, 2, and 3, containing [illegible] The Times explosion. [illegible] to be thrown into the bay.'

"Caplan did not do [illegible] weeks later the case [illegible] the parcel room [illegible] things J. B. described [illegible] This was the first clue [illegible] secured connecting J. B. [illegible] with the Times Building [illegible] was only a few days [illegible] shadows on J. B.'s [illegible] rested him the moment [illegible] propitious. The detective [illegible] in this case was, to my [illegible] brilliant that has ever [illegible] attention of the American [illegible]

CIRCUMSTANTIAL.

"After J. B. told me the [illegible] the Times Building [illegible] saw how it had affected [illegible] not get it off my mind, [illegible] nothing else to do but [illegible] see what would happen. I [illegible] a point where my emotions [illegible] Nothing gave me a [illegible] I felt no courage. The [illegible] woods might just as well [illegible] been made for all the [illegible]

"About the end of November [illegible] went to Conover to buy [illegible] to get our mail. Sharp, [illegible] rence and Zeiss had returned [illegible] homes. J. B. got a letter [illegible] to me on the stationery of the [illegible] Construction Company, a [illegible] which J. J. used, and opened [illegible] J. had been ready to leave for the American Federation of Labor [illegible] vention at St. Louis at the [illegible] left for the woods and [illegible] he would see the Coast bunch [illegible] us know how things were [illegible] This letter said: 'Met friends [illegible] the Coast. Everything is [illegible] there.'

"On the strength of this [illegible] news J. B. got drunk. I [illegible] over the next day, Sunday, [illegible] him surrounded by several [illegible] were camped near us and who [illegible] ward proved to be Burns [illegible] I learned later that when I [illegible] dianapolis to go to Chicago [illegible] for the hunting trip Hockin [illegible] mond Burns to the depot [illegible] me out to him. They were [illegible] near us and we saw them [illegible] It was on this Sunday that J. B. [illegible] for them and again on December [illegible] The hunting season ends December [illegible] and on that day I went to Chicago [illegible] J. B. staying at the camp [illegible] cember 5. The day before [illegible] he was at Sucker Lake, [illegible] camp, and posed for the picture.

"J. B. joined me at my home [illegible] Chicago on December [illegible] noon for Indianapolis. On December 8 I went to Indianapolis [illegible] a wire from J. J. McNamara. [illegible] met me at the train on the [illegible] of December 9 and J. J. [illegible] structions to go to Los Angeles [illegible] damage or destroy The Times [illegible] iary plant, the Llewellyn Iron Works, the Baker Iron Works, the [illegible] Records and the Alexandria [illegible] Annex. The two last named buildings were then in course of construction. I was to take twelve [illegible] glycerine. He said that he had [illegible] ised the Coast bunch a Christmas present and he wanted the [illegible] to come off on Christmas Day.

"'Be sure and get a good [illegible] der The Times auxiliary plant,' [illegible] J. B., who was present as I got my instructions, 'and add another [illegible] or so to the list.'

"I told them I would look [illegible] but I made up my mind that if there was any danger of killing people there would be no explosion in The Times plant or anywhere else."

McManigal's story would have been corroborated at every turn [illegible] McNamara case gone to the [illegible] testimony, for detectives were [illegible] ing J. B. and McManigal [illegible] they went. Portions of the [illegible] of McManigal were told before the county grand jury. Darrow [illegible] copies of the testimony and [illegible] long before the trial began. [illegible] recent trial Darrow declared he [illegible] little about the guilt or [illegible] his clients except as he [illegible] picked up threads here and there.

HIS INSTRUCTIONS.

McManigal continues:

"With instructions to avoid all labor leaders in Los Angeles, but to see those in San Francisco after the explosion, and to write from [illegible] on my return, I left Indianapolis on December 10, spent two days in Chicago and arrived in Los Angeles December 15. I put up at the [illegible] Hotel as T. F. McKee. There I had room No. 255. In the evening I buried the glycerine in the bed of the Los Angeles River.

"It may be of some interest to note here that on September [illegible], 1911, nearly a year later, I went with Police Detectives Jones and [illegible] Detective Malcolm McLaren to the spot where this cache had been made and proved to them that it was the spot by unearthing [illegible] and a cap which had exploded by accident, injuring my hand. [illegible] of the cap remained in the hand [illegible] were extracted by my wife when I returned to Chicago.

"I arrived in Los Angeles on a Thursday. On the following [illegible] I located The Times [illegible] They were putting up a new [illegible] and after studying [illegible] work I decided that I would not [illegible] the shot, as there were people in the building at all hours, [illegible] It was also well lighted and [illegible] and doubtless I would have been [illegible] able to plant the charge had I desired to do so.

"On December 22 or 23 I took a trolley trip around the vicinity of Los Angeles, and was photographed with the rest of the sightseers at the Gabriel Mission. On December [illegible] I located the Llewellyn Iron Works, I saw the Baker Iron Works [illegible] was no chance for an explosion at the latter place on account of [illegible] guards.

"At the Llewellyn works I [illegible] the building and found a [illegible] working. I decided that [illegible] result from a blast placed [illegible] building and was upon the [illegible] withdrawing when a watchman [illegible] peared near me. I hid [illegible] of material and he walked by [illegible] close that I could have touched [illegible] I then got outside, placing the [illegible] erine against the wall of the [illegible] set the clock for 2 a.m. Christmas Day, and caught a train at [illegible] for San Francisco. I never [illegible] Hall of Records or the Alexandria Annex.

"I registered as [illegible]

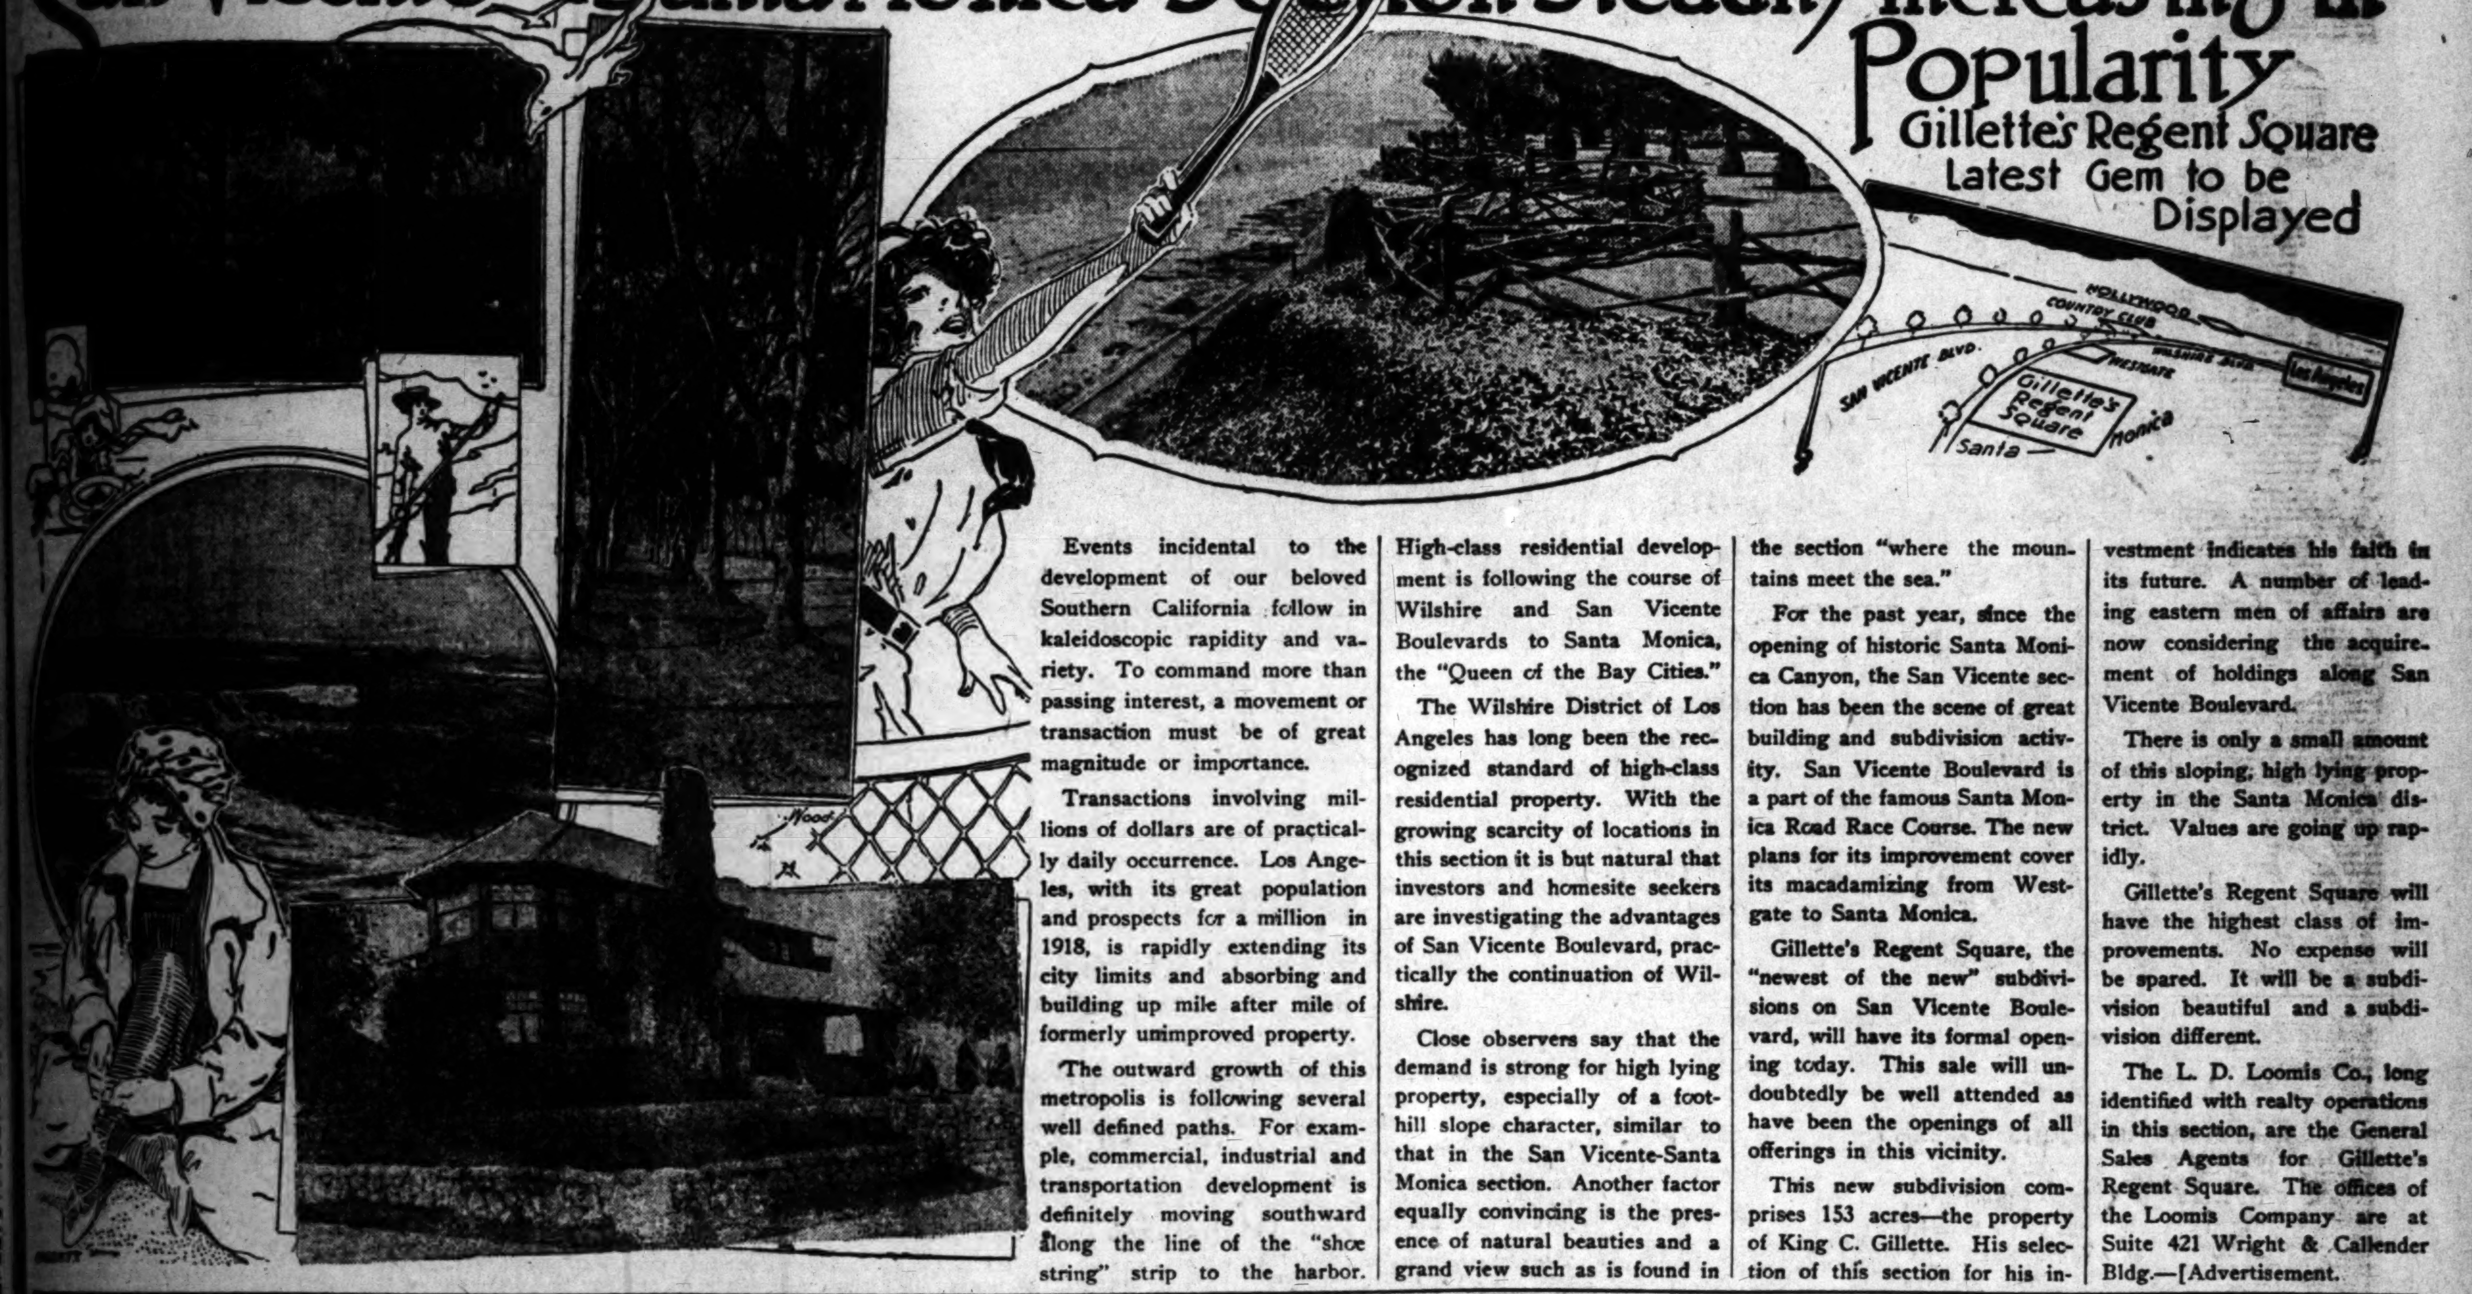
BAY CRESCENT BAY CITIES SHOULD BE ONE.

San Vicente-Santa Monica Section Steadily Increasing in Popularity

Gillette's Regent Square Latest Gem to be Displayed



Events incidental to the development of our beloved Southern California follow in kaleidoscopic rapidity and variety. To command more than passing interest, a movement or transaction must be of great magnitude or importance.

Transactions involving millions of dollars are of practically daily occurrence. Los Angeles, with its great population and prospects for a million in 1918, is rapidly extending its city limits and absorbing and building up mile after mile of formerly unimproved property.

The outward growth of this metropolis is following several well defined paths. For example, commercial, industrial and transportation development is definitely moving southward along the line of the "shoe string" strip to the harbor. High-class residential development is following the course of Wilshire and San Vicente Boulevards to Santa Monica, the "Queen of the Bay Cities."

The Wilshire District of Los Angeles has long been the recognized standard of high-class residential property. With the growing scarcity of locations in this section it is but natural that investors and homesite seekers are investigating the advantages of San Vicente Boulevard, practically the continuation of Wilshire.

Close observers say that the demand is strong for high lying property, especially of a foothill slope character, similar to that in the San Vicente-Santa Monica section. Another factor equally convincing is the presence of natural beauties and a grand view such as is found in the section "where the mountains meet the sea."

For the past year, since the opening of historic Santa Monica Canyon, the San Vicente section has been the scene of great building and subdivision activity. San Vicente Boulevard is a part of the famous Santa Monica Road Race Course. The new plans for its improvement cover its macadamizing from Westgate to Santa Monica.

Gillette's Regent Square, the "newest of the new" subdivisions on San Vicente Boulevard, will have its formal opening today. This sale will undoubtedly be well attended as have been the openings of all offerings in this vicinity.

This new subdivision comprises 153 acres—the property of King C. Gillette. His selection of this section for his investment indicates his faith in its future. A number of leading eastern men of affairs are now considering the acquirement of holdings along San Vicente Boulevard.

There is only a small amount of this sloping, high lying property in the Santa Monica district. Values are going up rapidly.

Gillette's Regent Square will have the highest class of improvements. No expense will be spared. It will be a subdivision beautiful and a subdivision different.

The L. D. Loomis Co., long identified with realty operations in this section, are the General Sales Agents for Gillette's Regent Square. The offices of the Loomis Company are at Suite 421 Wright & Callender Bldg.—[Advertisement.

ESSAYISTS URGE CONSOLIDATION.

[illegible] CRESCENT BAY CITIES SHOULD BE ONE.

[illegible] Logicians, Competing [illegible] Prizes Offered by Realty [illegible], Present Arguments for Im[illegible] Union of Venice With [illegible] Monica.

[illegible] MONICA, March 15.—A [illegible] number of well-written and log[illegible] on the subject, "Why Santa [illegible] and Venice Should Consoli[illegible]" were recently submitted by stu[illegible] of the Santa Monica High School [illegible] competition for three cash prizes [illegible] by Carl Schader, a realty bro[illegible] of this city and Los Angeles, for [illegible] best production on the subject [illegible]. The competition brought out [illegible] that the younger generation [illegible] a real interest in practical [illegible] questions affecting the Crescent [illegible] cities. Roscoe H. Dow, Mrs. [illegible] G. Stephens and Mrs. W. H. [illegible] acted as judges.

The winning essay was entitled "A [illegible] Between Mr. Forethought and [illegible] Conservative" and was written by [illegible] of No. 1214 Fourteenth [illegible], Santa Monica. The produc[illegible] practically in full, is reproduced [illegible]:

"[illegible] dear Mr. Forethought, you [illegible] as yet given me sufficient [illegible] why these cities should be [illegible]. You remember in our last [illegible] you advanced many points [illegible] I at once showed were ground[illegible].

"[illegible] are still unconvinced, I see, [illegible] Conservative. Today I will con[illegible] you. Last time we met I ad[illegible] arguments as to business in[illegible], city advertisement, tax reduc[illegible] improvement of health condi[illegible] and a dozen other good results [illegible] to act. Today I will begin [illegible] line of argument, and I think [illegible] will believe.

"[illegible] have two distinct systems of [illegible] now at work in practically [illegible] city. These sometimes work in [illegible], but more often in opposition. [illegible] these advance our best interests? [illegible] not have one Mayor chosen by [illegible] vote and one City Council of [illegible] members? This method [illegible] cause friction for a while, but [illegible] has actually proven that fric[illegible] brings out the best results of [illegible].

"[illegible] governments would mean [illegible] action toward civic improve[illegible]. Is this not the function of gov[illegible]? Instead of having proposi[illegible] defeated one by the other, they [illegible] do more efficient work by [illegible] in harmony.

"[illegible], with one-third the attend[illegible] are paying more for mainte[illegible] of her High School than Santa [illegible]. On the other hand, the new [illegible] Monica High School has ample [illegible] pupils of both sides for years [illegible]. Would it not be better to [illegible] the new school a union school [illegible] the bonds to a common [illegible]?

"[illegible] heard you yourself speak [illegible] our water supply. Here it [illegible] worse. The Owens [illegible] is fast nearing completion [illegible] arrangements are being made. [illegible] can afford half a water [illegible] half a water line. Frank[illegible] 'Unite or die.' We would [illegible] realize this to be the case [illegible] success should sud[illegible].

"[illegible] again on the same subject, [illegible] remember the burning of [illegible] three doors from yours? [illegible] years you would have [illegible] for Owens water. [illegible] burned down. The fault [illegible] to the shortage of water. [illegible] eastern boys have mu[illegible] and salt-water pro[illegible].

"[illegible] are high. Water rates [illegible] and electricity are twice a reasonable price. Singlehanded we are unable to compete with these corporations. Let us in unison bring them under civic control.

"In union there is strength. In union there is contentment. Cooperation is the secret of happy living and of advancement."

Slowly Mr. Conservative's countenance beamed. He reached for the other's hand. "You're right," he said, "Venice and Santa Monica must unite. The district from the canyon to Del Rey we must call Santa Monica." He had become another Forethought. May these few words as readily bring others of his kind to that opinion.

SOUTH COAST ACTIVITIES.

Five Hundred Lot Suvdivisions to Be Put on Market at Bay City. Pier Contract Let.

Among the development enterprises projected along the South Coast beach centers a proposed new 500-lot subdivision at Bay City is noteworthy. The tract, which is to be improved and put upon the market by the Bayside Land Company, will lie to the north of Fifth street, in the coast town, and will contain graded, rolled and oiled streets, cement walks and curbs, water and shade trees.

In West Newport, East Newport, Balboa and Balboa Island thirty houses are now under construction, according to reports from these districts. Approximately $37,500 is being expended by the West Coast Gas Company on its plant at Newport, which will supply both the Newport Bay and Huntington Beach sections.

The contract for the construction of the proposed municipal pier at Huntington Beach was formally awarded to the Mercereau Bridge and Construction Company during the past week. The Huntington Beach Trustees have decided to add five twenty-two-foot spans to the originally contemplated length of the pier, making the completed structure 1310 feet long.

SELL TO ARIZONANS.

Two well known Arizonans who have invested in National Boulevard Heights, the Robert Marsh & Company, development in the Santa Monica district are Maj. A. J. Pickerel and Mrs. A. J. Head, of Prescott. Maj. Pickerel is in charge of the Copper Queen Company's holdings in Northern Arizona, including the recently developed Bonanza Commercial Mining Company property at Prescott. He is also an extensive holder of property in Southern California, having large property interests in Hollywood. Mrs. Head, who owns a hotel in Prescott, purchased eight half-acre lots in the seaward subdivision. These she intends to improve in a substantial manner.

Contracts for the water system and various other developments in National Boulevard Heights are being drawn, and active work will be started in the near future, according to H. Gordon Badger, manager of the subdivision department of Robert Marsh & Company.

Dynamiter McManigal.

on Tuesday, December 27, met E. A. Clancy at the Labor Temple. I asked him if he had heard of the latest explosion in Los Angeles, and, before he knew who I was, told me that he had been expecting it. We discussed the labor situation and I left San Francisco on December 28, arriving in Chicago on New Year's Day. I remained there until January 15, when J. J. called me to Indianapolis and scolded because there had been but one explosion at Los Angeles and but little damage done. I told him he was lucky to have had an explosion there at all.

AFTER BURNS.

"J. J. wanted his brother and me to go to Detroit and look over a number of buildings there to see what we could do with them, but my little son was sick and I went to Chicago, with an appointment to meet J. B. in Toledo on April 11. Before I left J. J. showed me a letter from Caldwell & Drake, whose work we had just 'double shotted,' stating they were beginning a reinforced concrete job near Oklahoma City, and that if McNamara considered that as bridge work, they would be glad to unionize the job.

"'You see,' he said, and smiled, 'we've got the little ones, and we'll get after the big ones hard.' That was the last time I ever saw J. J. smile.

"J. B. laid out a plan to put a bomb in Detective W. J. Burns's desk, so arranged that the opening of the desk would explode a quart or two of glycerine. I said that it could not be done, that Burns's office must be too closely guarded, and that, as it would kill, I would have nothing to do with it. At that time, I believe, J. B. simply wanted to kill, it made no difference whom.

"I arrived in Chicago on April 8, 1911. My boy was better. My family and Mrs. McGuire went downtown that night and I bought a pair of shoes. I learned later that Detective MacLaren was in the store at the time.

"In the afternoon of April 11 I left Chicago for Toledo, arriving there at 8:40 p.m., and met J. B. We registered at the Myershoff Hotel, J. B. as Charles Caldwell and I as G. Foster. We had room 11, a strange string of coincidences; room 11, April 11, 1911, the eve of our arrest. The next day we went to Detroit, arriving just before noon and registering at the Oxford Hotel under the names we had used in Toledo. J. B. had in his handbag some fuse and caps, and we checked our bags at the parcel room.

"The hotel was being renovated and we were not assigned to rooms. J. B. and I got a drink at the hotel bar and as we returned to the lobby a theater troup was registering. We started out of the front door to walk about when a big man who proved to be Guy Biddinger, formerly sergeant of police detectives in Chicago, and now chief of the criminal bureau for the W. J. Burns Detective Agency, grabbed me and turned me around quickly. I then faced a man who held a revolver at my stomach. On the street J. B. was fighting desperately with two other men, who quickly subdued him. Guests in the hotel started to interfere but Biddinger, who was in charge of the detectives, and who conducted the arrest along the only lines that could have made it successful, calmed them by telling them that his men were secret service agents and that we were wanted for safe blowing. That also calmed me for I saw an alibi

"They took us direct to the Michigan Central depot, where a train was about to leave for Chicago. There J. B. yelled that he was being kidnaped and a uniformed policeman interfered. I heard the story Biddinger told him, and then I knew I had an alibi for I was buying that pair of shoes about the time he said the safe was blown. The result of the policeman's interference was that we were taken to police headquarters, where later in the day we signed extradition waivers and left that night for Chicago. I was booked at the station under my true name, J. B. as Frank Sullivan.

"The men who were with Biddinger were MacLaren, Raymond Burns and Police Detective Billy Reed of Chicago.

"I was put in an upper berth. J. B. sat on the lower berth after it was made up and, after questioning the detectives for some time, said:

"'I know what you want. You want to take me to Los Angeles and hang me. But I'll prove that the Times Building was blown up by gas.'

"I reached my hand down and grabbed him by the hair.

"'Do you know what you are talking about,' I said.

"He got up and strode down the aisle.

"'You're — right, I know what I'm talking about,' he said. 'You go to sleep.'

"'I got the whole federation of labor behind me,' he continued, raving.

"He offered $5000 to be allowed to escape, or for my escape. Five thousand at a time, he raised his offer to $30,000, but of course he made no impression. He told the detectives that if they did not get the $30,000 Clarence Darrow would. He then began to threaten the detectives with the vengeance of 'the gang.' It all amounted to nothing and we were taken from the train at South Chicago, and by automobile to the home of Detective Billy Reed. There J. B. and I were placed, handcuffed together, in a room with a detective. J. B. asked the latter to leave the room and let him talk to me privately. This was refused but the officer moved out of earshot and I asked J. B. how we were going to stand on the thing. I now realized that we were up against it for fair and that it was dynamiting and not safe blowing that we must answer for. J. B. said:

"'Every man for himself.'

"'All right,' I replied. 'I'm done with you.' I asked the officer to loosen me from J. B. and this was done and J. B. taken from the room.

"In the afternoon Detective Burns came to the house and talked with me. He advised me as to my rights, offered to get any lawyer I wanted, and told me he could make no promises of immunity and that whatever I said would be used against me.

"'You can talk to me if you wish,' he said, 'and I'll listen. If you talk to a lawyer I'm done with you.'

"'I want just one promise,' I said. 'Will you take care of my wife and children if I make a full confession?'

"He said that he would care for them as long as my wife stayed with me on the story.

"'Call in your stenographer,' I said, and I talked from 8 o'clock in the evening until 4 in the morning. Without details of our work, the confession covered thirty-six pages of typewriting, and I swore to it before a notary."

This book is on sale at all news stands, and book stores.

LARGE TRACTS HARD TO FIND.

Few Big Holdings Left in Porterville Field.

Alfalfa Districts Rapidly Forging Ahead.

Pioneer Rancher Sells Out to Fresno Man.

PORTERVILLE, March 15.—It was a comparatively quiet week in realty circles and the condition appears to be a contradictory one. There has been an unusual inquiry for property, but local dealers report that for the most part requests have called for large tracts suitable for subdivision. Large tracts are no longer easy to find, however, and this is particularly true of property suitable for orange lands.

Development work, which has been reported this week, has been very largely that of the Pixley and [illegible]lito alfalfa sections. A recent canvass made of the alfalfa district shows that work of development is now in progress on more than 2000 acres of the section west and south of this city.

Hamilton Cone of Memphis, Tenn., has purchased a half interest in the Shaclett ranch of 240 acres in the Strathmore district. The property is adapted to citrus culture.

J. J. Sullivan of Long Beach has transferred to C. H. Weed, an irrigation engineer of this city, 100 acres of foothill orchard land directly east of the city limits. The property will be developed as an addition to the Valencia Heights orchards in which Weed is a large factor, and which company has 120 acres under cultivation at the present time.

E. E. Brown of Maricopa purchased this week of Mrs. Laura [illegible] a twenty-acre tract of general purpose land in the Exeter district. The price was given at $200 an acre.

E. Moore has sold twenty acres of orange land in the [illegible] foothills to G. W. King, who came to this district from Los Angeles, and who is lately from Oklahoma. The price paid was at the rate of [illegible] per acre. King intends to make an orange orchard of the property.

E. A. Bennett, owner of the La Franada orchard, on Fountain [illegible] road, has purchased the twenty-acre orchard of E. A. Morris, directly adjoining La Franada. The place is to be developed as an addition to Bennett's present orchard.

Jacob Gabel, one of the pioneers of the Pixley alfalfa district, retired from ranching this week when he disposed of his 242-acre alfalfa ranch to E. Weisman of Fresno. Gabel will leave shortly for New York, where he will sail for Europe, intending to again take up his residence in his former home on the Rhine.

START TWO HOMES.

The San Pedro Construction Company reports the sale to [illegible] Moelle of a five-room bungalow at Thirty-fourth street and [illegible] drive for $2350. The company has just begun the construction of two bungalows on lots immediately adjoining the site sold.

GARAGE STARTED.

Work has been started on a two-story brick garage on Grand avenue between Ninth and Tenth streets, for Emma A. Summers, by the California Real Estate and Building Company. The building has been leased through C. O. Bradley of the same company to Guy E. Missick for five years for a total rental of $36,000.

MACHINERY OF ENORMOUS SIZE or of the smallest dimensions can be purchased at very reasonable prices from the many companies who are represented in the "Machinery and Mechanical Arts" columns of The Times "Liner" section.—[Advertisement.

FOR PARK PURPOSES.

Twelve Lots on Forty-eighth Street to Be Added to Parking System of New College Tract.

Twelve lots, covering as many corners of a newly-developed part of New College Tract, have been set aside by the Los Angeles Investment Company as perpetual small parks. These lots are on Forty-eighth street and, taken in conjunction with previous parking work, will make of that thoroughfare a fine roadway. Landscapists are now at work on the newly-dedicated property.

Two hundred and seventy-six lots have been opened in this western part of New College Tract and its settlement will extend the investment company's development work to the famous hill section that was secured by the recent $7,000,000 purchase of Baldwin lands. The fact that tract work is going on to the edge of the Baldwin hills is said to be indicative of the early opening up of another great territory reaching practically to the sea.

Bungalows are under construction on many of the new lots and plans have been drawn for sixty such homes, all to be put up as fast as demanded. Stores, churches and schools are comprised in the improvements as well as sidewalks, curbs, and tennis courts and the conveniences of sewers, gas, electricity, water and telephones. A change in street car routing has been made to increase the transportation facilities.

RAILWAY MAN BUYS.

SOUTH PASADENA, March 15.—M. Brittian reports the sale of his house and lot at No. 715 Garfield avenue to M. R. Ost, adjusting agent for the Santa Fe Railroad, and who, with his wife and sister, will make this city his home. Mr. Levine reports the exchange of his house at No. 835 Prospect street for a walnut grove in Arcadie.

GREAT WEALTH IN NITRATE DEPOSIT.

LOCATED IN MOST DESOLATE PLACE IN CHILE.

Believed to Be Enough to Last the World for Three Hundred Years. Geologists and Meterologists Alike Are Puzzled to Account for Their Origin or Location.

[New York Times:] A discussion among a group of contemplative men at the Waldorf turned on Mr. Schwab's recent purchase of great bodies of iron ore in Chile, till John Barrett, an encyclopedic man on facts and figures of the kind, said that the phenomenal thing to him in Chile was her nitrate deposits. After that he had to tell more about them.

"The nitrate zone," he began, "is as barren as any place on earth. It is one of the paradoxes of nature's laboratory, because no living thing can find nourishment here, although from these very nitrates nourishment is given to impoverished soils all the world over.

"The climate is delightful, although it rarely rains on the nitrate desert; it is neither oppressively hot nor cold, so that natives and foreigners alike find life agreeable and healthful so long as they trust to nature and the simple foods, which must be brought hither from outside the zone.

"Geologists and meteorologists alike have been puzzled at the origin of these deposits. For years it had been a matter of speculation and theory, but no one theory explains with complete satisfaction how or why nature selected such an immense area here, and apparently nowhere else, for such a dense accumulation of this form of mineral wealth.

"These deposits in the Province of Tarapaca occupy the small folds and the gently rising hills extending from the east of the pampas of Tamarugal, but to the south of the Loa River they follow no lode, being found in the midst of the great pampas as well as in the folds of some of the hills. Neither are the deposits found on the lower levels of the western slope of the Andes; they lie at an altitude of from 3600 to 13,000 feet above the sea. But, fortunately, this is no obstacle to mining or transporting the finished material, because the hills and mountains along this coast come precipitiously close to the water, so that, even where the railroads are in service from the heights at which the nitrate fields are situated, the bags containing the commercial nitrate can be shot by the force of gravity to the dispatching warehouses in the harbors.

"Along this stretch of 450 miles of nitrate coast are many of the best-known ports of Chile. First, at the north, comes Pisagua; then Junin, Caleta Buena, Iquique, Tocopilla, Mejillones, Antofagasta, Coloso, Taltal, with Caldera at the extreme south. The nitrates from the Province of Tarapaca are shipped through the ports of Iquique and Pisagua, while the products of the region further south seek the nearest ports. Not one of these offers safe natural anchorage, but each has been selected altogether on account of its availability as a shipping place for nitrates. Vessels lie in the open roadstead, and the cargoes are lightered out to them in the way devised many years ago, but which modern mechanical skill will not be able to supersede until breakwaters and piers allow these vessels to approach closer to shore. The cargoes brought to these ports are extraordinarily miscellaneous, because, since nothing is produced in this region, everything must therefore be imported.

MINING THE NITRATE.

"Below the caliche is the lowest stratum of bedrock, called gova, from which the first step of the mining operation is conducted. The method of extracting caliche is extremely simple when compared with the elaborate machinery necessary in obtaining other minerals. A cata, or small shaft, is sunk through the surface deposits and through the caliche to the bed of clay or gravel, the gova. Here a hole is scooped out, in which a small boy places a charge of powder or dynamite. This is exploded. The resultant debris is divided into masses that may be used for building material or such indifferent work, while the caliche is collected by itself, placed in mule carts and driven to the factory or oficina.

"The caliche itself is a combination of nitrate of soda, varying from 14 to 75 per cent. or more; sulphate of soda, sodium chloride, iodine salts, small proportions of potash, magnesium and lime, with insoluble matter. With the exception of the iodine, and in some cases the common salt, these being saved as by-products for other purposes, the entire industry of the oficina is devoted to the preparation of the nitrate in such a form that it may be economically exported. The caliche is first crushed, and it is then run into huge boiling tanks, where the salts are dissolved, the sand and other refuse sinking to the bottom. Fortunately the nitrate has a different point of solubility from other salts, and can, therefore, be precipitated by itself as the water cools. When it has crystallized in large cooling pans or vats the dry nitrate is put up into bags and dispatched for shipment.

"These oficinas are establishments thoroughly well equipped with modern machinery and chemical laboratories for the scientific production of nitrate. Each oficina stands in the middle of the field from which its caliche is obtained; it is a collection of buildings above which rises a smokestack.

"In the early days of the industry water was brought in pails by coasting vessels up and down the Pacific; later it was piped from sources in the Andes; but today, wherever the supply is too costly or uncertain, water is distilled from the sea. Nothing grows indigenously here, but the traveler will notice plazas, patios and potted plants, even grass at times, at every port and oficina. This "miracle" is accomplished by the importation of all the ingredients for horticulture; the earth itself has been carried here to make a soil foundation, and the people cherish these exotics with the utmost devotion.

"Chile has frequently been dismayed at the fear that the supply of nitrate might become exhausted. This would mean not only a disturbance of chemical conditions throughout the world, but also a disastrous fall in the income of the Chilean government derived from the export tax placed upon this product.

"Calculations made a few years ago demonstrated that as far as the region of the Province of Tarapaca was concerned, assuming the steady increase in consumption which has marked the spreading knowledge of the use of nitrates, the supply could scarcely last through the next thirty-five years.

SUPPLY FOR 300 YEARS.

"It was estimated that 100,000,000 tons of nitrate were then unmined; the annual exportation has practically touched the mark of 2,000,000 tons, and is continually increasing, so that an easy problem in arithmetic shows how close the end is. The first and most important is the fact that it has been definitely determined that nitrate is by no means limited to Tarapaca; in the provinces of Antofagasta and Atacama hitherto unexplored beds of nitrate have been discovered. These beds are said to be capable of furnishing 1,500,000,000 tons additional. This supply, with the fields already exploited, makes available a total of 1,600,000,000 tons, and assuming the world's consumption to be annually 5,000,000, which will probably be the normal demand within a few years, there will be enough to last for over three hundred years. The second factor is the more refined methods introduced by modern chemistry into the industry at the oficinas.

"In early years the crude caliche itself was used at home and exported; later when its value was found to lay in the nitrate constituent, it was found cheaper and more profitable to extract the salt on the spot, even if much of the mineral were lost. Today a product of 95 per cent. of pure nitrate is sent from the oficinas to be shipped abroad. This extremely rich percentage, however, came from caliche, which itself contained at least 14 per cent. and usually not less than 50 per cent. of nitrate of soda.

"The government of Chile has for years placed a tax upon the export of this natural product. Chile has laid this tax since the year 1880, and has derived from it $280,000,000 gold, up to 1904, without taking into account the revenue from iodine and of the sale of nitrate lands.

"In addition to this tax, which naturally Chile is anxious to retain, the government restricts the distribution of new lands and is cautious about have the benefit of them. Special laws are issued to protect this one time wilderness, and what eighty years ago anyone could have had for the asking and be laughed at for his pains, is now held so precious that only properly-accredited concessionaires can have the privilege of occupying it. With this output restricted by the government and allowing for a 10 per cent. increase in consumption every five-year period for the next twenty years, the tax will have yielded to the government by the close of 1923 the sum of $400,000,000 gold and a steady source of income of which any country in the world ought to be proud. This assumes, of course, that nitrate will not be discovered in any other deposits sufficient to offer competition to Chile, and that science cannot develop some method by which nitrates or nitric acid may be derived from some inexhaustible supply.

Great Wealth.

"The English, at the beginning of the exploitation of the nitrate fields, were the first to learn the practical value of the salt as a fertilizer. They for years absorbed the entire output, and their business men purchased the mines. Germans, who later on through laboratory experiments grasped the situation, dissatisfied at the English control, made purchases for themselves, so that today the immense industry is in the hands of these two peoples."

Proverb Did Not Fit.

[Philadelphia Telegraph:] In recently declaring that all proverbs do not pan out according to plans and specifications, Congressmen Cox of Ohio, said that a friend of his was rambling through a small country town one afternoon when he saw a colored woman unmercifully walloping a little pickaninny.

"Hold on, my good woman," expostulated the friend, "I wouldn't do that if I were you! What has the boy done?"

"He hab done a lot!" replied the angry colored woman. "He done lef' de chicken coop doah open, an' all de chickens got out!"

"Well, that's not so serious," smilingly responded the friend. "Chickens always come home to roost, you know."

"Come home to roost!" cried Aunt Dinah, expressively. "Dat's jes' where you am mixed, Mister White Man! Dem chickens will go home to roost!"

QUEER WILLS.

Legacy Left to a Parrot Whose Keeper Must Be A woman Who Will Give Him A Good Home.

[Washington Post:] The making of queer wills is a subject prolific of good stories and some remarkable examples are given by Virgil M. Harris in "Ancient, Curious and Famous Wills." One Caroline Hunter, an elderly spinster, left $5000 in trust for her parrot. The money was to provide it with a home and to guarantee it attention at the hands of a custodian, who had to be of the female sex and had to undertake not to leave England. The will included this clause:

"I will and desire that whoever tries to frustrate these my intentions shall forfeit whatever I have left him, her or them. I owe nothing to any one. Many owe me gratitude and money, but none have paid me either."

A rustic of Toulouse about 1781 wrote a brief will in these terms:

"I desire that I appoint my russet cob my universal heir, and I desire that he may belong to my nephew, George."

This was contested, but was confirmed, as it was clear that the said George, in owning the horse would have control of the money; also he would not be able to transfer or dissipate the cash for the simple reason that he would require the horse's consent, which would be difficult to obtain.

Wealth and Work.

[Chicago Post:] A young Chicago man known to be a millionaire is to become a missionary in behalf of the Christian religion in the far interior of China. We are glad of it. There is self-denial and a renunciation marked here that will do something by their example to help causes which have nothing to do with religious effort as the word religious generally is accepted.

Young fellows who have money which their fathers earned for them were to a considerable extent a worthless lot ten years ago. Things largely have changed. There is no harder work than putting in a sixteen-hour working day loafing along the path of pleasure. Today only a few of the newly enriched order out the car and put it at the top speed notch an hour after the will is read. Things are better in this country. There are lines of decent endeavor for the man who has inherited money and no inherited work. The lines are being followed.

The Waning I.W.W.

[New York Sun:] The amiable Ettor of the Industrial Workers of the World has been deported from Canada by the intelligent government of the Dominion and is again in this unlucky land, which would have been glad to be rid of him. Yet we cannot blame Canada. Self-preservation is the first law of nations as well as of individuals.

Meanwhile the revolutionary propaganda of the Industrial Workers of the World is not prospering here. In New Jersey their activities have been hampered by an intelligent public opinion and an alert police establishment. In New York the striking garment makers have rejected them in a manner that must wound deeply these sensitive saviors of society. Their following includes only the violent and the ignorant.

The programme of pillage, destruction and murder advocated by the Industrial Workers of the World has been fully exploited. Its inevitable consequences are thoroughly understood. Nothing more than realization of its purposes and methods is needed to bring about their rejection by all right-minded men.

WILSON DENIES SOP TO UNIONS.

Opposes Exemption Under the Anti-Trust Law.

Provision Stricken Out of Sundry Civil Bill.

Agrees With Stand of Taft on Constitutionality.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, March 15.—[Special Dispatch.] The Sundry Civil Bill, with the provision to which President Taft objected, but otherwise substantially in the form in which it was agreed upon near the close of the last session, will be rushed through Congress as soon as it is convened in special session, according to a plan now tentatively agreed upon.

President Wilson has made it clear that he will object to the provision that the money specifically appropriated for the enforcement of the anti-trust law shall not be used in prosecuting labor organizations or farmer associations.

This will be stricken out, but, in order that there may be no delay in passing the bill, it will not be changed in other respects unless the Democrats succeed in an attempt to add new items.

[illegible] GUILTY OF MURDER.

Five Men Given Long Sentences for Participating in the Strike Riots in New Jersey.

[The Square Deal:] The strike riots among striking Italian laborers near [illegible], N. J. last December have resulted in the conviction of five for murder in the second degree. A trial lasting two weeks, at Hackensack, came to a conclusion on February 21. The five convicted were Antonio Ferraro, Mariano de Lucia, Constantino and Antonio Cella and Antonio Manzi.

The other five prisoners were acquitted and released. The ten men were tried for the murder of Capt. [illegible] J. Craw in the strike riot at the Susquehanna Railroad coal yards at Shadyside on December 11, at which time a dozen other detectives were wounded. Detective Clarence [illegible] was killed also, but Prosecutor Wright moved only one indictment.

Supreme Court Justice Charles W. Parker, who presided at the trial, immediately sentenced the convicted men.

When Ferraro heard his sentence of from fifteen to thirty years in prison he smiled and said: "I thank you."

A similar sentence was given De Lucia. Justice Parker told this prisoner that the evidence pointed to him as the leader of the riot.

"A gap in the evidence has saved you from first-degree murder," said Justice Parker.

The Cella brothers each were sentenced to from ten to thirty years and [illegible] got from eight to thirty years.

Constantino Cella is undersized and only 19 years old.

"The evidence showed that you, though the youngest, were the wildest of all the rioters," said the court to him.

It was the boy who chased Supt. [illegible] of the Erie over a high trestle as he shot, shooting at him three times. The boy also shot Lieut. John [illegible] and shot at three other detectives.

The riot was one of the bloodiest in the history of this country. It began on Tuesday, December 10, when the men demanded higher wages. On that day Detective Thomas [illegible] was shot through the [illegible]. He recovered.

The five men who were acquitted, [illegible], Ferdinand Ferraro, [illegible] Trochione, Antonio Vecchione and Frank Amattio, all proved alibis.

While the trial was going on Justice Parker received this threat by [illegible] from Medford, Mass.:

"We, the wage earners of New Milford, Mass., protest against the refusal of the defence in behalf of the ten prisoners accused of murder. We also demand a fair trial, followed by the immediate release of the prisoners.

"Giuseppe de Lucia, Chairman."

Because of this message Undersheriff Heath had extra guards in the courtroom. Many Italians were in court when the sentences were pronounced, but there was no demonstration.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S COURAGE.

Veto of the Bill Prohibiting the Use of Anti-Trust Appropriations for Prosecuting Labor Unions.

[New York Journal of Commerce:] In the closing days of his administration President Taft performed two acts which were the more meritorious because they required a degree of courage possessed by the majority of neither the House nor the Senate. His veto of the Immigration Bill because of the literacy test, and the veto of the Sundry Civil Bill because of its provision prohibiting the Department of Justice from using its [illegible] appropriation in prosecuting labor unions were, each in its way, a highly reasonable protest against the political terrorism of organized labor. President Wilson will probably have a chance to show whether, in dealing with this issue, he has the same point of view as his predecessor. Congress may, of course, take a different course of action now that the executive and legislative branches of the government are presumably committed to a uniform line of policy. But while it may pass for "good politics" to put a Republican President "in a hole" on any demand formally [illegible] in the name of organized labor, the subject will require more serious consideration when it comes up as part of a policy for which the Democratic administration will be responsible. Among the problems before a new President no one is likely to furnish a better test of the value of his expressed convictions [illegible] of dealing out even-handed justice to labor organizations and their representatives.

CAN LABOR UNIONS BE A LAW UNTO THEMSELVES?

[EDITORIAL.]

THROUGH the filing of a Federal suit against local unions of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers at Chicago, a question will be brought before the courts which has been engaging many minds and has from time to time been raised in oral or printed discussion. That question is whether combinations of labor, if they resort to practices which have the effect of restraining trade, do not make themselves as unions, and their members individually, liable under the law just as combinations of capital do when they make wrongful use of their power. It will be remembered that recently at Danbury, Ct., the individual properties of members of the Hatters' Union have been attached to help pay a boycott damage judgment obtained against the union.

In this Chicago case the government alleges in its complaint that the unions named as defendants, having a grievance against the Postal Telegraph Company, have been interfering with the transaction of its business and preventing it from always giving prompt and efficient service—a service which the public is entitled to have.

Though the Sherman anti-trust law is not specifically invoked, says the well-posted Journal of Albany, N. Y., the principle upon which it is based is made the basis of this litigation, namely that it is illegal for men to combine and conspire for restraint upon business. As the business of the telegraph company is interstate, it is within the power of the Federal Department of Justice to begin this proceeding.

Apparently, it is not purposed to call into question the right of a labor union to order a strike. The ultimate decision in this case will be awaited with a great deal of interest, as it will go far towards answering the question, can labor unions be a law unto themselves?

Chimera.

SCORES MINIMUM WAGE AS IMPRACTICAL DREAM.

New York Newspaper Declares Investigation of Illinois Legislature Seems to Be Carried on as Scheme of a Yellow Journalist Rather Than as Solution of an Economic Question from an Impartial Standpoint.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, March 15.—[Special Dispatch.] The agitation started at Chicago over the question of a minimum wage for women has been attracting attention throughout the country, says the Evening Post. In a number of States, movements of the same character have been initiated. The newspapers have everywhere devoted ample space and great prominence to the proceedings of the Illinois Senate investigation committee. A certain amendment of criticism has been passed upon the attitude of Lieut.-Gov. O'Hara of the committee and the committee, and upon the proposals which they apparently have in contemplation; and some of these criticisms have been very much to the point. It remains to be seen whether in the other States which seem ready to follow in the footsteps of Illinois the question at issue will be taken up in a manner more appropriate to its importance and difficulty.

IMPORTANCE OF ACTION.

The Illinois committee does not appear to have the faintest realization of the fact that any interposition in the matter must take into account the whole situation of society and must reckon consequences other than those which immediately affect the comfort of the particular girls whom it is desired to place in a better position. Questions are asked again and again which show the attitude of a yellow journalist more than a sober legislator or investigator. One after another of the heads of colossal business establishments, after having stated his estimate of what is required for the needs of a woman worker—say $8 a week—has been asked if he could "live on that," or "what is your income?" The committee seems quite unaware that in the gross inequality of fortune, the fact that the rich might easily part with their superfluity and give it to the poor, were to be accepted as a reason for compelling such redistribution, the process could not stop with a little thing like a pitiful minimum wage for women.

OVERTURN OF SOCIETY.

It would necessarily mean a complete reconstruction of the whole economic and social system. With those deliberately and seriously working for such an end we have no fault to find; but with those who are so soft-headed that they don't know when they are fooling with a great question we confess we have little patience.

Labor's Unrest.

THE STRIKE NEWS OF THIS UNEASY WORLD.

THE revolutionary propaganda of the Industrial Workers of the World is not prospering in this country, says the Sun of New York. In New Jersey their activities have been hampered by an intelligent public opinion and an alert police establishment. In New York the striking garment makers have rejected them in a manner that must wound deeply these sensitive saviors of society. Their following includes only the violent and the ignorant.

The programme of pillage, destruction and murder advocated and practiced by the I.W.W.'s has been fully exploited. Its inevitable consequences are thoroughly understood. Nothing more than realization of their purposes and methods is needed to bring about their rejection by all right-minded men. Strikes are started by I.W.W.'s, not really for the purpose of securing wage raises, but for the opportunity and incentive strikes afford for violence, pillage and murder. Any decent union worker who associates with or recognizes the I.W.W.'s in any way brings the greatest possible discredit upon himself and his fellow decent union-labor workers.

Members of the New York Children's and Misses' Dressmakers' Union are out on strike. They number 20,000 workers (95 per cent. women) in 490 shops. They demand 20 per cent. more wages, a fifty-four-hour working week, no tenement-house work and recognition of the union. Whatever else they may get it is certain they will not get the latter.

Federal Judge Carpenter has issued a restraining order prohibiting electrical workers interfering with wires and equipment of the Postal Telegraph Company of Chicago. The linemen of that company are on strike. The Federal government comes in because the company does an interstate business.

Now the silk mills of Paterson, N. J., are also tied up by a ribbon workers' strike in sympathy with the striking silk weavers and dyers. Fifteen thousand workers are out and every big dye shop in the city is closed. The tie-up in the silk mills is almost as complete. The dyers demand a flat eight-hour day and the silk weavers want increased pay and abolition of the four-loom system. The Industrial Workers of the World are endeavoring to have the trolleymen also go out. It looks as if the strike will spread to other industries also. Two hundred silk mills and dye shops are closed, employing from twenty-five to 1800 hands each. Thousands of others who cannot do their work while the strikers do not do theirs are forced to be idle and lose their wages against their will. In this way there is always intense innocent suffering in connection with every big strike. It will be so also in Los Angeles if the building trades strike on May 1 next as McCarthy, Tveitmoe and company want them to. Then, if the strike occurs, Los Angeles will see some real suffering if it lasts several weeks. Evictions for non-payment of rent will occur, mortgages on homes will be foreclosed, savings-bank "nest eggs" will disappear, weekly food credits will be stopped, and distress and poverty will line our streets. In Paterson the silk finishers, who earn good wages, are forced to be idle because of the strike of the dyers. Ribbon hands, a large number of whom are women, demand an eight-hour day and a minimum wage of $12 a week. The Socialists of Passaic and Paterson are backing up criminally-libelous newspaper attacks on Chief of Police Bimson of Paterson. One newspaper editor is held in $2000 bail for trial. Miss Flynn, I.W.W. organizer of the foolish waiters' strike in New York, is very active with inflammatory speeches at Paterson. She is now out of jail on bail. Violence is increasingly occurring. Six strikers beat a boss dyer with a baseball bat. Giovannitti of Lawrence (Mass.) "disgrace" is also at Paterson stirring up trouble.

At East Orange, N. J., Judge Mountain holds Hod Carriers' Benevolent and Protective Union No. 4 of Newark and the union's business agent liable to Sebastiano Torcivio for $273.75 damages for preventing him from earning a living. At a meeting of the union he was fined $5 and refused to pay. Wherever he sought work he was pursued by the union's agent, who threatened to order a strike if he was employed. There is no difference between restraint of labor and restraint of trade. Yet Gompers wants restraint of labor to go free while restraint of trade is punished to the limit. That's the bunco game he has just played on Congress, which ex-President Taft knocked out and which action President Wilson justly seems disposed to indorse. Now that tyrannical union labor is being held liable to pay for the damage it creates it may not do so much damage creating. To avoid that, Gompers sneaked through his "exempt unions" rider, only to have it held up and his cunningly-devised fraud exposed. This is not by any means the first time that fraud by Gompers has been exposed. His whole career as labor leader is a fraud.

London will have to go without its time-honored "one a penny, two a penny, hot cross buns" on good Friday owing to a strike of the bakers of that great city. The strikers demand $7.50 as a minimum weekly wage and a fifty-four hour working week.

Cardinal Gibbons says: "I know of the I.W.W. They are dangerous, the leaders of the organization are demagogues, unstable and dangerous, who are leading the poor workingman into labyrinths of strife, from which he will find it hard to extricate himself. I have given the matter much thought and study. Upon labor and capital depends the prosperity of our country. Together they must solve the problems which come up from year to year. They must work out their destinies together. If they do this amicably prosperity and healthy growth will be the portion of our nation. Let the laboring man beware the demagogues represented by the I.W.W." Right here comes the question: How much better really are Gompers, Morrison, McCarthy, Tveitmoe, Ryan, Darrow, Johannsen & Co., than the leaders of the wages-destroying, destructive I.W.W.?

The Socialists have utterly failed to bring about a general strike at Budapest, Hungary. Its coming had been loudly proclaimed for months. This hurts the standing of Socialists everywhere. Los Angeles and Job Harriman not excepted.

Women employed by the Albany Knitting Company have gone on strike for more pay for home work.

Violence has begun in the rubber workers' strike at Akron, O. This is I.W.W. work. Repetition of their Lawrence, Mass., murderous tactics is openly threatened. The rubber workers of Cleveland, O., have also struck in sympathy with the Akron strikers. One thousand men and girls left one plant (Mechanical Rubber Company) the first day, March 5. They condemn a newly-instituted piece work scale.

In 1912, England (not Great Britain nor the United Kingdom,) had 821 labor disputes, involving 1,437,032 workers, and costing the loss of 40,346,400 day's wages. One million were coal miners who lost 30,000,000 of the day's wages lost. At only $1.50 a day the total strike loss was $60,000,000.

Settlement of the New York garment workers strike does not have any effect on the garment workers strikes at Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Rochester and elsewhere. One good thing the New York strikers did and that was to eject I.W.W. agents from their mass meeting. The same wise action was taken by the Philadelphia strikers. The New York strikers were so many, 150,000, that it is not strange that two or three thousand are still holding out against the settlement agreed upon by their leaders and the employers. This opposition is engineered by I.W.W. organizers. These malcontents wrecked the office of the Jewish paper, Forward, for printing the terms of settlement. That was an attack upon the freedom of the press, which is guaranteed by the Constitution.

Riots are occurring at Boston in connection with the garment workers strike. The object is to prevent non-union workers entering the shops. That is an attack on the freedom of the individual, also guaranteed by the Constitution.

A continued strike has caused the financial failure of the Mitchell, Watchung silk factory at Plainfield, N. J., with liabilities of $120,000. Here we have wages lost by strike and then no work upon which to earn wages later. Killed both ways, and because of an unnecessary strike.

Bombs are being thrown among girl strikebreakers in New York.

Despite the massed picketing of 2000 striking garment workers all the Rochester (N. Y.) clothing factories have resumed operations. About 40 per cent. of the factory employees have gone back to work. The strikers say only 200 have gone back, but that is silly, because the many factories could not do anything with a work force of only 200 among them all. Seven thousand women garment workers are on strike at Boston, led by Miss Josephine Casey, a New York organizer. White slavers are busy among them with deceptive but alluring offers.

Again there is serious unrest among the cotton workers of Lancashire, Eng.

There is an absolute deadlock in the taxicab strike at London, Eng.

A dock strike of 2000 at the Grimsby Docks, England, by a wage increase of 9 cents a day, with overtime on Saturdays, from 1 o'clock, instead of from 2 o'clock.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

No stronger testimony to the fact that the United States is a country of high wages, far higher than those of other countries, can be noted than the record of constant and heavy growth of the deposits in our savings banks—primarily the wage-earners' bank.

Here is the abridged record of such deposits for the past fifty years:

1872	735,046,805
1882	966,797,081
1892	1,758,329,618
1902	2,650,104,496
1905	3,093,077,357
1908	3,679,182,391
1910	4,070,486,247
1911	4,212,583,599
1912	4,451,818,522
Increase in fifty years	4,282,383,983
Increase in ten years	1,801,714,036

The depositors in our savings banks are so many that a very large majority of them must (as is well known) be wage-earners, depositing weekly some part of their wages as a reserve for the "rainy day" which comes to all of us at some time or another.

Note the growth in the number of savings banks and of depositors therein:

Year—	Savings banks.	Depositors therein.
1862	289	787,943
1872	577	1,902,047
1882	629	2,710,354
1892	1,059	4,781,605
1902	1,036	6,666,672
1905	1,237	7,696,229
1908	1,453	8,705,848
1910	1,759	9,142,908
1911	1,884	9,794,647
1912	1,922	10,010,304
Increase in fifty years	1,633	9,222,361
Increase in ten years	886	3,343,632

As further proof the fact that our high wage scale accounts for the enormous total of deposits in our savings banks note the totals of similar deposits and number of depositors in other countries (see report of the Comptroller of the Currency for 1912:)

Country—	Savings depositors.	Savings deposits.
United States	10,010,304	$4,451,818,522
Germany	21,534,034	3,993,775,184
Austria	4,118,295	1,161,149,241
United Kingdom	14,219,080	1,117,110,447
France	14,197,135	1,084,230,303
Italy	7,454,671	807,159,527
Russia	8,189,734	784,117,885
Switzerland	1,889,282	302,196,216
Australia	1,600,112	289,039,353
Sweden	2,136,076	229,401,283
Belgium	2,947,750	206,212,879
Denmark	1,166,997	174,182,302
Japan	19,450,628	165,003,616
Norway	1,001,310	135,888,457
Netherlands	1,942,342	107,758,077

No other country in the world has as much as $100,000,000 on deposit in its savings banks.

The American wage-earner leads the wage-earners of all countries in the average size of his savings bank account, as witness:

United States	$444.73
Canada	404.55
Austria	281.88
Belgium	248.52
Italy	206.13
Germany	185.46
Australia	180.64
Switzerland	159.63
United Kingdom	139.58
Norway	135.71
Sweden	133.92
Russia	95.74
France	89.67
Denmark	80.28
Japan	8.72

Nothing but high wages contributed so largely to the foregoing eminently favorable American results in savings.

Weekly Wages to Males in California.

The California Bureau of Labor Statistics investigated the wages paid to 107,950 male workers in the State and found the following:

Earning weekly—	Per cent. of whole.
Less than $3	0.1
$3 to $5.99	1.4
$6 to $8.9	5.3
$12 to $14.99	7.8
$15 to $17.99	17.6
$18 to $20.99	15.3
$21 to $24.99	14.8
$25 and over	[illegible]

It speaks well for California that the greater per cent. of working males in the State earn the highest wages, namely, $25 and over per week.

Wages Paid British Railway Clerks.

The fixed minimum and maximum wages paid yearly to British railway clerks are:

Line—	Minimum.	Maximum.
Midland	$ 97.33	$583.90
London and Northwestern	121.66	535.31
Great Northern	126.52	486.65
Great Western	97.33	486.65
Great Central	97.33	486.65
Cheshire Lines	97.33	437.98
North Eastern	72.99	437.98
Metropolitan District	146.42	437.98
Great Eastern	97.33	506.11
Furness Railway	83.24	364.98
Midland, Ireland	189.79	379.66
Great Northern, Scotland	97.33	316.32
London Electric	153.83	417.34
Metropolitan ..N.	97.33	486.65
Great Northern, Ireland	170.32	389.32
North British	72.99	486.65
London Southwestern	145.99	486.63
London and Brighton	126.52	379.66
Railway Clearing House	97.33	583.98
Caledonian	72.99	510.96
Glasgow Southwestern	72.99	535.51
Highland	97.33	367.46

American railway clerks can compare these wages with what they are getting and thank their stars that they are where they are.

Increased Food Prices in England.

In 1912 as compared with 1911 the prices of sixteen of the principal food commodities in England increased per cent. as follows:

Food commodity—	Per cent. increased price.
Tapioca	18.4
Oatmeal	15.2
Marmalade (an English necessity)	14.9
Rice	11.2
Sugar	10.5
Cheese	9.9
Bread	9.1
Beef	7.5
Flour	5.5
Bacon	5.2
Butter	4.7
Mutton	3.9
Eggs	3.3
Raisins	2.3
Pork	1.5
Potatoes	.9

The advance in retail prices of food in England continued through the year 1912, and the index number for the year was 5.1 per cent. higher than for 1911, being the greatest increase in any year since statistics on the subject have been kept. The 1912 prices were 14.9 per cent. higher than those of 1900. We do not hear so much talk nowadays of England, if a low-wages country, being a cheap country to live in. American living costs are not nearly as much higher than English living costs, as are American wages higher than English wages.

Southern Pacific Company Average Wages.

Position—	Avg. wages, per day.
General officers	$13.22
Other officers	7.31
General office clerks	1.90
Station agents	2.67
Other station men	2.23
Engineers	6.23
Firemen	3.88
Conductors	5.75
Trainmen	3.76
Machinists	4.34
Carpenters	2.46
Other shopmen	2.94
Section foremen	2.67
Trackmen	1.38
Switch tenders and watchmen	1.55
Telegraph operators and dispatchers	3.50

What kick should there be coming as to wages like these?

The European Travel Alphabet.

[Lippincott's:] Hiram Jones had just returned from a personally conducted tour of Europe.

"I suppose," commented a friend, "that when you were in England you did as the—"

"No," moodily responded the returned traveler, "I didn't. I did as the Americans do. I dropped my V's and X's."

Then he slowly meandered down to mortgage extended.

Obey the Law.

MEANING OF A SQUARE DEAL.

THE AGITATION AGAINST CITY ATTORNEY FREDERICKS.

Praise from San Francisco Because This City Has Stood Up for the Right and Its Prosecuting Officers Bring to Court Those Who Violate the Law.

[San Francisco Commercial News:] The Los Angeles labor oligarchy is agitating the recall of City Attorney Fredericks, and if the average fair-minded person were asked to guess the reason it is doubtful if he would in many efforts come anywhere near the answer.

The professed reason for this attitude is that before the election the attorney promised to give the labor forces a "square deal."

That would mean that so long as labor went along on a lawful footing and attended to its business in that way, and in no other way, it would be protected in the enjoyment of whatever rights it might have—just as would any other citizen or group of citizens.

That is the unavoidable construction that would be placed upon any such declaration as a starting point.

That would, on the other hand, mean that if labor or any element of it did something that was against the law, it would be held accountable, just as it would be expected that any one else would be, no matter who he was or to what he belonged.

If any other reading could be had of the law it would clearly end in a degree of confusion and of incompetence that would turn all reasonable people against the law.

There was no apparent dissent among the sensible, law-respecting people of the land because a few capitalists faced prison terms and fines. The press, as a rule, seemed to think it one of the natural consequences of violation of a law.

On the part of the Socialist and the anarchist press there was naturally undisguised pleasure—almost as pronounced as that which is manifest when some red-handed murderer escapes the clutches of the law.

Only when a man like the unspeakable Haywood is turned loose upon the public, or a dangerous man like Darrow is in fair way to outwit the law, or an agitator like Gompers holds a well-earned prison term at arm's length while he advises us what to do with other lawbreakers, does the emphatic joy of the degenerate press approach the measure poured out when a capitalist is fined or imprisoned.

All of which is only natural, because the half-baked wits that run such enterprises understand well that no penalty will attach to the assault upon the interests that make it possible for them to eke out their miserable livelihood.

We have had our share of this sort of thing—in fact, more than our share—and we have submitted to it with the most amazing and cowardly complacency.

Los Angeles has also had a good deal of this sort of thing to contend with.

We are loth to think just how deep in the mire we would have been had it fallen to our lot to do what Los Angeles has done in this respect to promote half-way decent respect for the law, by seriously opposing law breakers and by attempting to punish them, once apprehended.

It is very much to be feared that we would not have had the courage to even start the crusade that ultimately landed the McNamaras in jail.

But having done so as compelled by the plain terms of the law, the attorney who is now prosecuting Darrow for bribery, because that is also a part of his plain, unescapable duty, has not, in the estimation of the leaders of labor, given it a square deal.

It is not of record that Mr. Fredericks has gone out of his way to prosecute any one connected with labor, or that he has done anything more than to prosecute people charged with and indicted for crimes.

If there is anything in this transaction that labor construes as lacking in any of the elements of the square deal, then it must be that labor upholds and sympathizes with criminals.

If there is any other construction we should be glad to apply it, for it is certainly a dreadful thing to have to think that any set of men, set by act and declaration professedly outlaws, should have the audacity to protest against the attempt to convict and punish murderers and bribers and other criminals.

If it should become known that the rank and file of labor accepts and approves this altogether impossible attitude of some of the leaders and spokesmen for labor then will it have earned the contempt of every moral, self-respecting human being.

There can be but one construction of what constitutes a square deal. There can be only one sort of a square deal—that is for all; any other sort of a square deal is the rankest sort of a misnomer, moreover, it is a rank fraud.

You might just as well accept that fact now, gentlemen; it will save you much time and many anxious moments to do so.

Strikers Use the "Water Cure."

[New York Herald:] A Pittsburgh dispatch says the police reserves were called from the Lawrenceville district station to quell a riot at the Crucible Steel Company's plant.

The police found 300 strikers in the mill yard giving the water cure to fellow-workmen who were reluctant to join the strike.

The stubborn ones were held securely by strikers and a stream of water from a hose was turned into their faces. Those who did not succumb to milder treatment had the water turned down their throats.

Most of the trouble was over before the police arrived. This water cure was effective as a persuader. The men who got the treatment promised to walk out and those who witnessed the performance joined the strikers before being subjected to the wet coercion.

Strikers Battle Workers.

[New York Sun:] Following a strike of section hands on the New York branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Torresdale there was a battle today between the strikers and the men who remained loyal to the company. A hundred policemen were sent to the scene and thirty-five arrests were made.

The trouble started at Bristol when the men complained to an assistant superintendent, who refused their demands. After marching to Torresdale they began to intimidate employees who wouldn't strike. The tracks were crowded with strikers and many narrowly escaped being struck by the New York express trains.

A SQUARE DEAL OR NONE AT ALL.

We Have Good Alfalfa Lands To Sell—But Not To Speculators.

Bluntly speaking, we have no time or place for either speculators or land sharks. San Jacinto needs farmers, farm hands and mechanics. Lots of room if you come under that classification—and none if you don't.

The Great Willow Plume alfalfa section is ready, and the price is right—that we guarantee.

Bermuda onions the size of saucers with flavor unsurpassed by the best that Texas ever grew. Premium potatoes, both Irish and sweet; every old thing does fine here. The cantaloupes, melons and last but not least, the pumpkins, and, say, you never saw such pumpkins in your life, from fifty to one hundred and sixty-five pounds. See the exhibit at the Board of Trade Office now—a little later, everywhere.

Mr. Smith, ex-city bookkeeper, has twenty acres in the Willow Plume section, part in alfalfa, part diversified. He will tell you that he banks $2500.00 per year after providing for two families. You can't buy his ranch for $600 an acre, but you can buy right beside him for $250.00, including water—The difference is for you. He has a fine Ford touring car and sees a few things besides.

Every place is a show place in San Jacinto Valley; everybody helps everybody else out here. Come over and see if you don't feel that way about it. The water is fine, and the wind is certainly blowing this way. It stops, however, when it gets here—you will notice that, also.

Goldfield.

SIGNIFICANT CHANGE MADE.

Consolidated's Superintendent Has Retired.

Well-Known Engineer Fills His Position.

Associate of Wingfield Becomes Bank Official.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) March 14.—An important change has just taken place in the official family of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company. Joseph F. Thorn, for the past two years general superintendent of the mines of the Consolidated, and his assistant, Charles Kaeding, retired from their respective positions the first of the week and Albert Burch, a well-known mining engineer and formerly consulting engineer of the property, assumed the duties of general manager. Messrs. Thorn and Kaeding were formerly connected with a big mining property in Corea and have an offer to return to that country, but have not yet made up their minds. Last Tuesday the office associates of Thorn presented him with a magnificent silver loving cup.

The final report of the Goldfield Consolidated for the month of January has just been made public, and shows that the output of the company is on the ascending scale with a vengeance. During the month the company's production was 27,169 tons, containing $535,736.21, and the net realization was $327,956.25. The estimate for the month of February shows a net realization of $348,000 and the actual report which will be submitted later may largely exceed the estimate. It is understood that the production so far this month is a reminder of the bonanza days of two or three years ago when the monthly net realization was always in excess of $500,000. It is said by persons in a position to know that the Consolidated never looked better than now.

Quite a sensation was caused here last Tuesday when a woman, who had been known since coming to Goldfield as Mrs. R. L. Drew, shot her husband, Herbert Nash of Los Angeles, just as he was in the act of boarding a train for his California home, taking with him their 4-year-old boy. Nash was taken to the hospital where an examination showed that the bullet from the small "automatic" had entered his neck but had not inflicted a mortal wound. The woman was arrested but later released on bond.

California Mines.

WILL OPEN NEW ERA FOR RONI.

Big Electric Smelter Is to Operate Soon.

Large Deposit of Coal Is Brought to Light.

Deal Is Pending for Port Wine Claims.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

REDDING (Cal.) March 14.—With the advent of April, a new iron mining era will be incepted in California. In the first week of that month the Noble Electric Steel Company expects to place two 100-ton furnaces in commission at its Heroult smelter, to be early followed by three more. This will give the company a total capacity of 1000 tons of pig iron per day.

Construction work on the first two furnaces has been completed and the electric connections are made. Each furnace will consume [illegible] horse power per day, and is expected to produce iron at a cost that will effectively compete with the eastern product in Coast markets.

Several companies have contracted to purchase the output, as prior tests have demonstrated the ability of the Noble Electric people to produce iron of exceptionally fine quality.

The blowing in of the two furnaces culminates seven years of experiment and an expenditure of approximately $1,000,000. A vast tonnage of high grade magnetite ore has been developed in the Pit River mines of the company, and with an output of 1000 tons of pig iron per day it is considered practically certain that the company will reap splendid profits from its enterprise.

The company has built a large by-product plant for the manufacture of charcoal, acetic acid, wood alcohol, creosote oils, tar and other products from wood. The charcoal is employed in smelting the ore, the electric current finding in this material a great ally in reducing the iron ore.

Considerable Southern California capital is interested in the Noble Electric Steel Company, and the complete success of the enterprise is expected to result in the building of similar plants in southern districts, where natural conditions are favorable for production of pig iron by electrical means. It is understood the Noble Electric interests have already [illegible]

RICH POCKET IS LIKE BONANZA.

TIGHTNER GETS LARGE VALUES IN LEDGE.

Holdings to Be Joined With Red Star, Which Is Held Under Bond. Engineers Accomplish Feat at Brunswick—Nevada County Leads, Says Blue Book.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

NEVADA CITY, March 11.—The Tightner mine of Alleghany City, is attracting attention of late. Each foot is of more and richer ore. The reported rich pocket encountered about four months ago has apparently proved to be a ledge and has yielded $180,000 in gold bullion. In January alone about $95,000 worth was produced. The company is working about twenty-five men and keeps a ten-stamp mill running steadily.

Plans are that it is the intention of the Tightner management to connect the tunnel with the Red Star workings, where H. L. Johnson took out a large amount of bonanza ore some years ago, and upon which the Tightner people have a bond.

ENGINEERING FEAT.

About two miles southwest of Nevada City is the Brunswick, one of the well-known mines of the district. A depth of something like 1800 feet on a forty-three degree incline has been attained. The shaft follows the dip of the vein, from which has been mined and milled a large quantity of ore.

It was decided about two years ago by the management to sink a verttical two-compartment shaft about 3000 feet north of the old incline shaft to strike the latter at the 1250-foot level. When the new vertical shaft reached the 400-foot level, so much water was encountered that it was almost impossible to continue sinking.

The management then decided to start an up-raise from the 1250-foot level and meet the shaft at the 400 level. This necessitated making a vertical up-raise of 474 feet, work which required considerable accuracy in order that the shaft might be met. This difficult engineering feat was accomplished by F. M. Miller, county surveyor of Grass Valley, and E. C. Uren of Nevada City, who made the difficult surveys and finally located the point where they believed the upraise should be made.

The work was begun in August of last year and when at last the upraise broke into the shaft it w,as found that the calculations were perfect.

The Brunswick mine now has two good shafts for hoisting ore and ventilation. A large Dow electric pump, costing about $7000, has been installed, which handles 1200 gallons of water per minute easily. A new twenty-stamp mill will be erected at the mouth of the new shaft, to handle the output from the lower levels, but the old mill of twenty stamps at the mouth of the old incline shaft will continue to handle the ore stoped from the upper levels.

The management is also installing a new 220-horse power air compressor which will have a capacity of 1500 cubic feet per minute. It is to cost about $6000.

NEVADA COUNTY.

According to the Blue Book, just issued by Secretary of State Jordan, Nevada county is the banner county for gold production, having yielded more than $275,000,000 in gold since 1849, about $50,000,000 in the last twenty years, and more than $3,500,000 in 1912. The State produced $19,988,486, in 1912, which makes California the leading State in the Union, for gold production, according to the figures given in the publication.

SECRET ORGANIZATION?

Mining Men Who Form Institution for Mutual Benefit Do Not Reveal Happenings at Meeting.

TUCSON (Ariz.) March 14.—About thirty of the most prominent mining operators of Arizona met in this city Monday and organized for mutual benefit, with J. Park Channing of Miami at their head.

Among those present were G. H. McDowell of Douglas, assistant general manager of the Copper Queen; Albert L. Waters of Tucson, general manager of the Pioneer Smelting Company; Capt. William McDermot, Tucson; Edward Sander, Courtland; Will L. Clark, Jerome; A. T. Thomson, Morenci; Edgar A. Collins, Pearce; Norman Carmichael, Clifton; K. Kennedy, John W. C. Wilson, John W. Wanvig, Jr., J. E. Bentley, R. R. Richardson, Patagonia; M. M. Skaling, Morenci; P. G. Beckett, Globe; S. Marcus, Solomonville; F. A. Woodward, George T. Wilson, F. F. Towle, Globe; C. E. Mills, Miami; W. G. McBride, J. G. Jackson, Courtland; R. L. Downing, Olive Camp; J. S. Smith, John C. Greenway, Bisbee; W. E. Worthington, Cananea; Ralph Cameron, Flagstaff; Frank M. Murphy, Prescott.

Just what was done at the meeting has not been divulged, but Mr. Channing denies that any discussion was had of strikes, lockouts or similar matters. He said, "the resources of Arizona were most carefully considered and discussed and a very pronounced spirit of optimism was experienced."

Will Open New Era.

control of vast iron deposits in Madera county, with the intention of eventually erecting an electric smelter.

It is necessary that electricity be generated cheaply in districts where this method of smelting is employed, else the production cost militates against the economical output of the commercial metal. In this respect Heroult is an ideal location as an enormous volume of electric power can be generated at comparatively slight expense.

DEVELOP COAL.

The Yreka Development Company has commenced the extensive drilling of its coal acreage, near Ager, Siskiyou county. Three seams of good grade have been uncovered in preliminary prospecting, with the main deposit eight feet thick. The holdings cover about 3000 acres, and the work now under way is to determine the extent and value of entire deposit. If results are satisfactory the management plans to place a large force of men at work and open the property along comprehensive lines.

The deposit is considered the most promising coal proposition in the northern section of California, and development of commercial coal will mean much for industrial expansion in the county and adjoining sections.

Big Deal Pending.

Negotions are in progress for the transfer of a number of drift-gravel mines in the port wine section, Sierra county, to a group of San Francisco and Southern California capitalists, headed by F. M. Phelps. Several of the properties were formerly heavy producers, such ones being included as the Highland Mary, Poverty Hill, Treasure, West Point, Bella Union, Mt. Pleasant, Saw Pit, Lucky Hill, Poor Boy, Kingdom & Judson and Wahoo.

All the claims are located on the Big Blue Lead, the famous gravel channel that has yielded tens of millions in golden treasure. Many of the properties, although considered meritorious, have been worked but slightly since the laws against deposition of debris in streams went into effect.

If the deal is consummated, the new interests plan driving a main adit to under-cut the channel and thoroughly drain the old workings. Raises and drifts will then be extended and the property worked from a central point. Electric power will be arranged for and power drills installed to facilitate rapid work.

The adit will be about one mile long and of sufficient width to permit laying of double tracks for the ore cars. The result will be the rehabilitation of an immense range of gold territory which has yielded phenomenal values in past decades.

CANANEA (Mex.) Feb. 19.—Q.: I am sending under separate cover three samples, none of which I think of value, but as I am unable to name them I should appreciate it very much if you would make determination and publish in your valuable paper. Sample No. 1 comes from Magdalena district, Sonora, Mexico, and was taken from the ground in the form of float. It has the appearance of a decomposed ledge. No. 2 comes from a well-defined ledge near Ft. Rock, Mohave county, Arizona, and might be one of many things, for all I know. What is it? No. 3 comes from a stringer on head-waters of Big Sandy in Mohave county, Arizona, and I do not think it will make a world-famed mine.

"OLD TIMER."

A.: Glad indeed to hear from you. No. 1 is "mountain cork" of the asbestos family of minerals. The sample is somewhat sectile; its fibers are interlaced intimately and in almost imperceptible forms. The fibers cannot be easily separated. The sample floats on water; it is slightly elastic, opaque, feels meager and resembles cork in texture. No. 2 is a rather odd mixture of hematite, ilmenite and magnetite. No. 3 is composed of manganese dioxide, iron oxides, low in iron sulphide percentage, and carries traces of lead with antimony.

Californite and Rhodonite.

PASO ROBLES, Feb. 20.—Q.: I am somewhat interested in gem formations, and am mailing you two samples for classification mineralogically and chemically. The white color of No. 1 is rare to me and I am not certain of my determination of the species. Both samples are from Northern California. W. E. B.

A.: No. 1 is typical white Californite and is probably from the Happy Camp (Cal.) locality. Mineralogically it is Vesuvianite, and it is often confused with jade of the Chinese. The sample possesses a waxy luster and is translucent. "The sp. gr. of the vesuvianite variety of californite is given as from 3.286 to 3.359 and that of white garnet is 3.586." The sp. gr. of your sample is 3.310. It is well to describe the sample further, and it is identical with the quoted matter following: "The color is pure grayish white to gray, with a faint tinge of green and an occasional patch of grass or grass green. The fracture, hardness, grain and toughness are the same as in the green californite, and the mineral ought to be a good substitute for white jade, which it closely resembles. . . . If material in which the bright green patches were more plentiful could be found, it would rival the best qualities of jade. It is not possible definitely to distinguish the massive white variety of vesuvianite from massive white garnet without a detailed chemical analysis, since the two minerals are so similar in both physical and chemical properties. . . . The minerals, garnet and vesuvianite, may be so intimately mixed in some varieties of californite that an absolute determination is not possible. . . . The term californite may be used both for massive compact vesuvianite and for garnet when these cannot be readily distinguished."

The quoted matter is from Mineral Resources of the United States, and some of the matter is of a surprising nature to come from well-trained mineralogists. If the mineral is garnet call it such and exclude the element of doubt.

White garnet (leccite) is but 5.5 to 6 in the scale of hardness, and in sp. gr. varies from 2.483 to 2.49, and vesuvian garnet is but another name for "white garnet."

Further referring to the above-quoted source and we learn that "californite is very tough and has a hardness of about 6.5." For exactness, the word "about" is a misnomer. Vesuvianite is exactly 6.5 in hardness.

If vesuvianite is the chief mineral represented at the locality from which the sample was taken, why not call it such? If the locality is chiefly noted for the bastard mineral compound—garnet and vesuvianite—why name it californite? California would be glad to have mineralogists of the sea-level East to refer to the mineral as californiaite, the abbreviation Calif. is the mark of the tenderfoot, but if the indexers of new minerals insist on the name (excluding the letter "a") let it begin with a capital, at least, otherwise its pronunciation may be confused phonetically with that of some old mummified Caliph of mythology.

Sample No. 2 is a rose-red rhodonite, and it will answer for gem material.

Phosphoric Acid Trace.

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Feb. 20.—Q.: I am sending under separate cover samples of rock and vein matter. I am anxious to know if there is anything of marketable value in the white ashy material. The white stuff is from vein about twelve feet wide, and of about half-mile long. The piece of rock is from the footwall.

D. M. B.

A.: The granular white matter is a compound of silica, lime, gypsum, aluminum, silicate and trace of phosphoric acid. Potash is present 2.45 per cent. There are two friable decomposed rocks with the samples one of which is coated with the granular white matter above referred to, and when broken yellow iron oxide is in the mass with gneiss. Potash sparingly present. The remaining sample is probably altered dolomite (magnesium limestone,) and the lime carbonate now present is chiefly marl. In this sample we find traces of phosphoric acid; potash 2.10 per cent. Nitrates absent in all samples. Probably, in the earth, below the zone from whence samples come a marketable fertilizer-filler may be obtained, but the specimens are not of a very encouraging nature.

Oil Not Indicated.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—Q.: Please find sack of rock, sand, shale, etc., from Yavapai county, Arizona, which appears to carry oil. R. R. E.

A.: Not so in fact! The samples consist of gray-white, iron oxide shaly matter carrying lime carbonate, and the friable white sandstone also carries lime. The sample that would tend to confuse as oil prospect is anthraconite (stinkstone,) which when struck with a hammer gives off an aroma resembling that which cometh from ancient eggs so popular with the Chinese.

Dana suggests that carries bitumen, but so far as your specimen and the probabilities are gen sulphide is the yields the richly sulphur gen odor.

The POWER of the EARTH

It is in the fertility of the soil.

Into the soil the seed is cast; from it springs the fruit that profits the grower. For him the Power of the Earth means wealth.

It is the same seed, cast into the same fertile soil, developing the same fruit, that makes the land valuable. So for the investor the Power of the Earth also means wealth.

Whether you buy land to cultivate, or whether you buy it as an investment, it is the Power of the Earth that creates your profit.

The San Fernando Valley was chosen by the Franciscan Friars as a seat for Christian civilization, more than a century ago, solely on account of its fertility. Their selection was a wise one, as time has proved.

The Van Nuys-Lankershim Lands are the richest part of this valley. Tracts of any size, whether for suburban homes, gardening, fruit growing, dairying or re-subdivision, are now available.

NOW is the psychological time to buy or invest.

The Philippines as a Business Proposition

BY LEWIS R. FREEMAN, the Pasadena Traveler.

[illegible] the voices raised in protest against the permanent occupation of the Philippines by the [illegible], the loudest, the most [illegible] has been that one which has [illegible] the retention of those islands would prove an incessant drain [illegible] resources to the end of [illegible] short, that they would not [illegible]

[illegible] to show why, on the [illegible] of common humanity, we [illegible] indefinitely in the Philippines, and just as easy is it to show [illegible] possession of at least an impregnable naval base there is imperative to the maintenance of that [illegible] in the East which, through [illegible] of trade and world politics, [illegible] will be compelled to endeavor to hold; to show that the possession of this group will reward us [illegible], that in the course of [illegible] similar tropical holdings [illegible] an absolute necessity; to [illegible] the possession of the Philippines will pay, in fact, entails a [illegible] marshalling of facts and [illegible] It is to this end that this [illegible] is written.

[illegible] the most unfortunate characteristics of the American of the [illegible] century was his shortsightedness, his tendency to build for [illegible] and ignore the future. [illegible] destruction of our forests, the construction of short-[illegible] and wooden buildings [illegible] sufficient examples in point. [illegible] of the twentieth century has been marked by an awakening to the menace of an unprovided [illegible] and reforestation, irrigation, [illegible] intensive cultivation, buildings and railroads constructed for centuries instead of [illegible] has been the result. This [illegible] will insure the minimization [illegible] and the ultimate realization of the greatest possible returns [illegible] natural resources. But the supply of products which [illegible] produced within our temperate [illegible] and which we are buying in greatly increased quantities [illegible] year?

[illegible] ON THE TROPICS.

[illegible] import tables of any nation [illegible] that the world is becoming [illegible] dependent upon the [illegible] in food supply, that every [illegible] of the temperate zones is becoming less and less able to feed and clothe itself from within. It is for this reason principally—though the development of controlable markets for their manufactures is also a very potent factor—that the old nations of Europe are striving so unceasingly for holdings in the hitherto despised torrid zone. In the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries spiritual conquest and national glory were the impelling motives driving the Old World nations to colonial acquisition. Such trade as developed was in precious stones and metals, spices and the rich fabrics of the Orient—all luxuries. Today trade is the dominating factor, and luxuries have been crowded into comparative insignificance by the struggle for food and clothing stuffs, for the necessities.

Kidd, in his "Control of the Tropics," writing a number of years ago, says:

"If present conditions are not entirely misleading, we are about to witness an international rivalry for the control of the trade of the tropics on a far vaster scale than any which has hitherto been imagined. It is remarkable that, in the midst of other matters which hold the public mind, but the importance of which is trivial in comparison, the large issues which are involved under this head should have as yet occupied so little attention.

"If we turn at the present time to the import lists of the world and regard them carefully, it will soon become apparent to what a large extent our civilization already draws its supplies from the tropics. Of recent years we have been largely occupied in discussing questions affecting our own industrial production. Yet it is curious to reflect to what a large extent our complex, highly-organized modern life rests on the production of a region of the world to which our relations are either indefinite or entirely casual—a region which has, it must be remembered, hitherto produced no example of government successful in the European sense, but towards which, nevertheless, no political party and no school of thought have so far set forth any scheme or policy either consistent in itself or possessing the merit of being generally accepted in principle."

INTERNATIONAL RIVALRY.

The intensity of international rivalry for the control of tropical trade has increased with the passing of the years since this was written, and it is certainly a fair contention to say that the American government of the Philippines has, in many respects, furnished an example of a policy the lack of which is indicated in the second paragraph.

Europe long ago was driven to the measures of conservation which we are so tardily adopting in America, and the present struggle for tropical holdings is but a continuation of the policy of prevision which prompted that conservation. The production of food and clothing stuffs was increased until a possible limit was in sight; then was precipitated the struggle which is now on for the control of various sources of tropical supply. The United States, young, rich and, in the contemplation of what it has been the fashion to refer to as our "inexhaustible natural resources," heedless of the morrow, has not yet felt the pinch of hunger that has driven the European nations on "foraging expeditions" to the tropics; and yet our export of foodstuffs has decreased with startling rapidity as home demand has risen, while just as rapidly has increased the value of products which we have bought from tropical countries. And still, with our characteristic American carelessness of the future, there is no doubt that, but for the accident of the Spanish War and the sudden accession of tropical holdings which followed it, we would have given no attention to a matter which European nations have come to believe vital to their existence. If one questions this, let him consider how even now, with islands in our possession which are capable of supplying the tropical products demanded by our country for centuries to come, we have still not had the courage and foresight to outline a definite policy looking to their permanent retention.

Our imports from tropical and subtropical countries have increased until for the year 1909 they were in excess of 500 million dollars. Our exports to these countries amount to but 300 million dollars, leaving a balance against us of over 200 million dollars. These countries, as a rule, sell most of their products to us and use the money for making purchases in the cheaper markets of Europe. Germany, England, France, Belgium and the other European countries maintain favorable balances with nearly all of the tropical countries, while those countries that supply the United States with sugar, tobacco, coffee, cocoa, fibers, fruit, vegetable oils, silks, spices, etc., are the only ones where we buy more than we sell.

OUR BALANCES.

In 1909 the United States bought 108 million dollars' worth of Brazilian rubber, coffee and minor products, selling in return but an aggregate of twenty-three million dollars' worth of its own; from Cuba it took 122 million dollars' worth of sugar and tobacco and sold there 52 millions; it took 62 millions, mostly in raw silk, from Japan, and sold 21 millions worth of American goods; it bought 70 million dollars' worth of spices, rubbers, fibers, etc., from the British East Indies, selling nine million dollars' worth in return. Java and the South and Central American countries right through show about the same balance against us.

The Insular Bureau of Agriculture estimates that the various islands of the Philippine group, with their aggregate area of over 125,000 square miles, can produce several times the value of products now imported by the United States from tropical and subtropical foreign countries. It is a very significant fact that those countries having the greatest balance of trade against the United States are the ones that furnish the bulk of the things that could be produced in the Philippines, and what should appeal to every thoughtful man is the tremendous importance of the development of those islands to the future prestige and commerce of the United States; for when that country is producing in the Philippines, its own territory, whose markets it controls, these things for which it has now to depend on foreign countries from which it receives slight compensating trade in return, it will wield a power over the commerce of the world such as its possessions, now encircling the Pacific, enable it to exert in world politics. For it will then be possible to say to Brazil, "We have our own coffee and rubber;" to Cuba and Java, "We have our own sugar and tobacco;" to Japan and to Italy, "We have our own raw silk," and to each of these, and to all the others in the same class, we can say, "We will take such

Once Stronghold of Gambling Now Aspiring to Be Model Home Community and Business Center.

MONROVIA, March 15.—Arcadia, known over the United States as the home of the late "Lucky" Baldwin and among Californians as one of the last strongholds of race track gambling, will, in the near future have a new kind of fame, if the plans of the present Board of Trustees and the managers of the Baldwin estate are carried through.

Situated at the intersection of three railroads and lying in the heart of a rich farming country, the little town has ambitions to become a thriving business center. The check to racing at Santa Anita was the first step forward. Some time later, the town was voted dry, and the new order of things began in earnest. Then the Oakwood, another relic of the early days, burst mysteriously into flames, and the old days were forever done. Now that the city has been swept clean, the townsmen are planning great things in the way of public improvements.

Last December, a municipal election was called for the purpose of voting on a $50,000 school bond issue. The bonds failed to carry, largely because of the small vote. Not in the least discouraged the backers of the good school movement kept at work and on January 27, another election was ordered for the same purpose, this time the amount of the bonds being lowered to $25,000. The second election carried the bonds by a majority of eighty-six to eighteen. Yesterday, the bonds were ordered sold by the Board of Supervisors to Torrance, Marshall & Co. of Los Angeles, the highest bidders, at a premium of $212.

Two new schools will be erected by the city, one in Arcadia proper, which is to accommodate the higher grades, and the other in the lower end of the district, which heretofore has had no educational facilities. The old building which is now in use, will be remodeled and used for the first and second grades.

The latest project of the city fathers of Arcadia is the erection of a suitable building in which to transact the municipal business. To this end, G. E. Parker, one of the members of the Board of Trustees, has been appointed to make investigations as to the cost of a structure in which the town may carry on its civic work.

When the Huntington drive is completed, it will pass directly through the town, and will, without doubt, do much to place the little city in the minds of the traveling public. The citizens of Arcadia have recently graded and scraped the streets of the place, many of which had never known a shovel or scraper since they were first laid out.

Ontario Investor Pays Cash for Ranch of Nearly Seven Hundred Acres—Will Improve Holding.

ONTARIO, March 15.—J. H. Lewis of this city, has bought through the agency of W. H. Lindley, the 673-acre ranch of J. C. Sommers, about five miles north and east of Ontario, for a reported consideration of $45,000 cash.

The deal is one of the largest made in the western end of San Bernardino county in several months and indicates that the recent freeze has not put a quietus on the demand for acreage. The Sommers ranch is picturesquely located along the foothills and contains about forty acres of lemons and oranges. The rest being unimproved land.

The buyer owned a ranch adjoining his new purchase, for several years and intends to start improving the foothill lands at once.

of your products as we need, but you must buy also of ours to an equal amount."

PORTO RICO AN EXAMPLE.

Porto Rico offers a practical example of what may be done in the Philippines. That island has an area of 3500 square miles and a population of a million. In 1909 the people of Porto Rico sold to the United States $32,095,783 worth of their own products, and to other countries $5,822,154, a total of $37,918,390. They bought from the United States $27,098,154, and from other countries $3,537,201, making a total for imports of $30,635,355, and a grand total for external commerce of $68,553,745.

The Philippines have about thirty-six times the area and eight times the population of Porto Rico, as well as a diversity of resource in minerals and hardwoods that the latter island does not enjoy. With soil that is at least as fertile, and with a climate that is undoubtedly more favorable to many kinds of tropical agriculture, it is clear that the Filipino should at least produce as much per capita as the Porto Rican, and it is obvious that, producing as much, he will also consume a corresponding ratio of imported commodities. Had the Philippines bought as much per capita from the United States as Porto Rico did last year we would have sold there 216 millions worth of our products instead of sixteen millions. This trade would be clear gain, for we would not buy a dollar's worth of products of those islands that we are not now buying from other countries over which the United States has no control and which do not give a compensating trade in return.

At the lowest estimate there is a commerce of between five and six hundred million dollars awaiting the investment of capital to bring it into being. And it should all go to America, flowing back and forth between Philippine and American ports in American ships, just as the products of the Pacific and Atlantic coasts are hauled back and forth across the American continent by the railways. Population, soil, climate are already provided; the one thing needed is capital backed by an experienced, intelligent directing force. To get capital to come to the Philippines there must be an assurance of entire freedom in the markets of the United States, with an equitable measure of protection on such products as would come into competition with those of foreign countries whose industries are already established. Capital cannot be expected to enter the Philippines unless its products are guaranteed access to a permanent, profitable market.

In the development of the Philippines lies the possibility of giving great impetus to the rehabilitation of the American Merchant Marine. The value of cargo carried in American ships from the United States to the Philippines increased from two to five million dollars in value in the single year from 1909 to 1910. These figures are not large in themselves, but their import is significant. With the Philippines buying 250 millions worth of American products each year, with a return commerce of equal amount, and with Hawaiian and Porto Rican shipping increasing in like proportion, the Stars and Stripes will be getting back to the place they once occupied on the high seas.

GROWING NEEDS.

Since we are considering the Philippines as a business proposition there is another point which should not be overlooked in connection with their development. As business there increases with the growth of industry, and the people attain a consuming capacity consonant with their capacity to produce, the requirements of this market (which the United States will, of course, control) will necessitate the carrying of permanent stocks in Manila which also can be drawn upon to supply the trade of China. United States manufacturers will then have an advantage in the competition for Chinese trade that cannot be secured by those of other countries, for the reason that no European country has a base in this part of the Orient with a territory waranting it to carry a really large stock in supplying. The great ports of China are but a few days' voyage from Manila. China is developing rapidly; the building of railways is giving a strong impetus to industry throughout the Empire, and a spirit of progressiveness is bringing that wonderful country and its people into more intimate relations, commercially as well as politically, with the outside world.

Under present conditions of trade in China several months must elapse from the time goods are ordered in Europe or America before they are received. Nearly all purchases are made through brokers, by Chinese jobbers and distributors, for future delivery, and the elements that determine the source of supply are the daily price and the rate of exchange. But the long period of time intervening between the date of purchase of goods and their delivery injects a very serious element of hazard into business, besides involving the investment of an unusual amount of capital as compared with the volume of business transacted. The Chinese are keen business men and quick to take advantage of a favorable opportunity. It will not be long ere they come to see the advantage of buying in a market so close as Manila, even at a slight increase in original cost, for they will realize that the necessity of buying heavily and carrying abnormal stocks will thereby be eliminated; also that requirements can be more accurately anticipated and that a tremendous saving can be effected by the great reduction that will result in the amount of capital necessary to conduct their business. Here, more than anywhere else, lies the opportunity for the United States to break down the commanding lead of Europe in the race for the incalculably valuable prize of Chinese trade.

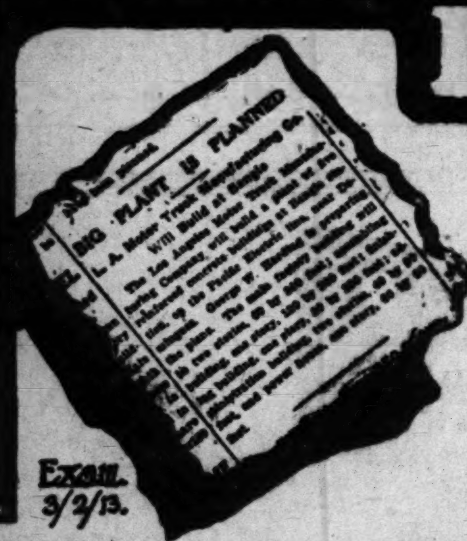
Another Big Factory For Los Angeles



BIG PLANT IS PLANNED
L. A. Motor Truck Manufacturing Co. Will Build at Bangle
Exam. 3/2/13.

Los Angeles Motor Truck Manufacturing Company to Create a Distinctive New Type of Truck — —for which a large number of orders have already been received

THE rapidly increasing demand for motor trucks and their importance as an economical and permanent factor in nearly all lines of our commercial life, has led to the formation of this Company by coterie of prominent business men in Southern California.

The Motor truck is a time, money and labor saver. It is not only a convenience, but has become a commercial necessity.

Unlike the automobile built for pleasure, with its fads and changing styles—the motor truck is built for permanency and its life does not depend upon graceful lines or public fancy, but upon its year in and year out service. The use of motor trucks has really but just begun. Talk to almost any merchant, manufacturer or farmer and he will tell you that just as soon as he can purchase a truck, built along strictly mechanical lines, that he can absolutely depend upon (not a truck body on a pleasure vehicle frame) at a reasonable price, he will discard his horses. Hence the building of motor trucks is a safe, a permanent and a highly remunerative industry.

Backed By Men of Large Experience

This Company has been formed by a number of Southern California's most substantial business men for the purpose of satisfying a demand which already exists and which is rapidly growing from year to year. As proof of this fact, the Company has now on hand and in sight orders that will keep its plant working for many months.

The Company has been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. W. B. Joslyn, E. E., A. E., who has been connected with the automobile industry practically from its inception and who for several years was in charge of the experimental department—the real heart—of the E-M-F Company (now the Studebaker Corporation,) where all the ideas generated in the minds of the different engineers are worked out, tested and either adopted or discarded.

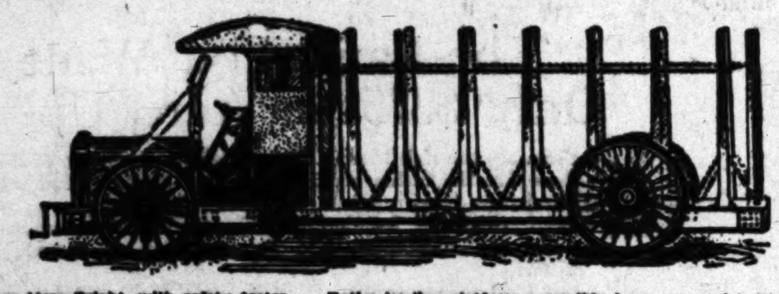
Mr. Joslyn's wide and varied experience and thorough knowledge of the industry eminently fits him for the position of General Manager.

The Company has also been fortunate in securing as mechanical engineer Mr. M. S. Walton, M. E., A. E., who drove, operated and exhibited the first gasoline-propelled vehicle in the State of Illinois, and he is a mechanical engineer and designer of marked ability, having been affiliated with the automobile industry for the past twenty years.

Patent "Underslung" Double Worm Driven Motor Truck

In this truck we produce a machine that will stand the strain of heavy work, run continuously and carry large loads at a minimum cost for upkeep and repair.

At the same time we will be able, on account of simplicity of construction and low operating cost, to build and put on the market a ten-ton truck for less money and make a greater margin of profit than is possible with other manufacturers on a five-ton truck.



Absolutely rigid underslung chassis. Low center of gravity. Loading platform less than two feet above the ground. Ample road clearance. Drive through double worms to each rear wheel. All parts housed—dust and dirt proof. Wheels all steel. Built up section, indestructible.

All bearings Hess-Bright, with safety factor of 75 per cent. Worm driven loading winze—always ready for immediate operation without shifting gears or clutches. Simple construction. Highly efficient. Very powerful.

Entire loading platform accessible from rear and both sides. Every working part, including bearings, drives, etc., accessible for inspection. Repairs can be made without removing parts other than those to be worked upon—thus eliminating excessive labor and repair bills.

Limited Offering of Stock for Public Subscription

The Company is incorporated under the laws of California, with a capital stock of one million dollars, divided into shares of par value of $1.00 each. Stock is all common and on the same basis—no preferred or Treasury stock and the Company making all sales direct. Stock is issued only when paid for in full; no promotion or bonus stock of any kind, and not a share has been sold for less than par. A large amount of the stock has already been placed and a limited amount is now offered for public subscription at par value.

Terms can be arranged for monthly payments if desired.

To Start Refining.

Announcement is made that actual construction work on the $150,000 asphalt refinery of the United States Asphalt Company in San Luis Obispo county, will begin April 1. The location for the plant is between Avila and San Luis Sulphur Springs. A shipment of steel and equipment was expected yesterday, including ten stills of 300-barrel capacity, ten coolers of 200-barrel capacity, four seventy-horse-power boilers and sixteen condenser plants.

"Wildcat" Showing.

Reports have been quite prevalent of late of the finding of oil in a "wildcat" well drilled by the Standard Oil Company on section 15, 28-27, Kern River, according to a well-informed oil man who recently returned from Bakersfield. He said that the reports indicated that the showing had been found at about 2000 feet, and that the oil appeared to be light, but that as yet, it had not been found in commercial quantities. The Standard has been drilling in the first township west of the Kern River field, and if oil is discovered in this section it will be of marked significance for the district, especially if the product is of light gravity.

Stock for Bonds.

Information is that stockholders of the old Palmer Oil Company have released their holdings of $2,000,000 bonds, and have instead taken stock in the Palmer Union Oil Company, which leaves about $500,000 of the latter's bonds outstanding. The basis of exchange was two shares in the Palmer Union Company for one of the Palmer Oil Company, it is stated. The company is down about 1500 feet with the rotary on its No. 11 well, and at latest advices, it is stated that all wells were producing.

OLD MINE INTERESTS.

Bonanza Champion Recently Sold. Seems Still to Offer Good Prospects for Development.

GLOBE (Ariz.) March 14.—One of the old-time bonanza mines of this section was the Champion, owned by L. J. Webster. From 1875 to 1884 the Champion is credited with having had a production of $200,000 in silver, but it has been idle for twenty-nine years past.

Webster lately sold a half interest in the mine to James A. Fleming, at whose instance a fairly thorough exploration of the property has been made. The mouth of the tunnel through which the property was worked had been covered by a landslide and was difficult to find, but when opened up, the old workings proved to be generally in good shape and within were found a number of ore faces of most promising aspect.

From the old dumps a carload of ore has been sorted running sixty ounces or more in silver to the ton.

It is believed with confidence that within a year construction will be started at Miami upon a modern smelting plant, to handle the concentrates of the immense mills of the Miami and Inspiration companies as well as ore from the hundreds of good mines in the hills nearby.

In the old California mine, four miles north of Globe, the owner, Lyman C. Woods, has just developed a good vein of ore about eighteen inches wide, carrying gold, silver and lead. Woods is sinking a winze from the floor of the main tunnel, where the ore was brought to his attention a few weeks ago by the killing upon that exact spot of four rattlesnakes, found bunched together in hibernation.

UNIONS ARE LIABLE.

Men Prevented From Working May Compel the Unions to Pay Them for the Damage Suffered.

[Baltimore American:] A working glove maker of Millau, in the Aveyron department of France, refused to join the glovemakers' union and his employer, at the union's request, dismissed him. The workman demanded compensation, as the law of 1884, which gave workers the right to form unions, contained a provision recognizing the right of a worker not to become a member.

The dismissed glovemaker sued the glovemakers' union before the Millau courts, where the union was ordered to pay him $320 compensation. The union appealed from the judgment and the case was retried before the court at Montpellier. This court affirmed the judgment but raised the sum to be paid as compensation to $600.

[New York Sun:] By an order filed by Judge Worrell F. Mountain, Hodcarriers' Benevolent and Protective Union No. 4 of Newark and the union's business agent are liable to Sebastiano Torvico for $273.75 damages for preventing Torvico from earning a living.

Torvico testified that at a meeting of the union he was fined $5, but refused to pay. Wherever he sought work he was pursued by the union's agent, who threatened to order a strike if he was employed.

"It's Progressive Saving"

said father.

"Yes, safe investment develops progressive saving," said mother.

(Subject of conversation—Gibraltar.)

In the family, domestic happiness is largely controlled by the profit and loss account, and when the monthly figuring shows a balance on the credit side, contentment enters as inspiration for future labors. Gibraltar, with its experienced executive and directorate, extends its hand to you; offers to let you profit by their experience; allows you to leap the years of study and worry and immediately lay a foundation for an enduring income. To you, the man with $50—the man with $10—or the man with $1.80, Gibraltar's cooperative plan offers an inviting, dividend-earning opportunity. $1.80 down secures 200 shares, payments to be completed in 19 months. $3.60 down and a similar number of payments secures 400 shares. No matter whether you buy 200—400—1000 or 10,000 shares, each dollar has full and equal earning power.

Thus Gibraltar, backed by men of achievement and experience, with over 5300 shareholders, extends its helping hand to you.

Gallwey, $2600; G. H. Kapf, $2600; V. E. Burdick, $2900; W. M. Sorensen, $2550; Robert W. Puckett, $2550; George D. Watson, $2850; C. S. Ashley, $2500, and J. F. McCarrell, $2800.

NEARING COMPLETION.

Twenty houses are reaching completion at Torrance under direction of the California Real Estate and Building Company, and 100 more are being designed by the architectural department of that company. Those now under way are inclusive of the second series put up by this building and sales corporation, the first twenty having already been sold. The company's property at Torrance lies along Arlington street, two blocks from the Pacific Electric depot. The homes are five and six rooms each. A branch office has been opened by the company in the new industrial city, and a building to house a sales force will go up at once. General Manager A. O. Kelliher has appointed a sub-agent to handle this department in co-operation with the Los Angeles offices.

FOR GREATER CONVENIENCE.

In order that the selling of properties owned or controlled by the F. P. Newport-C. O. Middleton Syndicate, may be more effectively handled, the sales force of C. O. Middleton's office has been combined with that of the F. P. Newport Company, with enlarged headquarters in the Central building. Middleton will continue his offices in the Story building, where he will direct the business and the sale of property not strictly embraced in the syndicate operations. C. H. Elmendorff will represent Middleton at the new sales headquarters. The Dominguez Harbor tract, Bellemead, a new residence property, to be opened shortly, in the southwest part of the city, Richland Farms and other properties will be handled through the new offices. Westview terrace will be handled, as heretofore, through Middleton's office.

NEW CITRUS TRACT.

One of the latest large subdivisions to be placed on the market that known as Citrus Cove in Fresno county, about seven miles from Dinuba. The tract has its name from the fact that it lies in a natural cove formed by mountains on three sides. There are between three and four thousand acres in the tract, which was formerly known as the Heine ranch. The land is said to be adapted for citrus fruit, olives, figs, grapes, alfalfa and peaches. The property is being placed on the market by the C. F. DeWitt Company.

ON NORTH GRAND.

An attractive apartment-house is being finished on North Grand avenue, between Temple and Court streets, for Robert S. Moore. The building occupies a ground space of 50x90 feet, and has a total of thirty-three rooms. It is in the shape of a "U," having a large central light court open on the south side. The hall is on the north side, all rooms having south, east or west exposure. A roof garden is a feature. Eiser & Son are the architects.

THE JOY OF THE DREAM.

Afar in the wilderness dreary,
As the sun lowered red in the west,
A pilgrim, all footsore and weary,
Sank down on the desert to rest.

All day he had walked, without compass,
Yet holding sweet Hope by the hand;
She spoke of a city of beauty,
Far off o'er the glistening sand.

Then Faith came and colored the picture,
That Hope had but traced on his mind;
And at last, in the bright, sunny distance,
He saw the fair city outlined.

Yet ever it seemed to elude him—
This city that shone like the day—
And, ever receding before him,
To mock him each step of the way.

But now, just before him, the city
Rose, grand and inviting, to view,
But, alas! he must wait for the morrow
To start on his journey anew.

The flickering shadows grew longer;
A mist hid the face of the sun;
The man closed his eyes on the vision,
The dream and the dreamer were one.

Alone, in the hush of the twilight,
For all of his hope and his trust,
On the sand lay the dust of the dreamer—
At one with the dream of the dust.

Yet who can declare, in his wisdom,
That the vision that bursts on the sight
To gladden the heart at the dawning,
Shall fade with the falling of night?

The vision—ah, who shall declare it
Must lose all its glory and glow?
For death is a specter we dream of,
But life is a phantom we know.

The mirage? It is all, it is nothing;
It is not the earth or the skies;
It is naught to the blind unbeliever;
It is all to the faithful and wise.

For, if life, love and death be but shadows,
And nothing be aught that it seem,
Let us light the dark way with our smiling,
And sing for the joy of the dream.

IN TRACTS OF 5 ACRES OR MORE

SAN FERNANDO MISSION LANDS

This announcement presents to you the opportunity to get a ground floor foothold in the long-famous old San Fernando Mission Lands — admittedly the choicest and richest spot in the great San Fernando Valley—and right in advance of gigantic developments which mean quick and certain value increase.

A group of Los Angeles' leading men with their combined capital, have purchased an enormous acreage of these lands, and for this reason, it is possible to offer them at prices WAY BELOW prevailing acreage prices in this community.

The lands we offer are the very lands the old Franciscan fathers picked out in the early days, because of their unequaled fertility—the lands that have been the agricultural and horticultural wonder of Southern California—where pears, peaches, apricots, walnuts, all deciduous fruits,—are being grown with a profit surpassed nowhere—and rarely equaled—in this great Southwestern empire.

Now Is the Time to Judge Lemon Lands

In addition to our deciduous fruit lands, we have, skirting the foothills above San Fernando, what are absolutely without any question, the choicest lemon lands in the State of California.

In the recent cold spell, not a single leaf of the tenderest young lemon nursery stock was touched.

A prominent citrus expert who has visited all the citrus districts of California, visited these lands last week and proclaimed the conditions here "simply marvelous."

These lands directly adjoin full-bearing lemon groves—where every condition has been conclusively proven to be perfect for the growing of the highest-priced lemons.

The healthful elevation of 1100 feet—the absence of scale—the freedom from fog and frost—are vital features which no one interested in citrus lands can afford to overlook.

No Other Proposition Paralleling This in Importance Has Been Presented to the People of Los Angeles in Recent Years

Electric car service to Los Angeles will be begun March 22nd—a 130-foot paved asphalt boulevard connects with the Van Nuys Boulevard to Los Angeles. The county asphalt boulevard to Chatsworth is now being built directly across the property—and the San Fernando Boulevard is another great highway linking San Fernando with Los Angeles.

The Owens River Distributing Reservoir is now being constructed right on our lands and water will be here within less than 90 days.

Now is undoubtedly the time to invest here—right in the forefront of all this great progress and development—when every dollar invested means big and quick profits.

The San Fernando Mission lands are situated directly adjoining the thriving town of San Fernando, 22 miles from Los Angeles, with its new $60,000 hotel, splendid high school and all modern educational, social and trading advantages.

San Fernando Mission Lands at $300 per acre are the surest and most profitable investment we know of in California today. Seeing is believing. Go out with us and see for yourself the rich, deep loam soil, the beautiful thrifty orchards—the magnificent scenery—the delightful climate. The facts will astonish you and convince you that for profits from the soil or profits from investment—there is nothing around Los Angeles that can compare with the San Fernando Mission Lands.

KNOCKOUT BROWN LUCKY TO GET DRAW DECISION.

[illegible] Anderson Had Him on the Knockout Edge a [illegible] of Times, but Did Not Follow Up His Ad[illegible]—Knockdown for Kayo in Twentieth Earns [illegible] a Draw.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

[illegible] left swing to the jaw, [illegible] Anderson reeling to [illegible] and leaving him prac[illegible] for the last minute of [illegible] earned "Knockout" Brown [illegible] in yesterday's twenty-round [illegible] of Vernon.

[illegible] which might not have [illegible] Anderson been vigilant in [illegible] Brown from im[illegible] and left the honors [illegible] "haymaker" was a sur[illegible] pure and simple, as the [illegible] had beaten Brown so [illegible] from the eleventh round [illegible] the New Yorker was not [illegible] to have a good healthy wal[illegible] his system.

ANDERSON TIRED.

[illegible] came up for the twentieth [illegible] of fatigue. Anderson, [illegible] was the weaker of the two. [illegible] rounds of terrific milling [illegible] heavily on his stamina. [illegible] was the fresher of the two. [illegible] lead, however, was so pro[illegible] that he needed only to hold [illegible] even to earn the verdict. [illegible] came from his corner [illegible] a drowned rat. His sec[illegible] not have wet him more [illegible] had they resorted to a [illegible]. Brown assumed the [illegible]. The Medford man was [illegible] to break ground and protect [illegible] quarters. Brown [illegible] around the ring, landing [illegible] to the body and head. An[illegible], but only feebly.

[illegible] HAYMAKER.

[illegible] SAVE BUD.

[illegible] saved Anderson. They [illegible] the support that ex[illegible] refused. Buoyed up [illegible] Anderson, his defense [illegible] the blows of the now [illegible] when the gong came to [illegible].

[illegible] unhesitatingly sig[illegible].

[illegible] a howl of disapproval [illegible] supporters, and Dan [illegible] into the ring to reg[illegible] protest.

[illegible] you are lucky that you didn't lose your money," laconically remarked Eyton, turning his back on the irate Dan.

The decision, I think, was the only one possible, and this is a view which will be held by a majority of those present after they have carefully dissected the battle, round by round.

ALMOST OUT.

Brown had Anderson practically out in the last round, and might have finished him with another minute of grace. On the other hand, Anderson had Brown on the verge of a knockout half a dozen times earlier in the fight. Brown went to the canvas twice from clean knockdowns, and once for the count of nine, while Anderson was never off his feet.

Brown had a clear and decisive lead for the first ten rounds. In the eleventh, Anderson threw off the lethargy that had enveloped him and shot a short, wicked right to the wind. This completely changed the tide of battle. Brown crumpled under the blow, and slowly sank to the canvas. He was up at the count of three. Anderson whipped a left and right to the jaw and Brown went down on his back. This time he stayed for the count of nine. His superlative courage alone buoyed him up. He was now the legitimate prey of Anderson. One well-directed punch would have ended the battle. But Anderson was merciful. He stood away and let the golden opportunity pass. Brown weathered the round.

BROWN ALMOST IN.

Anderson had Brown on the verge of a knockout three or four times during the succeeding rounds, but always failed to follow up his advantage.

Anderson was master of the situation for the next seven rounds, but he weakened in the nineteenth, and Brown, his strength returning under his marvelous recuperative powers, outfought Bud in the last two rounds.

Eight rounds belonged to Anderson, nine to Brown and three were even.

BROWN IS TIMID.

Brown was the aggressor but at rare intervals. He carried the battle relentlessly to his opponent, even when he seemed on the verge of collapse. This boy has never learned to stall. Much of his aggressiveness was only wasted energy. Anderson showed excellent ring generalship for a "green hand," and husbanded his strength at every opportunity. While he hardly justified the faith of his backers, his showing against a veteran of Brown's caliber stamps him as a promising lightweight prospect.

The men should be rematched.

The preliminaries were quickly out

HOW DONALD CONSIDERS IT.

BY DICK DONALD.
Manager Bud Anderson.

We have no kick to make. The decision was the only one possible. Anderson had the fight well in hand, and looked like a dead sure winner when Brown slipped over that left in the twentieth. Everyone in the house knows that Anderson had him beaten up to that time. I believe that Bud can whip him any time they start. Anderson ate too heavy a dinner after weighing in, and this affected his work.

Knotty Questions.

TIGHT SKIRTS HAMPER WOMEN.

Butler Shows Why Women Are Handicapped.

Miss Naomi Stimson Tells Why She Likes Jackson.

Big Olympic Driven by Fair Maid on Pavements.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

Sad accidents which have recently made the traffic problem on the downtown streets more complicated, has caused Lieut. Butler, chief of the traffic squad, to take summary action. He has instructed his men to apprehend all drivers under 16 years of age and to enforce the traffic ordinances to the letter.

Women drivers who wear hobble skirts come under the ban of the big chief. He favors a rigid examination of all drivers and is emphatic when it comes to a license for all who operate a motor car. He says women are not as fit drivers as men because of their nervous temperament and because they are not physically as fit. He is anxious, however, that the women shall not misunderstand him, as he declares there are some women who drive as well as men.

Miss Naomi Stimson, one of the daintiest little chauffeuses in the city, takes issue with the traffic squad chief. She demonstrated on Monday just how capable she is by handling her Jackson on the downtown thoroughfares with the skill of a veteran driver. She has been driving the car for two years, but, hist, say not so, perhaps an ex post facto law may be invoked to arrest this winsome lass.

Now Lieut. Butler says he has no fight to wage against such drivers. He would make them all pass muster, however. Here is what he says, straight from the shoulder, in his own characteristic style:

"Tight-fitting dresses handicap women drivers. There are some women who are good drivers, however, but there are a number of things which tend to handicap their efficiency. Women as a rule are not physically as strong as men and are consequently more easily fatigued, and when an emergency arises are not as capable of avoiding an accident. Her daily life does not bring her in as close contact with street conditions as men, hence she cannot be expected to exercise such judgment as men when speed conditions are taken into consideration.

"She is usually gowned in a close-fitting suit, which makes it difficult for her to operate the gear-levers, and prevents her making the quick movements of a man, who is more loosely attired. I believe that every person should be forced to pass a rigid examination before being licensed to drive.

"Few autoists realize the distance per second covered by a machine traveling at high speed. A motor driven at twenty miles an hour covers twenty-nine and one-fourth feet per second, and under ordinary conditions requires a space of only twenty-five feet in which to be stopped. At thirty miles an hour a car covers forty-four feet per second and requires a distance of fifty-four and three-fourths feet in which to be stopped. An increase of speed causes an increase of the distance in which it is possible to stop and adds greatly to the danger of the pedestrian. Now, there are few women who know these things and who can exercise mathematical precision when an emergency occurs."

There is not a better example of the points that Lieut. Butler brings out than the sorority maid in her Jackson Olympic. Miss Stimson is careful and methodical, but when given a country road and clear sailing she will drive as well as Charles H. Thompson, the Jackson agent, who is pretty good at the wheel of a car himself. Thompson is authority for the statement that Miss Stimson is one of the most careful and skillful chauffeuses he has ever known.

VERY EASY MONEY.

The receipts of the Brown-Anderson battle, as announced by Secretary Burns, amounted to $8632.

MORGAN THINKS BROWN THE VICTOR.

BY DAN MORGAN
Manager Knockout Brown.

I do not hesitate to say that in my opinion Brown was entitled to the decision. He not only did all the forcing, but he practically had Anderson out at the finish. I am so confident that Brown can beat Anderson any time they meet that I am willing to have them rematched for April 12.

Naomi Stimson.

Sixteen years old, dainty and petite, with Binkie, her prize Boston terrier, and the Jackson "Olympic," which she says she can drive anywhere on the downtown streets, in the heaviest traffic, in spite of what Lieut. Butler, whose handsome, smiling face is seen below, says about women driving. This is the late model 1913 Jackson, which Miss Stimson says is the best car she has ever driven. Lieut. Butler is chief of the traffic squad and is one of the best men on the local police force.

Trojans Win.

U.S.C. DEFEATS STANFORD IN SPECTACULAR MEET.

Northerners Lose Desperate Battle by Four Points. Trojans Win by Taking Relay Race—Fred Kelly Scores Fifteen Points—Dope Upset in Many Events. New Records Made.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

U.S.C. 63; Stanford, 59.

The track and field team of the University of Southern California defeated the team from Stanford University, yesterday afternoon on Bovard Field, in the greatest cinder battle ever staged in Southern California. At no time were the two teams more than eight points apart. The spectators came to their feet before the meet was half over and remainded standing and cheering in a mad frenzy until the final event, the relay, was run, winning the meet for the Trojans.

Records went by the board, dark horses showed, men ran better than they had ever before in their lives, veterans were defeated and the great Fred Kelly won three firsts and ran a lap in the relay for his college.

There is no doubt now out that Fred Kelly is one of the most splendid athletes in the world. In the 120 high hurdles, three watches caught him in 14 and 4-5s., and in the other two shaded 15 flat. This mark of fifteen flat equals the world's record. He won the shot put with three heaves, then dashed in first in the 220 hurdles, beating the famous Whitted and Murray, of Stanford, with yards to spare in 25s. flat, which is faster time than has ever been made on the U.S.C. track. All hail to Kelly. He is a wonderful athlete, and Dean Cornwell is his coach.

THE GARRISON FINISH.

The garrison finish of the Trojans came at the close of the great batle.

After Kelly's spectacular victory in the low hurdles, the score stood, Stanford, 47; U.S.C., 43. Then Capt. Campbell of Stanford defeated Waldo Throop in the 220, repeating his performance in the 100-yard dash. This made it black for U.S.C. and the gloom gathered thicker when Bonnett of Stanford nosed out Cole and Tipton of U.S.C. in the 880. The score then stood 58 to 50 for Stanford, but only for a short time. Borgstrom won the pole vault, while Watkins tied Templeton for second, although the event was not over.

With the meet up to the relay, the Stanford rooters began to breath easier, as it looked pretty safe for them with Robb, Gard, Campbell and McClure running.

Out of the U.S.C. gymnasium came Dean Cromwell with his team and a groan went up from the Trojan stand and a gasp of delight from the Stanford side, for the team looked like a sure loser. Without Berger and Courtney, the Trojan squad did not appear to have a chance. Courtney pulled his tendon in the 220 and Berger went out a few days ago with the mumps.

THE GAPS FILLED.

The gaps were filled up by Laird and Fred Kelly. "Can Kelly run a 440?" was asked along the bleachers, as the big fellow knelt down on his marks with Robb of Stanford, for the first-lap starter. Hamilton sent them away and Kelly took the lead. As they went through the gate and disappeared around the building, the straining spectators wondering how far Fred would be behind the speedy Robb. Like a flash the two raced through the gate, neck and neck, on the far side of the field.

Slowly but surely Robb picked up a lead and when he had at last taken the pole, all expected to see Kelly blow up, but nothing like it. Like a mad thing he fought down the stretch only two yards behind the fast Stanford man, finishing in 53 seconds flat, for the first 440 he had ever run.

Orrie Laird, the low hurdler, took up the burden for U.S.C., in the second lap, three yards behind Gard of Stanford. They came through that "terrible gate," Gard still leading. Then Laird ran better than he had ever run in his life before, and took the pole in the middle of the back stretch. Stride for stride, the two fought it out, with only a scant yard between them. Laird kept the pole and sent Hodge away a yard ahead of Campbell. Laird ran his lap in 52 flat, which is great going for a green man.

HODGE WINS HIS LAP.

Vic Hodge ran his usual splendid race, covering the distance in 50 and 4-5 seconds and sending Jackson away on the pole. Hodge deserves a world of credit for the relay victory, as the pole was worth dollars at this stage of the game.

Stonewall Jackson and Frank McClure started out on the final circuit that was to tell the tale. These two had met in the 440, earlier in the day, and Frank had bested Jackson. Like a wild man the little "son of Ham" tore through the gate and took the pole. All the way around the first curve he led Frank. Through the gate on the other side he led; then McClure put on a terrific sprint and came up.

They hit the curve almost together, but with Jackson slightly in the lead. The Trojan runner took the bend with so much speed that he ran wide by about three feet. McClure seeing this, thought he would cut in and take the pole, but Jackson found himself and went back to the pole, just as McClure tried to pass. McClure tripped, stumbled and

Very Even Thing.

FIGHT WAS ONE OF THE GREATEST.

VAN COURT THINKS BOUT WAS A STAR EVENT.

Kayo Put to the Floor in the Eleventh Round After Leading All the Way—Anderson Here Lost His Chance to Win Fight—Was Knocked Down in the Last Round.

BY DE WITT VAN COURT.

Knockout Brown and Bud Anderson boxed to a twenty-round draw yesterday afternoon in one of the most sensational contests ever seen at Vernon.

Brown was the aggressor throughout the contest and was right on top of Bud from start to finish. He had a big lead on points up to the eleventh when he ran into a hard blow in the stomach that put him down for a couple of seconds. When he arose, Bud went after him hard and put him down again for the count of nine.

After Kayo arose he was knocked hard against the ropes and Bud lost the chance of the contest to put him out by not taking advantage of the opportunity, as Kayo was wide open.

From the eleventh round on, it was first Kayo and then Bud and anybody's fight up to the twentieth.

BUD GOES DOWN.

Shortly after this round started, Kayo landed a left on Bud's jaw and he went down. He was about all in and when one of his seconds spoke to him from the ringside, he started for his corner. Brown went after him again and slugged him all over the ring but could not put him out.

When Eyton gave the draw decision, Bud had to be led to his corner.

Andersen entered the ring in an over-trained condition and it was plain to all that he was weak. He did not have his usual speed or aggressiveness. At times he would stand still and look at Kayo, too weak to take a step.

But Bud used excellent judgment at all times in saving his strength. He was also cool all through the contest and never faltered under the punishment he received at times.

He depended on counters in the contest, seldom leading. As Brown would hit at him he would meet him with lefts and rights at the head, seldom hitting for the body.

BROWN FAVORITE.

Brown had the crowd with him throughout the contest for his aggressiveness. At times the bugs hooted at Bud for not fighting. He was willing enough but did not have the steam.

The decision was well received by the crowd. Some thought that Kayo won a draw in the last round. But this is doubtful, as he had enough lead on points in the early part of the contest for a draw, without counting the knockdown.

Anderson showed well for a new boy, but will have to be much more speedy and learn a lot more before he can be considered with the best in the lightweight class. It is also doubtful if he can make 133 pounds and be at his very best.

BUD SHOULD IMPROVE.

Anderson is one of the hardest hitters in his class and should improve right along.

The contest was a clean one. Anderson complained to the referee in the early part of the contest about Brown hitting in the clinches, but this was uncalled for, as they were boxing under the usual rules.

There was a large crowd present. Both weighed in under weight. Dick

FIGHT BY ROUNDS.

ROUND ONE.

Anderson led off with a left to the face. Then another left to the face and a right to the jaw, and they clinched. Bud put a left to the face and a right to the body. Clinch. Brown put a left to the jaw. Bud came back with a left to the face and they clinched. Kayo put a left to the face and body in quick succession, and they clinched.

Bud put a left to the face and Kayo countered with a right to the body. Bud put a hard left to Brown's face, and they clinched. He repeated the blow and they clinched again. Brown put a right and left to the body. Bud put a left to the face and they clinched. Kayo put a straight right to the body and Bud a straight left to the face, and they were clinched when the bell rang. It was an even round and both landed hard blows.

ROUND THREE.

Kayo placed three lefts to Bud's face and they clinched again. Both landed rights to the body. Bud put a hard right to Kayo's face, and he clinched.

Brown put a left to the face and body and they clinched. Bud put a hard straight left to Kayo's jaw and they clinched. Bud put a right to the body and Kayo countered with a left to the same place. Clinch. Brown led a left to the face and a

Take a Chalmers Ride

There's a difference between a Chalmers ride and merely an automobile ride.

Just as there's a difference between train rides. You know that the "Limited" is more comfortable, smoother riding than the "accommodation."

Just as there is a difference between horses. You know that a thoroughbred—mettlesome, trained, perfectly-gaited—is more pleasureable to ride than a poorly bred "tough mouth."

So is the self-cranking, light-footed, powerful, luxurious Chalmers more pleasurable than other cars.

The powerful long stroke motor pulls smoothly on any road, steadily up any hill. A walking pace when you want to loaf; express train speed when you require it.

The four-forward speed transmission gives the flexibility which makes handling easy. You creep through heavy traffic or scoot over the hills without constant gear shifting.

The large wheels and tires, long wheel base, long flexible springs eliminate the jolts. You sit back in the Turkish cushions and 11-inch upholstery of the roomy seats as comfortably as in your chair on the "limited."

When you drive a Chalmers, the mechanism is forgotten, except as you sense its power and resiliency. You have only to steer—and enjoy.

That's a Chalmers ride—enjoyment. Enjoyment from the time you take your seat even to the end of a long day's touring. No hand cranking, no mechanical annoyances, no pumping of tires, no fatigue—just light-hearted satisfaction. You haven't known the full pleasures of motoring unless you've had a Chalmers ride.

May we show you the comforts and conveniences of driving and riding in a Chalmers car? No matter what car has been your choice heretofore, the Chalmers will be a revelation to you.

NEARING COMPLETION.

Twenty houses are reaching completion at Torrance under direction of the California Real Estate and Building Company, and 100 more are being designed by the architectural department of that company. Those now under way are inclusive of the second series put up by this building and sales corporation, the first twenty having already been sold. The company's property at Torrance lies along Arlington street, two blocks from the Pacific Electric depot. The homes are five and six rooms each. A branch office has been opened by the company in the new industrial city, and a building to house a sales force will go up at once. General Manager A. O. Kelliher has appointed a sub-agent to handle this department in co-operation with the Los Angeles offices.

FOR GREATER CONVENIENCE.

In order that the selling of properties owned or controlled by the F. P. Newport-C. O. Middleton Syndicate, may be more effectively handled, the sales force of C. O. Middleton's office has been combined with that of the F. P. Newport Company, with enlarged headquarters in the Central building. Middleton will continue his offices in the Story building, where he will direct the business and the sale of property not strictly embraced in the syndicate operations. C. H. Elmendorff will represent Middleton at the new sales headquarters. The Dominguez Harbor tract, Bellemead, a new residence property, to be opened shortly, in the southwest part of the city, Richland Farms and other properties will be handled through the new offices. Westview terrace will be handled, as heretofore, through Middleton's office.

NEW CITRUS TRACT.

One of the latest large subdivisions to be placed on the market that known as Citrus Cove in Fresno county, about seven miles from Dinuba. The tract has its name from the fact that it lies in a natural cove formed by mountains on three sides. There are between three and four thousand acres in the tract, which was formerly known as the Heine ranch. The land is said to be adapted for citrus fruit, olives, figs, grapes, alfalfa and peaches. The property is being placed on the market by the C. F. DeWitt Company.

ON NORTH GRAND.

An attractive apartment-house is being finished on North Grand avenue, between Temple and Court streets, for Robert S. Moore. The building occupies a ground space of 50x90 feet, and has a total of thirty-three rooms. It is in the shape of a "U," having a large central light court open on the south side. The hall is on the north side, all rooms having south, east or west exposure. A roof garden is a feature. Eiser & Son are the architects.

THE JOY OF THE DREAM.

Afar in the wilderness dreary,
As the sun lowered red in the west,
A pilgrim, all footsore and weary,
Sank down on the desert to rest.

All day he had walked, without compass,
Yet holding sweet Hope by the hand;
She spoke of a city of beauty,
Far off o'er the glistening sand.

Then Faith came and colored the picture,
That Hope had but traced on his mind;
And at last, in the bright, sunny distance,
He saw the fair city outlined.

Yet ever it seemed to elude him—
This city that shone like the day—
And, ever receding before him,
To mock him each step of the way.

But now, just before him, the city
Rose, grand and inviting, to view,
But, alas! he must wait for the morrow
To start on his journey anew.

The flickering shadows grew longer;
A mist hid the face of the sun;
The man closed his eyes on the vision,
The dream and the dreamer were one.

Alone, in the hush of the twilight,
For all of his hope and his trust,
On the sand lay the dust of the dreamer—
At one with the dream of the dust.

Yet who can declare, in his wisdom,
That the vision that bursts on the sight
To gladden the heart at the dawning,
Shall fade with the falling of night?

The vision—ah, who shall declare it
Must lose all its glory and glow?
For death is a specter we dream of,
But life is a phantom we know.

The mirage? It is all, it is nothing;
It is not the earth or the skies;
It is naught to the blind unbeliever;
It is all to the faithful and wise.

For, if life, love and death be but shadows,
And nothing be aught that it seem,
Let us light the dark way with our smiling,
And sing for the joy of the dream.

IN TRACTS OF 5 ACRES OR MORE

This announcement presents to you the opportunity to get a ground floor foothold in the long-famous old San Fernando Mission Lands — admittedly the choicest and richest spot in the great San Fernando Valley—and right in advance of gigantic developments which mean quick and certain value increase.

A group of Los Angeles' leading men with their combined capital, have purchased an enormous acreage of these lands, and for this reason, it is possible to offer them at prices WAY BELOW prevailing acreage prices in this community.

The lands we offer are the very lands the old Franciscan fathers picked out in the early days, because of their unequaled fertility—the lands that have been the agricultural and horticultural wonder of Southern California—where pears, peaches, apricots, walnuts, all deciduous fruits,—are being grown with a profit surpassed nowhere—and rarely equaled—in this great Southwestern empire.

No Other Proposition Paralleling This in Importance Has Been Presented to the People of Los Angeles in Recent Years

Electric car service to Los Angeles will be begun March 22nd—a 130-foot paved asphalt boulevard connects with the Van Nuys Boulevard to Los Angeles. The county asphalt boulevard to Chatsworth is now being built directly across the property—and the San Fernando Boulevard is another great highway linking San Fernando with Los Angeles.

The Owens River Distributing Reservoir is now being constructed right on our lands and water will be here within less than 90 days.

Now is undoubtedly the time to invest here—right in the forefront of all this great progress and development—when every dollar invested means big and quick profits.

The San Fernando Mission lands are situated directly adjoining the thriving town of San Fernando, 22 miles from Los Angeles, with its new $60,000 hotel, splendid high school and all modern educational, social and trading advantages.

San Fernando Mission Lands at $300 per acre are the surest and most profitable investment we know of in California today. Seeing is believing. Go out with us and see for yourself the rich, deep loam soil, the beautiful thrifty orchards—the magnificent scenery—the delightful climate. The facts will astonish you and convince you that for profits from the soil or profits from investment—there is nothing around Los Angeles that can compare with the San Fernando Mission Lands.

Now Is the Time to Judge Lemon Lands

In addition to our deciduous fruit lands, we have, skirting the foothills above San Fernando, what are absolutely without any question, the choicest lemon lands in the State of California.

In the recent cold spell, not a single leaf of the tenderest young lemon nursery stock was touched.

A prominent citrus expert who has visited all the citrus districts of California, visited these lands last week and proclaimed the conditions here "simply marvelous."

These lands directly adjoin full-bearing lemon groves—where every condition has been conclusively proven to be perfect for the growing of the highest-priced lemons.

The healthful elevation of 1100 feet—the absence of scale—the freedom from fog and frost—are vital features which no one interested in citrus lands can afford to overlook.

KNOCKOUT BROWN L
TO GET DRAW D

Bud Anderson Had Him on the Kno Number of Times, but Did Not Follo vantage—Knockdown for Kayo in T Him a Draw.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

A WILD left swing to the jaw, sending Bud Anderson reeling to the ropes, and leaving him practically helpless for the last minute of the fight, earned "Knockout" Brown a draw in yesterday's twenty-round battle at Vernon.

This swing, which might not have landed had Anderson been vigilant in his defense, saved Brown from impending defeat, and left the honors even. Brown's "haymaker" was a surprise package pure and simple, as the Medford man had beaten Brown so decisively from the eleventh round on, that the New Yorker was not supposed to have a good healthy wallop left in his system.

ANDERSON TIRED.

Both men came up for the twentieth showing signs of fatigue. Anderson, however, was the weaker of the two. Nineteen rounds of terrific milling had drawn heavily on his stamina. Brown was the fresher of the two. Anderson's lead, however, was so pronounced that he needed only to hold his opponent even to earn the verdict. Anderson came from his corner looking like a drowned rat. His seconds could not have wet him more thoroughly had they resorted to a shower bath. Brown assumed the aggressive. The Medford man was content to break ground and protect himself at close quarters. Brown forced him around the ring, landing frequently to the body and head. Anderson retaliated, but only feebly.

WILD HAYMAKER.

Brown was also weak. Brown rushed, and Anderson sidestepped him. Brown's momentum carried him through the ropes on the south side of the ring, and he lay sprawling among the typewriters until assisted back into the ring. Brown pressed Anderson to the center of the ring, and summoning all his reserve force, swung a wicked left from the hip that caught Anderson flush on the chin, and sent him half way across the ring to the west side of it.

ROPES SAVE BUD.

The ropes saved Anderson. They provided him the support that exhausted nature refused. Buoyed up by the ropes, Anderson, his defense gone, weathered the blows of the now wary Brown, when the gong came to his rescue.

Referee Eyton unhesitatingly signaled a draw.

There was a howl of disapproval from the Brown supporters, and Dan [illegible] bounded into the ring to register an informal protest.

"I think that you are lucky that

KNOCKOUT BROWN LUCKY TO GET DRAW DECISION.

"[illegible] you are lucky that you didn't lose your money," laconically remarked Eyton, turning his back on the irate Dan.

The decision, I think, was the only one possible, and this is a view which will be held by a majority of those present after they have carefully dissected the battle, round by round.

ALMOST OUT.

Brown had Anderson practically out in the last round, and might have finished him with another minute of grace. On the other hand, Anderson had Brown on the verge of a knockout half a dozen times earlier in the fight. Brown went to the canvas twice from clean knockdowns, and once for the count of nine, while Anderson was never off his feet.

Brown had a clear and decisive lead for the first ten rounds. In the eleventh, Anderson threw off the lethargy that had enveloped him and shot a short, wicked right to the wind. This completely changed the tide of battle. Brown crumpled under the blow, and slowly sank to the canvas. He was up at the count of three. Anderson whipped a left and right to the jaw and Brown went down on his back. This time he stayed for the count of nine. His superlative courage alone buoyed him up. He was now the legitimate prey of Anderson. One well-directed punch would have ended the battle. But Anderson was merciful. He stood away and let the golden opportunity pass. Brown weathered the round.

BROWN ALMOST IN.

Anderson had Brown on the verge of a knockout three or four times during the succeeding rounds, but always failed to follow up his advantage.

Anderson was master of the situation for the next seven rounds, but he weakened in the nineteenth, and Brown, his strength returning under his marvelous recuperative powers, outfought Bud in the last two rounds.

Eight rounds belonged to Anderson, nine to Brown and three were even.

BROWN IS TIMID.

Brown was the aggressor but at rare intervals. He carried the battle relentlessly to his opponent, even when he seemed on the verge of collapse. This boy has never learned to stall. Much of his aggressiveness was only wasted energy. Anderson showed excellent ring generalship for a "green hand," and husbanded his strength at every opportunity. While he hardly justified the faith of his backers, his showing against a veteran of Brown's caliber stamps him as a promising lightweight prospect.

The men should be rematched.

The preliminaries were quickly out

HOW DONALD CONSIDERS IT.

BY DICK DONALD.
Manager Bud Anderson.

We have no kick to make. The decision was the only one possible. Anderson had the fight well in hand, and looked like a dead sure winner when Brown slipped over that left in the twentieth. Everyone in the house knows that Anderson had him beaten up to that time. I believe that Bud can whip him any time they start. Anderson ate too heavy a dinner after weighing in, and this affected his work.

Knotty Questions.

TIGHT SKIRTS HAMPER WOMEN.

Butler Shows Why Women Are Handicapped.

Miss Naomi Stimson Tells Why She Likes Jackson.

Big Olympic Driven by Fair Maid on Pavements.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

Sad accidents which have recently made the traffic problem on the downtown streets more complicated, has caused Lieut. Butler, chief of the traffic squad, to take summary action. He has instructed his men to apprehend all drivers under 16 years of age and to enforce the traffic ordinances to the letter.

Women drivers who wear hobble skirts come under the ban of the big chief. He favors a rigid examination of all drivers and is emphatic when it comes to a license for all who operate a motor car. He says women are not as fit drivers as men because of their nervous temperament and because they are not physically as fit. He is anxious, however, that the women shall not misunderstand him, as he declares there are some women who drive as well as men.

Miss Naomi Stimson, one of the daintiest little chauffeuses in the city, takes issue with the traffic squad chief. She demonstrated on Monday just how capable she is by handling her Jackson on the downtown thoroughfares with the skill of a veteran driver. She has been driving the car for two years, but, hist, say not so, perhaps an ex post facto law may be invoked to arrest this winsome lass.

Now Lieut. Butler says he has no fight to wage against such drivers. He would make them all pass muster, however. Here is what he says, straight from the shoulder, in his own characteristic style:

"Tight-fitting dresses handicap women drivers. There are some women who are good drivers, however, but there are a number of things which tend to handicap their efficiency. Women as a rule are not physically as strong as men and are consequently more easily fatigued, and when an emergency arises are not as capable of avoiding an accident. Her daily life does not bring her in as close contact with street conditions as men, hence she cannot be expected to exercise such judgment as men when speed conditions are taken into consideration.

"She is usually gowned in a close-fitting suit, which makes it difficult for her to operate the gear-levers, and prevents her making the quick movements of a man, who is more loosely attired. I believe that every person should be forced to pass a rigid examination before being licensed to drive.

"Few autoists realize the distance per second covered by a machine traveling at high speed. A motor driven at twenty miles an hour covers twenty-nine and one-fourth feet per second, and under ordinary conditions requires a space of only twenty-five feet in which to be stopped. At thirty miles an hour a car covers forty-four feet per second and requires a distance of fifty-four and three-fourths feet in which to be stopped. An increase of speed causes an increase of the distance in which it is possible to stop and adds greatly to the danger of the pedestrian. Now, there are few women who know these things and who can exercise mathematical precision when an emergency occurs."

There is not a better example of the points that Lieut. Butler brings out than the sorority maid in her Jackson Olympic. Miss Stimson is careful and methodical, but when given a country road and clear sailing she will drive as well as Charles H. Thompson, the Jackson agent, who is pretty good at the wheel of a car himself. Thompson is authority for the statement that Miss Stimson is one of the most careful and skillful chauffeuses he has ever known.

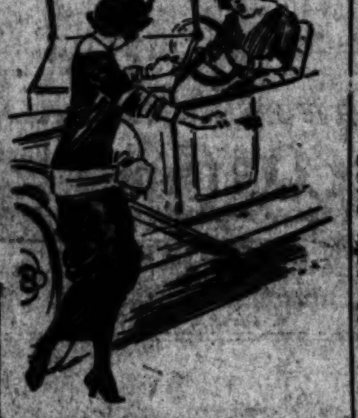
VERY EASY MONEY.

The receipts of the Brown-Anderson battle, as announced by Secretary Burns, amounted to $8632.

MORGAN THINKS BROWN THE VICTOR.

BY DAN MORGAN
Manager Knockout Brown.

I do not hesitate to say that in my opinion Brown was entitled to the decision. He not only did all the forcing, but he practically had Anderson out at the finish. I am so confident that Brown can beat Anderson any time they meet that I am willing to have them rematched for April 12.



Naomi Stimson.

Sixteen years old, dainty and petite, with Blinkie, her prize Boston terrier, and the Jackson "Olympic," which she says she can drive anywhere on the downtown streets, in the heaviest traffic, in spite of what Lieut. Butler, whose handsome, smiling face is seen below, says about women driving. This is the late model 1913 Jackson, which Miss Stimson says is the best car she has ever driven. Lieut. Butler is chief of the traffic squad and is one of the best men on the local police force.

Very Even Thing.

FIGHT WAS ONE OF THE GREATEST.

VAN COURT THINKS BOUT WAS A STAR EVENT.

Kayo Put to the Floor in the Eleventh Round After Leading All the Way—Anderson Here Lost His Chance to Win Fight—Was Knocked Down in the Last Round.

BY DE WITT VAN COURT.

Knockout Brown and Bud Anderson boxed to a twenty-round draw yesterday afternoon in one of the most sensational contests ever seen at Vernon.

Brown was the aggressor throughout the contest and was right on top of Bud from start to finish. He had a big lead on points up to the eleventh when he ran into a hard blow in the stomach that put him down for a couple of seconds. When he arose, Bud went after him hard and put him down again for the count of nine.

After Kayo arose he was knocked hard against the ropes and Bud lost the chance of the contest to put him out by not taking advantage of the opportunity, as Kayo was wide open.

From the eleventh round on, it was first Kayo and then Bud and anybody's fight up to the twentieth.

BUD GOES DOWN.

Shortly after this round started, Kayo landed a left on Bud's jaw and he went down. He was about all in and when one of his seconds spoke to him from the ringside, he started for his corner. Brown went after him again and slugged him all over the ring but could not put him out.

When Eyton gave the draw decision, Bud had to be led to his corner.

Anderson entered the ring in an over-trained condition and it was plain to all that he was weak. He did not have his usual speed or aggressiveness. At times he would stand still and look at Kayo, too weak to take a step.

But Bud used excellent judgment at all times in saving his strength. He was also cool all through the contest and never faltered under the punishment he received at times.

He depended on counters in the contest, seldom leading. As Brown would hit at him he would meet him with lefts and rights at the head, seldom hitting for the body

BROWN FAVORITE.

Brown had the crowd with him throughout the contest for his aggressiveness. At times the bugs hooted at Bud for not fighting. He was willing enough but did not have the steam.

The decision was well received by the crowd. Some thought that Kayo won a draw in the last round. But this is doubtful, as he had enough lead on points in the early part of the contest for a draw, without counting the knockdown.

Anderson showed well for a new boy, but will have to be much more speedy and learn a lot more before he can be considered with the best in the lightweight class. It is also doubtful if he can make 133 pounds and be at his very best.

BUD SHOULD IMPROVE.

Anderson is one of the hardest hitters in his class and should improve right along.

The contest was a clean one. Anderson complained to the referee in the early part of the contest about Brown hitting in the clinches, but this was uncalled for, as they were boxing under the usual rules.

There was a large crowd present. Both weighed in under weight. Dick

Trojans Win.

U.S.C. DEFEATS STANFORD IN SPECTACULAR MEET.

Northerners Lose Desperate Battle by Four Points. Trojans Win by Taking Relay Race — Fred Kelly Scores Fifteen Points—Dope Upset in Many Events. New Records Made.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

U.S.C. 63; Stanford, 59.

The track and field team of the University of Southern California defeated the team from Stanford University, yesterday afternoon on Bovard Field, in the greatest cinder battle ever staged in Southern California. At no time were the two teams more than eight points apart. The spectators came to their feet before the meet was half over and remainded standing and cheering in a mad frenzy until the final event, the relay, was run, winning the meet for the Trojans.

Records went by the board, dark horses showed, men ran better than they had ever before in their lives, veterans were defeated and the great Fred Kelly won three firsts and ran a lap in the relay for his college.

There is no doubt now out that Fred Kelly is one of the most splendid athletes in the world. In the 120 high hurdles, three watches caught him in 14 and 4-5s., and in the other two shaded 15 flat. This mark of fifteen flat equals the world's record. He won the shot put with three heaves, then dashed in first in the 220 hurdles, beating the famous Whitted and Murray, of Stanford, with yards to spare in 25s. flat, which is faster time than has ever been made on the U.S.C. track. All hail to Kelly. He is a wonderful athlete, and Dean Cornwell is his coach.

THE GARRISON FINISH.

The garrison finish of the Trojans came at the close of the great batle.

After Kelly's spectacular victory in the low hurdles, the score stood, Stanford, 47; U.S.C., 43. Then Capt. Campbell of Stanford defeated Waldo Throop in the 220, repeating his performance in the 100-yard dash. This made it black for U.S.C. and the gloom gathered thicker when Bonnett of Stanford nosed out Cole and Tipton of U.S.C. in the 880. The score then stood 58 to 50 for Stanford, but only for a short time. Bergstrom won the pole vault, while Watkins tied Templeton for second, although the event was not over.

With the meet up to the relay, the Stanford rooters began to breath easier, as it looked pretty safe for them with Robb, Gard, Campbell and McClure running.

Out of the U.S.C. gymnasium came Dean Cromwell with his team, and a groan went up from the Trojan stand and a gasp of delight from the Stanford side, for the team looked like a sure loser. Without Berger and Courtney, the Trojan squad did not appear to have a chance. Courtney pulled his tendon in the 220 and Berger went out a few days ago with the mumps.

THE GAPS FILLED.

The gaps were filled up by Laird and Fred Kelly. "Can Kelly run a 440?" was asked along the bleachers, as the big fellow knelt down on his marks with Robb of Stanford, for the first-lap starter. Hamilton sent them away and Kelly took the lead. As they went through the gate and disappeared around the building, the straining spectators wondering how far Fred would be behind the speedy Robb. Like a flash the two raced through the gate, neck and neck, on the far side of the field.

Slowly but surely Robb picked up a lead and when he had at last taken the pole, all expected to see Kelly blow up, but nothing like it. Like a mad thing he fought down the stretch only two yards behind the fast Stanford man, finishing in 53 seconds flat for the first 440 he had ever run.

Orrie Laird, the low hurdler, took up the burden for U.S.C., in the second lap, three yards behind Gard of Stanford. They came through that "terrible gate," Gard still leading. Then Laird ran better than he had ever run in his life before, and took the pole in the middle of the back stretch. Stride for stride, the two fought it out, with only a scant yard between them. Laird kept the pole and sent Hodge away a yard ahead of Campbell. Laird ran his lap in 52 flat, which is great going for a green man.

HODGE WINS HIS LAP.

Vic Hodge ran his usual splendid race, covering the distance in [illegible] and 4-5 seconds and sending Jackson away on the pole. Hodge deserves a world of credit for the relay victory, as the pole was worth dollars at this stage of the game.

Stonewall Jackson and Frank McClure started out on the final circuit that was to tell the tale. These two had met in the 440, earlier in the day, and Frank had bested Jackson. Like a wild man the little "son of Ham" tore through the gate and took the pole. All the way around the first curve he led Frank. Through the gate on the other side he led; then McClure put on a terrific sprint and came up.

They hit the curve almost together, but with Jackson slightly in the lead. The Trojan runner took the bend with so much speed that he ran wide by about three feet. McClure, seeing this, thought he would cut in and take the pole, but Jackson found himself and went back to the pole, just as McClure tried to pass. McClure tripped, stumbled and

There's a difference between a Chalmers ride and merely an automobile ride.

Just as there's a difference between train rides. You know that the "Limited" is more comfortable, smoother riding than the "accommodation."

Just as there is a difference between horses. You know that a thoroughbred—mettlesome, trained, perfectly-gaited—is more pleasureable to ride than a poorly bred "tough mouth."

So is the self-cranking, light-footed, powerful, luxurious Chalmers more pleasurable than other cars.

The powerful long stroke motor pulls smoothly on any road, steadily up any hill. A walking pace when you want to loaf; express train speed when you require it.

The four-forward speed transmission gives the flexibility which makes handling easy. You creep through heavy traffic or scoot over the hills without constant gear shifting.

The large wheels and tires, long wheel base, long flexible springs eliminate the jolts. You sit back in the Turkish cushions and 11-inch upholstery of the roomy seats as comfortably as in your chair on the "limited."

When you drive a Chalmers, the mechanism is forgotten, except as you sense its power and resiliency. You have only to steer—and enjoy.

That's a Chalmers ride—enjoyment. Enjoyment from the time you take your seat even to the end of a long day's touring. No hand cranking, no mechanical annoyances, no pumping of tires, no fatigue—just light-hearted satisfaction. You haven't known the full pleasures of motoring unless you've had a Chalmers ride.

May we show you the comforts and conveniences of driving and riding in a Chalmers car? No matter what car has been your choice heretofore, the Chalmers will be a revelation to you.

FULLERTON SAYS GIANTS ARE STRONG, YET WEAK.

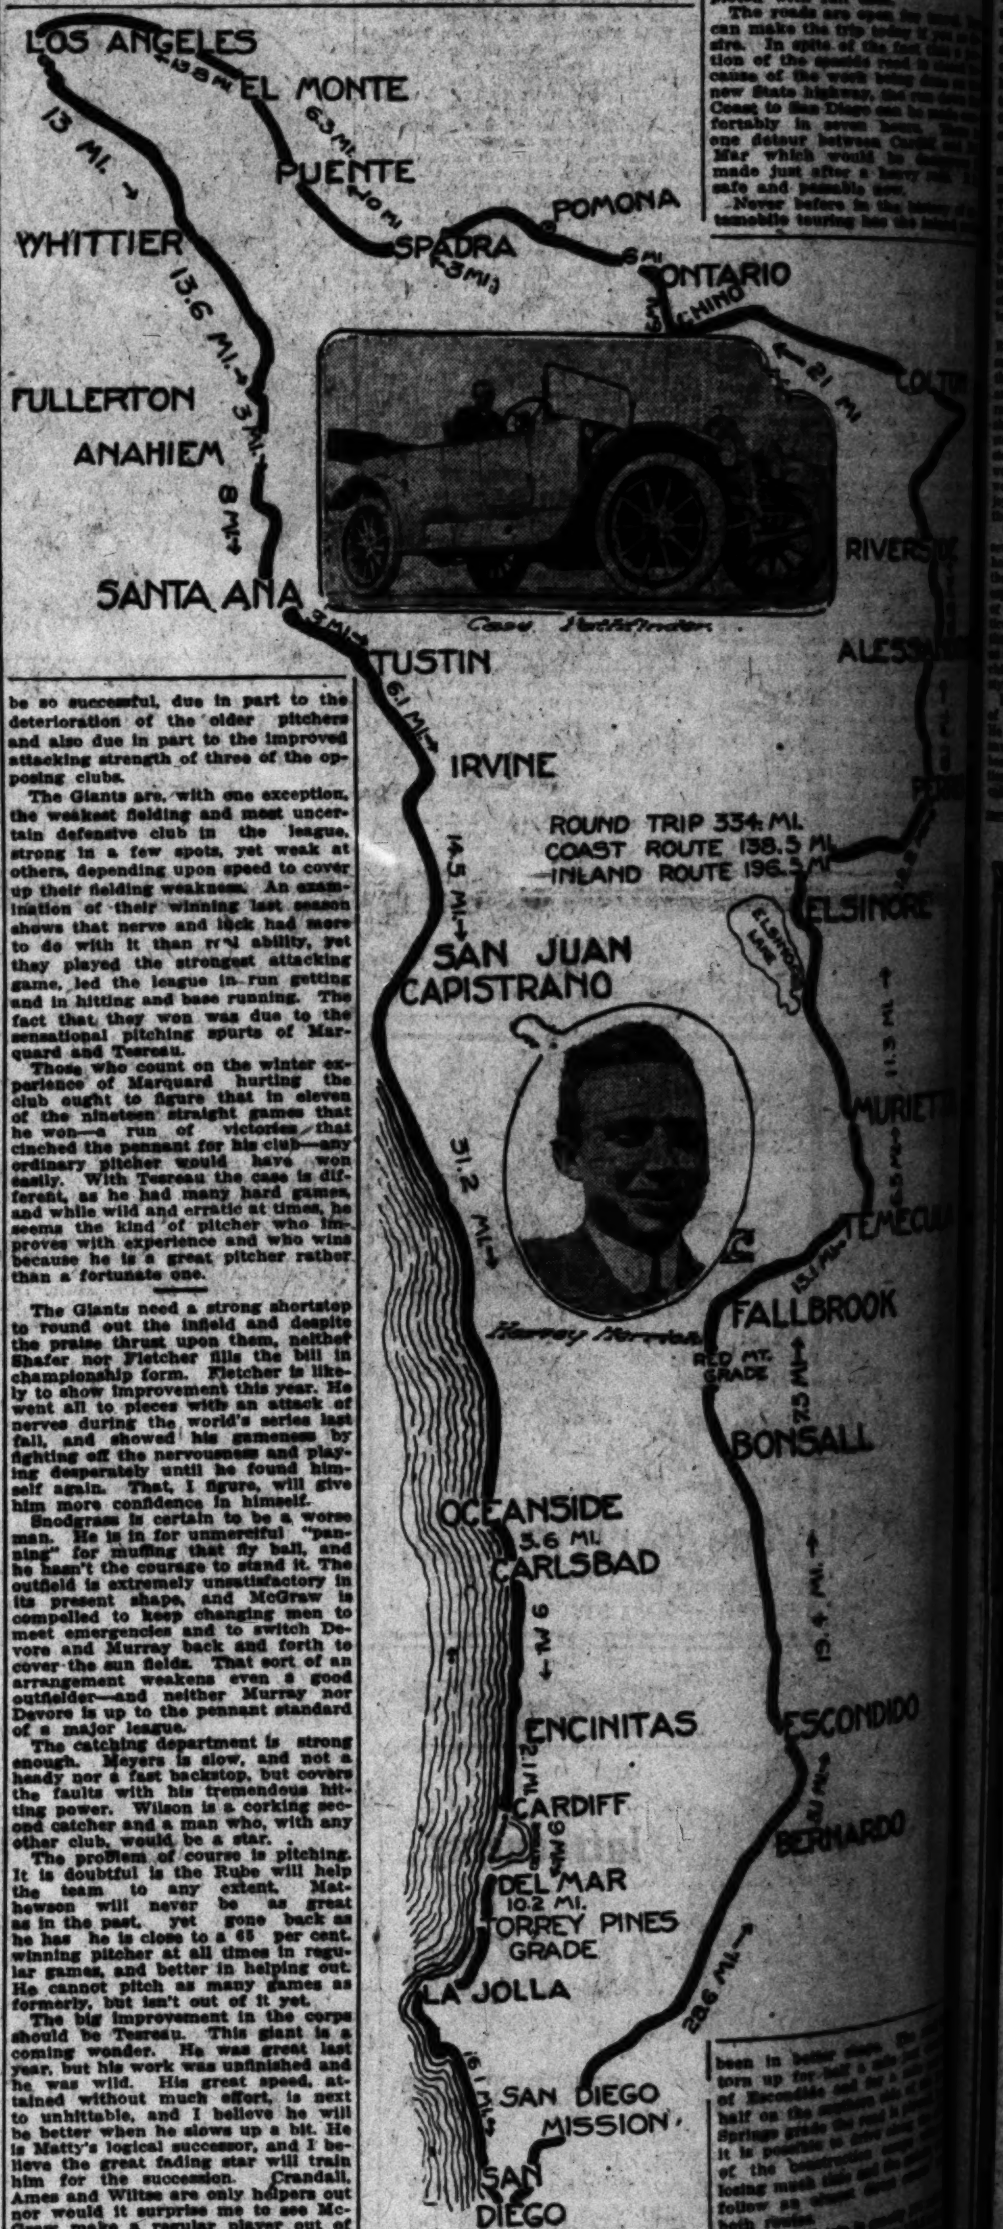
Won the Pennant Last Year Through Both Luck and Nerve—Pitching Staff Will Probably Yell for Help by June—Demaree Is Only Real Live Prospect Added to Club This Year.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.

NEW YORK practically has the same strength it did last year, and the fact that Pittsburgh figures ahead of the Giants is due to the increased strength of the Pirates, not to any slump by the champions. I am aware that many dopesters calculate the possible loss of Marquard as a heavy blow, but it is not, in my opinion, as heavy as they figure. I deducted only fourteen points for his total loss and much of that will be regained by Tesreau's increased ability.

The study of the Giants shows they have the best attacking team in the circuit, that the fielding ought to be a shade better than it was last season, although below that of Pittsburgh, and that the pitching cannot probably appears in Puck, and of Schupp, dug up at Decatur by "Crazy" Schmidt. Indeed, the recruit list looks as if McGraw is booking for vaudeville instead of a ball team. He has taken on Jim Thorpe, the Carlisle Indian and Olympic champion, but it looks as if he merely wants to let Thorpe show the public he isn't a professional.

Thorpe probably will stick along as an attraction, but it will require a long time to make him a ball player, if ever he becomes one. So far as the figures reveal and the training reports show, McGraw hasn't added much strength except in Demaree. He has a lot of reserve talent scattered around at command, and Gardella, Bues, Drucke and some others could be held as reinforcements if needed.



Ideal automobile tour

Through heart of Southland, with Harvey Herrick in Case thirty, showing shortest route by way of the Coast and also shortest distance over inland roads. You can start tomorrow. The roads are right.

be so successful, due in part to the deterioration of the older pitchers and also due in part to the improved attacking strength of three of the opposing clubs.

The Giants are, with one exception, the weakest fielding and most uncertain defensive club in the league, strong in a few spots, yet weak at others, depending upon speed to cover up their fielding weakness. An examination of their winning last season shows that nerve and luck had more to do with it than real ability, yet they played the strongest attacking game, led the league in run getting and in hitting and base running. The fact that they won was due to the sensational pitching spurts of Marquard and Tesreau.

Those who count on the winter experience of Marquard hurting the club ought to figure that in eleven of the nineteen straight games that he won—a run of victories that cinched the pennant for his club—any ordinary pitcher would have won easily. With Tesreau the case is different, as he had many hard games, and while wild and erratic at times, he seems the kind of pitcher who improves with experience and who wins because he is a great pitcher rather than a fortunate one.

The Giants need a strong shortstop to round out the infield and despite the praise thrust upon them, neither Shafer nor Fletcher fills the bill in championship form. Fletcher is likely to show improvement this year. He went all to pieces with an attack of nerves during the world's series last fall, and showed his gameness by fighting off the nervousness and playing desperately until he found himself again. That, I figure, will give him more confidence in himself.

Snodgrass is certain to be a worse man. He is in for unmerciful "panning" for muffing that fly ball, and he hasn't the courage to stand it. The outfield is extremely unsatisfactory in its present shape, and McGraw is compelled to keep changing men to meet emergencies and to switch Devore and Murray back and forth to cover the sun fields. That sort of an arrangement weakens even a good outfielder—and neither Murray nor Devore is up to the pennant standard of a major league.

The catching department is strong enough. Meyers is slow, and not a heady nor a fast backstop, but covers the faults with his tremendous hitting power. Wilson is a corking second catcher and a man who, with any other club, would be a star.

The problem of course is pitching. It is doubtful is the Rube will help the team to any extent. Mathewson will never be as great as in the past, yet gone back as he has he is close to a 65 per cent. winning pitcher at all times in regular games, and better in helping out. He cannot pitch as many games as formerly, but isn't out of it yet.

The big improvement in the corps should be Tesreau. This giant is a coming wonder. He was great last year, but his work was unfinished and he was wild. His great speed, attained without much effort, is next to unhittable, and I believe he will be better when he slows up a bit. He is Matty's logical successor, and I believe the great fading star will train him for the succession. Crandall, Ames and Wiltse are only helpers out nor would it surprise me to see McGraw make a regular player out of Crandall because of his ability to hit. He might become an outfielder, even though awkward, as he couldn't be much worse than the present incumbents.

Of the new men, I'm very sweet on Demaree, who is known to Chicago semi-pros and who came up from Mobile. I've been watching this fellow nearly five years and marveling no one thought well of him. He came into his own in the Southern League last season and pitched the other clubs to death, winning twenty-four and losing ten games on a second-place club, whose heaviest batter hit .266.

There is a whole lot of press agenting of a fellow with a Hungarian goulash name, Goulait, whose record

[illegible] R. Ruess is satisfied. The [illegible] six-cylinder Pope-Hartfords are [illegible] in carload lots and he has [illegible] them to his own satisfaction. On Thursday the stylish [illegible]-Hartford was driven by Ruess [illegible] Elysian Park by a heretofore unused entrance and after the [illegible] boulevards and hill roads were [illegible] the big Pope was dropped out [illegible] highlands into a narrow alley [illegible] leads into North Broadway.

Then after the [illegible] crawl, Ruess opened the [illegible] sent it over the steep grades [illegible] high-gear. The car seemed almost [illegible] and answered the slightest [illegible] of the throttle with the man at [illegible] stepping lightly on the ac[illegible].

It will go anywhere and [illegible] anything that any other machine [illegible] do, and perhaps I can make [illegible] a few tricks that some [illegible] other fellows would not dare [illegible]."

[illegible] to show what he could do [illegible] then opened the throttle and [illegible] Pope at terrific speed up [illegible], whirled around the curves [illegible] he was winning a Baldy [illegible] the Pope-Hartford to the [illegible] of Elysian Park, where he [illegible] suddenly on the edge of a [illegible] embankment satisfied with the [illegible] of his car. His passengers also [illegible] satisfied, as they had just enjoyed a hair-raising drive in one of [illegible] of the new 1913 cars.

The long sweep [illegible] give the machine a par[illegible] handsome appearance and [illegible] & Davis electric lights are [illegible] it is possible to equip a machine with. The Pope is ornate and [illegible] and the lines are right.

Sales have not [illegible] because of this devo[illegible] boating. Now Bill has [illegible] and as a result the William R. Ruess Company is one of the most busy salesrooms on automobile row. It takes the "Big Chief" to make things hum at Tenth and Olive streets.

Just by way of diversion, and to show what he can do when he is in dead earnest, Ruess flew up to Bakersfield and sold $12,000 worth of Pope fire apparatus to the oil center city. He sold two double eighty-gallon chemical wagons with equipment of 250 feet of chemical hose for each fire-fighter. He showed the Bakersfield people, by a novel demonstration, that he could reach a fire three times as fast as a horse-drawn vehicle. It is doubtful, however, whether any other driver could have sent the Pope so fast.

After scoring his successes at Bakersfield, Bill felt particularly good and drove to El Centro. There he scored again and sold a Pope-Hartford fire-fighter to the Imperial Valley people. This is a double "thirty-five" chemical and hose wagon and is to be installed on a fast-running service and will cover a large district in the fertile zone.

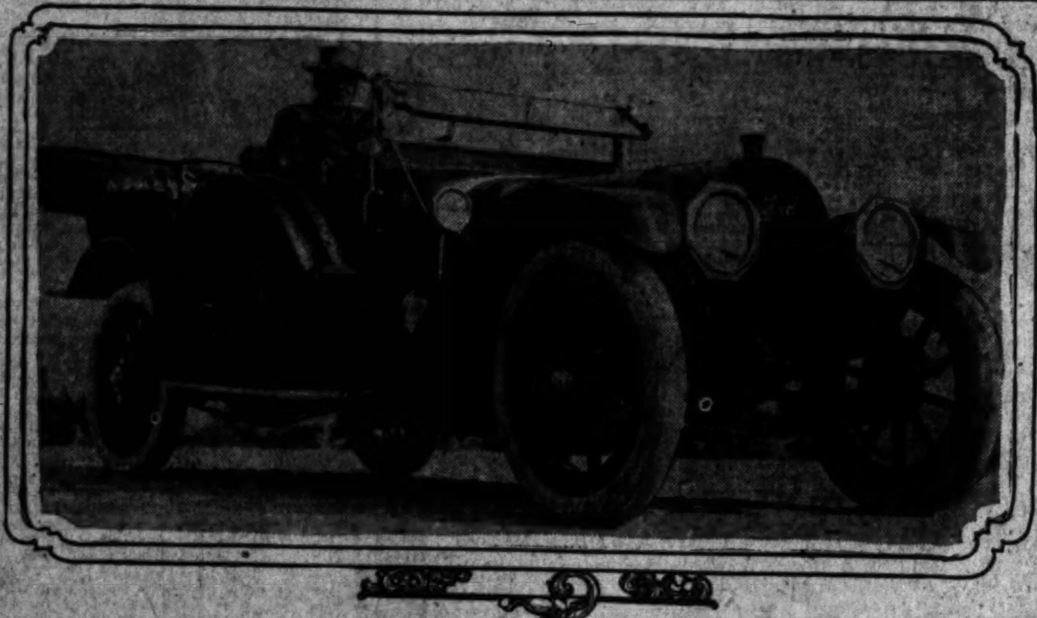
UP-TO-THE-MINUTE MOONS COME TO FINE NEW HOME.

THE first carload of the new model "Thirty-nines" to leave the Moon factory in St. Louis arrived in Los Angeles yesterday. It consisted of roadsters, torpedoes and touring cars, which will be on exhibition this week at the attractive showrooms just built at Pico and Olive streets for Buxton & Childs, local agents for the Moon.

The new cars are unusually powerful in proportion to their weight, and are moderate priced. They are electric lighted, equipped with electric self-starter, long-stroke T-head motors, 4x5¾ inches, and have all the standard Moon features such as honeycomb radiators, multiple-disc clutch, oversized transmission and differential and full-floating rear axles on Timken bearings.

A jog in Olive street makes the location of the new Moon home unique, as it is so located as to face north up Olive street at Pico. The building is 77x148 feet, with a private alley leading to Olive street. It is of tapestry and white glazed brick, the latter being used as trimming.

He realizing the seriousness of the situation, grabbed a pair of trousers and an overcoat and ran onto the stage all out of breath in time to save the final curtain from utter disaster.



William R. Ruess, in the new six-cylinder Pope-Hartford.

Just arrived and sold. This is the car for which Bill has claimed so much and with which he did a few original stunts in Elysian Park on Thursday afternoon.

FEW CHANGES MADE IN FOOTBALL RULES.

Only a few minor changes in rules were announced by the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, which adjourned after a two-day session.

Hereafter any man taken out of a game may be returned at the beginning of a subsequent period or at any time during the fourth period.

In the penalty for a forward pass touched by an ineligible player the word "may" is substituted for "shall."

In case of accident to players one representative of the player's team may, after obtaining consent of the referee or umpire in each instance, go upon the field of play to attend the injured player.

Details regarding the wording of the rules are left entirely to the members of the codifying committee.

It was decided that on failure of one side or the other to return in time after intermission, the referee should force that side to put the ball in play, taking the side opposite to the one occupied at the close of the last quarter.

The committee voted to carry on the duties of the board of officials for the coming year in the same manner as last season. The following board was appointed:

Dr. James A. Babbitt of Haverford, Crawford Blagden of Harvard, Park H. Davis of Princeton, W. L. Dudley of Vanderbilt, Dr. C. W. Savage of Oberlin, E. K. Hall of Dartmouth and Walter Camp of Yale.

Dr. Babbitt is to send a list of officials to each member of the Rules Committee for approval and suggestion. William S. Langford was appointed a member-at-large of the Rules Committee. A codification committee was appointed, consisting of William Morice of the University of Pennsylvania, and Messrs. Langford and Camp.

The World's Largest Builders of Six-Cylinder Automobiles

Why It Should Be a HUDSON

Generally speaking, all good cars are best known because of one distinctive feature.

One is spoken of as being well built. Another has a reputation for the beauty of its finish.

One maker has gained confidence because of the manner of treating customers.

Large volume is advanced by another as an explanation of quality at low price.

All these are sound reasons for consideration.

Each and all are essential in the policy of any company that succeeds.

But, if you look closely, you will find that while one lays greater emphasis upon one of these claims than upon others, all successful makers are in common in their position in such essentials.

All, to succeed, must build their cars well.

All must assure service to the owner.

All must combine luxurious finish with mechanical excellence.

Large volume is essential to any success, for without volume the value is not in keeping with the price that must be charged.

How 48 Engineers Made HUDSON Distinctive

And as every successful car is referred to with reference to the one feature for which it is best known, the HUDSON is famous because of its advanced design.

HUDSON cars have always been known to be leaders as the most advanced type of engineering skill.

That means simplicity in design and operation. It indicates that essentials are less clumsily accomplished than in cars not so well designed. It assures accessibility.

Since the skill of designers is not confined to mechanical details, it also means more beautiful lines, a greater luxury, a richer appearance and an individuality as characteristic as artists put into their pictures or as architects work into their buildings.

The best engineering brains in the industry are responsible for the two new models of HUDSONS. The 48 experts, including Howard E. Coffin, who designed these cars, have had wide experience.

Combined they represent about all of value that is known in the way of motor car building.

Each man has influenced the design of the car only so far as he has proved his leadership.

These men come from every automobile building country.

Most of them are regular employees of this Company. Some are associated as engineers with other institutions, and we used them merely in an advisory capacity. Some are consulted by other manufacturers.

Directing all these men is Howard E. Coffin, America's foremost engineer. Thus we have succeeded in producing cars that are distinctive and that have many features of advantage to the driver and owner not possessed by others, even though they give an almost perfect service.

WHY A SIX--ESPECIALLY A HUDSON

It is electric self-cranking, electrically lighted and all any automobile can be in comfort, convenience, luxury, service, equipment and value.

The "54" HUDSON supplies every demand made of any automobile, in speed, get-away, safety, power, luxurious equipment, distinctive appearance and comfort.

It is not merely a "Six" made so by the addition of two cylinders to a good four-cylinder car. It is capable of a speed far greater than you will ever care to call upon it to give. It will jump to a speed of 58 miles an hour in 30 seconds from a standing start. No grade is too steep for it. Its equipment, complete in every detail, includes the most famous system of electric self-cranking, electric lighting—dynamo type—and ignition device to be had, known as the Delco, patented. There is also an illuminated dash and extension lamp, mohair top, curtain, rain-vision windshield, speedometer, clock, demountable rims, 36x4½-inch tires, 127-inch wheel base, etc.

The seat cushions are 12 inches deep. The finest materials are used throughout. No detail of finish or equipment is skimped or overlooked.

"54" HUDSON Models: Five-passenger Touring Car and Phaeton and Two-passenger Roadster, $2600 each, f. o.b. Los Angeles. Seven-passenger Touring Car, $150 additional. Limousine, Seven-passenger, $3900; Coupe, Three-passenger, $3100. Open bodies furnished with Limousine and Coupe at an extra charge.

The four-cylinder HUDSON—the "37"—is a masterpiece of its type. The price is $2025 complete. : : Same body types as the Six.

Baker Electrics

QUALITY SERVICE

The Car That Has Proved Itself

THIS new Baker has proved to be the leading electric coupe of the season. It has won its way to the height of popular approval at a season when the latest automobile luxuries and refinements are being emphasized on every hand. To do this means a great deal for any one car.

In its graceful contour and low-hung body lines, this stylish coupe reflects the latest efforts of the greatest coach-builders in America. It is thoroughly in accord with present-day ideas, yet not extreme nor "faddish," but refined and dignified. Its exterior beauty and exquisite finish are enhanced by interior roominess and luxurious appointment which have aroused no end of favorable comment.

The Baker is the only coupe today which has the forward drive—though it is also obtainable with rear drive. No other coupe selling for less than $3000 has REVOLVING FRONT SEATS. Another distinctive feature is its LOW FRONT WINDOWS—permitting easiest possible view of road. Can there be any wonder, then, that the Baker is outstripping all other electrics in sales?

NOBBY CARS ARRIVE.

Ten of the Finest Studebaker Cars Ever Manufactured Are on Exhibition in Los Angeles Salesroom.

William La Casse, local representative of the Studebaker Corporation, is the proudest man on "the Row." He has received ten of the enclosed cars, which the Studebakers are just beginning to manufacture and they have proved more sumptuous than the most enthusiastic of La Casse's salesmen dared to hope for.

Four of the cars received are limousines, three coupes and three Sedans. These will be all that the factory can spare to Southern California this year. Although comparatively low in price the cars are rich in appearance and up-to-the-minute.

The Sedan is a type not manufactured by any other American firm. It is designed for use as a family car by those who do not keep a chauffeur. It is a five-passenger, inside drive car.

All the cars have all-aluminum bodies, thirty-five horse power, 116-inch wheel base, full floating type rear axles, eleven-inch upholstery, finished in whipcord, and crown fenders.

HALLADAY MOTORS CARS NOW HORS DE COMBAT.

Halladay motor cars will no longer be handled by the Vance-Canavan Motor Company. The financial failure of the Streetor Motor Car Company caused the local agents to give up the car. The failure is a complicated one and involves some knotty problems. Warren Vance, who has just returned from an extended trip to the East, says the doors of the Halladay factory are closed for an indefinite period.

Because of the complications which have arisen in the East the Vance-Canavan Company has been obliged to institute legal proceedings to recover money due for guarantee work. Credits allowed by the Streetor Motor Car Company are said to amount to a considerable sum and the local agents will try to collect and unravel the financial tangle, which has arisen since the Vance-Canavan Company became the distributors for Halladay cars.

STEARNS-KNIGHT GRAND OLD MAN HERE.

How old is Joe McDuffee, western salesmanager for the Stearns-Knight? McDuffee won the first cup ever offered by William K. Vanderbilt when in the dim distant past, he drove a Locomobile steamer a mile in 2m. 17s. He carried his honors lightly, however, was made a hero in many ways and then flew a dizzy half mile in 39s.

Now, "Young McDuffee" is visiting Smith Bros., local agents for the Stearns-Knight. He says Clarence "Yuma" Smith is one of the handsomest young automobile agents in the world, if you leave his brother Stanley out of the running. But when you have listened to that you had better size up McDuffee, who says he is Dutch, not Irish.

Here is McDuffee. A young man, with seven children, a maiden aunt and a mother-in-law, who has the nerve to bring his entire family to the Coast on his first visit. He is a champion of champions, as handsome as "Yuma" Smith and a great orator. McDuffee is a young-old man who has seen all sides of the game. He is seasoned and ripe though still in his early thirties.

Eddie McDuffee, world-champion bicyclist, is a brother of the Stearns-Knight man, but Joe is the real champion. He holds the record for a standing broad smile, but his honors were almost grabbed by Stanley Smith while the local Stearns-Knight agent was listening to the ups and downs of the factory man who says he is here to stay.

EFFICIENCY OF HORSE IS LOW.

HAY LESS ECONOMICAL FUEL THAN GASOLINE.

Motor Trucks Give Best Results as Servants of Man Says Dealer Just Entering Automobile Field After Long Experience as Local Manufacturer.

In the three weeks since he entered the automobile business by taking over the Illinois Automobile Company, Fred W. Beau de Zart has sold out the stock of Elmore roadsters with which his storerooms at No. 1233 South Main street were filled. The machine is powerful, fast, equipped with selfstarter and designed especitlly for doctors and traveling salesmen.

While waiting for more Elmores Beau de Zart is concentrating on the exploitation of Krebs trucks and F.A.L. cars for which he is Pacific Coast agent. As he has been in the manufacturing business in Los Angeles for the past twenty-seven years he is particularly taken with the future of the motor truck industry.

"A horse is the poorest motor ever built," he said yesterday. "It takes ten pounds of food for every hour of work. It gets away with the whole output of a five-acre patch and with all this fuel its efficiency is only 2 per cent. As it cannot be figured on for more than six hours' work per day if worked every day it is plain that the motor truck equals twenty-five horses in power and 100 horses in endurance.

"If a horse were made of steel it would not need to be larger than a grip-sack, but being a hay motor and hay being a very wasteful fuel, it had to be made enormously large in proportion to the power developed. Horses have gone up in price, but the quality remains the same. Engines have advanced in quality and have greatly decreased in price. The gasoline motor was never so strong, so reliable and so cheap as today."

The Krebs truck comes in one and one and a half ton sizes. Only the chassis is shipped here from the factory at Clyde, O., the bodies being built in Los Angeles to order for purchasers.

REDLANDS TO MEET CLARK'S TIGER TEAM.

The University of Redlands baseball team is to break into fast intercollegiate company next Saturday afternoon at Occidental, when the team is sent against Wilkie Clark's Tiger braves. The Oxy team looks like the strongest in the South this season, so the showing made by the Baptists in this game should determine the class and standing of the university.

Manager Russell Powell has arranged a good schedule for the team this season and says that while he has only one game with Oxy at the present time, he thinks that another can be arranged.

Pomona is also down for one game, while the Trojans have not as yet agreed to play the up-country collegians, but the chances are that both institutions will mix at least twice with Redlands.

Frank Newhouse, who was coaching the university was called away last week and "Heine" Schmidt has taken his place. Schmidt comes from the Wichita club in the Kansas State League. He seems to have made a hit with the men on the squad and Manager Powell says he feels confident that he will be successful.

The schedule is as follows: March 22, Occidental, at Baer Park; March 29, Throop, at Pasadena; April 4, Escondido High, at Escondido; April 5, Santa Ana High, at Santa Ana; April 12, Pomona, at Redlands; April 19, open date; April 26, Throop, at Redlands; May, 31, Whittier, at Whittier.

Ideal Tour of Southland.

get busy and give us some better roads in the near future.

The Case was driven from San Juan Capistrano over a fairly good road, but after crossing the county line into San Diego county the first of a system of fine roads was struck. Harvey Herrick said "My hat's off to San Diego county for her good roads. They are certainly fine." Herrick was right.

STATE HIGHWAY.

Just coming into Cardiff we struck the first stretch of the new State highway. With a concrete foundation over which to drive the Case was sent at a fifty-five-mile-an-hour gait and Cardiff was reached in a few minutes and here we struck the end of the highway. It was necessary to make a detour of nine miles in order to reach Del Mar. In a straight line, when the new highway is completed along the Coast, it will be possible to make a five-mile dash from Cardiff to Del Mar.

From Del Mar on the road is in fine shape and the Case went skimming away to Oceanside. Here the road skirts the ocean all the way and after dropping down the grade to the beach line La Jolla was passed, with the wind blowing almost a hurricane. The road from La Jolla to San Diego is splendid and we rolled into that city at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, seven hours after leaving the paved streets of Los Angeles.

On reaching San Diego, Herrick drove the Case to the ferry and crossed the Coronado where he met Secretary Robinson of the J. I. Case Company who is using a Case "Forty" to tour the Southland. After an evening with the "Big Chief," Herrick returned to the Hotel Grant and prepared to start back over the inland route on the following day.

RECORD MILEAGE.

The run down the Coast was made with an average of sixteen miles to the gallon for the Case "Thirty." The county boulevard was followed to the edge of Whittier and the distance to the Reform School was just thirteen miles. From Whittier to Fullerton it was 12.6 miles and from Fullerton to Anaheim, three miles.

From Anaheim to Santa Ana the seven miles of road is rough but the three miles to Tustin is better. Then out from Tustin the run of 14.5 miles to San Juan Capistrano and the old mission is much better. Leaving the old adobe walls the Case was sent skimming on to Oceanside, thirty-one miles away, but the road from Capistrano to Oceanside is much better than it has ever been before.

The three miles from Oceanside to Carlsbad was covered easily, but just before entering the seaside city a misleading sign, directing autoists to travel by way of Escondido, caused some misapprehension. Herrick determined to drive by the Coast route, however, and, save for a detour after driving eleven miles to Cardiff, the trip was made comfortably.

The Torrey Pine grade is in fine shape. It is the only steep grade on the Coast road to San Diego. From La Jolla in, the going is fine and the sixteen miles was covered in fast time. The pavement was struck at the San Diego city limits on India street. This makes a fine finish to a great trip.

RETURN TRIP.

Early Wednesday morning Herrick drove the Case out Fifth street to University avenue. Then turning to the left at the Normal School and instead of turning off to Lakeside the Park boulevard was followed to Mission avenue and the Case was sent over the bridge and down into the Mission grade. Here is the most scenic part of this interesting route.

The rain was falling in torrents and the roads were slippery. Herrick had purchased new Weed chains and this kept the Case to the road. After crossing the Poway grade, which is in excellent shape, we passed Bernardo twenty-six miles from San Diego, after having toured through the Mission Valley, another beauty spot.

After rolling through Escondido the first piece of rough road was encountered. The run from Escondido to Fallbrook, twenty miles was over good roads, but it is possible to take a mountain trip of eighteen miles and reach Bonsall through an even more scenic country. From Bonsall to Fallbrook, seven miles, Herrick let the Case out and we reached the Ellis Hotel for lunch. Here the proprietor told us of an Oldsmobile owner who claims to have driven from Los Angeles to Fallbrook in two hours, forty-five minutes. An express train could not make such a trip.

Economical.

CK SUPLANTS HORSES AND RAILROAD AS WELL.

ground-covering ability is not yet exhausted. It is now proposed to send the truck in regular trips to Worcester, Mass., ninety miles away.

"Manager F. C. Gould of the Silver Lane company tells of a record which shows the manner in which his Kissel-Kar truck has improved upon certain railroad facilities which it supplanted. A shipment of sauer kraut from Rockville to Hartford, fourteen miles, was so delayed in transit that its arrival took place eight days from the date of shipment. The truck performs this service with regularity and certainly inside of two hours.

"This truck has been driven between 8000 and 9000 miles since April and has often been in constant service night and day. During the harvest period, according to Gould, it earned $50 a day in excess of its operating cost. The approximate cost of operation, based upon figures estimating a year of similar average cost on a basis of 300 working days, is $12.50 a day. This includes 5 per cent. interest on the investment, 20 per cent. depreciation, wages, fuel, repairs, tires and taxes."

last September. It has been driven over roads, good, bad and indifferent—roads than ranged from city asphalt thoroughfares to the hilly, holey and hellish roads of the mountainous districts.

The machine which has served so well for demonstration purposes was stripped of everything that might tend to conceal its working parts. After the long distance traveled by the car the motor was found to be in absolutely perfect condition.

OWENSMOUTH MOTOR MEET ATTRACTS MANY FAST CARS

Walter Hempel to Manage Big Meet on Eight-Mile Speedway, Where Many Believe Another World Record Will Be Established—Much Interest Is Shown in Los Angeles-San Francisco Speed Battle.

FAST motor cars and some of the greatest drivers on the motor firmament are entered in the Owensmouth speed battle which is to be held a week from Saturday. This race promises to be one of the greatest ever pulled off in Southern California and is to be conducted over the eight-mile course which is as fast, and, according to several experts, faster than the world record Santa Monica speedway.

With 100-mile-an-hour cars racing over a spectacular course, every foot of which can be watched from the grand stands, the novel spectacle of a road race that will be much like the 500 mile battle at Indianapolis is offered. The course was selected carefully by Walter Hempel, a real race manager, who has been asked to handle the meet, which is to be sanctioned by the Western Automobile Association.

The management of a big road race has been reduced to a science. There are few men who are capable of conducting such a contest. Many would like to handle a meet like the Owensmouth contest, but the interest in road racing demands that the fans shall be given the best and in Hempel we seem to have found, not only an honest, but a capable manager who selects only the fastest cars and drivers for his meet.

The Imperial Valley road race was a winner because of its manager. The track races were a joke because of the management. Now Hempel is to be given a chance to demonstrate just what he can do with a big road race. Judging from his plans he will make good and the Owensmouth contest will be finished with a world record to the winner.

Barney Oldfield has been signed up to race at Owensmouth. He will be hooked up with Teddy Tetzlaff on one of the fastest courses in the Southland and the public will have another chance to watch the giants in action. This is not to be a race, however, with only big cars entered. Outside entries are assured and there is every prospect that Earle Cooper, on a Stutz, and at least one other noted driver will be at the starting line when the men are sent away.

THE STARTER.

Several of the fans who are watching with interest the plans for this big meet are anxious to see William R. Ruess act as starter of the battle. Bill, however, would not agree to wave the flags unless each driver was willing that he should be the starter. This position is one of importance and judging from those who are planning other race meets, it will be necessary for the W.A.A. to appoint a starter as soon as possible.

The Owensmouth meet will be a tryout for the Los Angeles to San Francisco road race. Several of the local dealers who are planning to enter the intercity contest will have their cars out on the Owensmouth speedway for the battle the last of this month. The prospects are that the coming race will be a hummer from start to finish.

INTERCITY RACE.

Communications from all over this country are being received concerning the plans for the intercity race. One of a number of letters which I have recently received follows: This is from Robert N. Carson of Iowa City.

To Bert C. Smith,, Automobile Editor: I read with interest your "pink sheet" of the 2nd inst., with illustrations and story in regard to road race between New York and Frisco in 1915.

The race in question should pass through Iowa, because we have the best and shortest route between Chicago and Kansas City. This route passes west from Chicago to Rochelle, Dixon and Sterling, Ill., thence on to Rock Island and Moline, Ill., and across the Mississippi River to Davenport, Iowa., Davenport is an excellent "night control;" likewise the city of Des Moines, Iowa. From Davenport to Des Moines is almost a "race track" in itself over the famous River-to-River road. This stretch is 187 miles over a hard dirt dragged road. We held a midwinter race over this route from Davenport to Omaha, December 28, 1912. The average speed was thirty-eight miles per hour. (I can give you a complete story on this race if you care for it, without charge.)

To reach Kansas City from Des Moines, the route is due south over the interstate trail (folder and schedule herewith enclosed.)

The roads through Illinois via Dixon and Sterling are far better than via Springfield, Ill., and Southern Illinois, on to St. Louis.

The route, as before stated, through Iowa, is about thirty miles shorter between Chicago and Kansas City, than through Southern Illinois and the State of Missouri. Hoping to hear from you.

CROSS-COUNTRY PACKARD TOURERS MADE WELCOME.

SINCE the formal dedication of the Packard home owners of the high-grade cars have more than ever before made the five-story structure at Tenth and Hope strets their headquarters. It has now become the custom to drive to the reinforced concrete structure and make inquiries of the men there concerning road conditions, as well as anything pertaining to the car.

As a result of the interest being taken among Packard owners in the roads of Southern California, Earle C. Anthony has arranged to supply all the Packard owners with full data concerning the roads and the condition of the highways in Southern California. The additional information that owners of cars desire just before starting on a tour, with the necessary equipment, is also ready at the Packard home.

The Packard has been used for the past three years by a number of easterners as a transcontinental touring car. The parties who are planning to make the trip across the country this year will be taken care of at the Packard home and will be granted every courtesy by the management there. The cars will be cared for and the information desired by the cross-country tourers will be given.

This is to be a great year, as far as touring is concerned. That he may be prepared to render all the first aid necessary, Earle Anthony has drilled his sales force and his mechanics in the art of providing the necessities for those who are touring, not only the roads of the Southland, but the roads of the United States. When Packard cars leave the East it is the purpose of the local Packard agent to keep in touch with the tourists from the time they leave the Atlantic seaboard until they reach the Pacific slope where the welcome will be royal.

On Electric Cars Pneumatic and Solid Tires Are Doomed

Four years ago every electric car was equipped with pneumatic or solid tires. Today over half of the electric cars carry neither of these types.

The great majority now carry Motz Cushion Tires.

It probably won't be long now until a pneumatic-equipped or solid-tire-equipped electric will be an unusual sight.

Pneumatic tires lost out because they proved too treacherous, too troublesome—and too costly.

Solid tires lost out because they failed utterly to protect the occupants or the delicate parts of the car from rough bumps and jolts.

Motz Cushion Tires won out because in four years they proved to be BOTH easy-riding and trouble-proof. And because they reduced tire upkeep to a small item.

Shock-Absorbing Tires

Motz Cushion Tires, which have ended puncture and blowout troubles, opened people's eyes to the fact that a tire to be shock-absorbing and easy-riding does not have to be filled with air, liquid or any other kind of a filler. Amazing resiliency can be obtained by the use of purely mechanical principles.

See the double, notched treads (A in picture,) which prevent skidding and distribute the weight to the sides. The sides are undercut (see B,) which allows free action of slantwise bridges (see C.) These bridges are elastic. They give and yield like the air in a pneumatic tire. Note D in the picture, showing shock-absorbing qualities when tire runs over a stone.

Economy

No user of Motz Cushion Tires is burdened by tire-repair expense. Or by carrying extra, emergency tires. Or by having to buy new tires every few months.

These tires are specifically GUARANTEED for 10,000 miles, two years.

Would any pneumatic tire-maker dare guarantee his tires that long?

Did ever another tire offer such economy as this

Adopted by Electric Makers

No matter what kind of an Electric you choose, the maker will equip it with Motz Cushion Tires if you so request. He will be glad to do it, knowing he's giving you a trouble-proof car and one that's well protected from the shocks of road contact.

Don't buy a fine electric and then spoil nine-tenths your pleasure by accepting any old tires. Look into this tire question. Send now for our

OMISKEY WAS ONCE ONE REAL BASEBALL PLAYER.

White Sox Owner One of the Best First Basemen in the History of Baseball Twenty Years Ago—His Old St. Louis Team Won the American Association Pennant Four Successive Years.

[illegible] IS HARD for the fans of the present day, that is, the younger [illegible] to imagine Charles Comiskey, [illegible] owner and president of [illegible] Baseball Association, in [illegible] President Comis- [illegible] famous Sox, the owner of [illegible] most costly and best- [illegible] baseball organizations ex- [illegible]. But the followers of the game [illegible] years ago remember Charley [illegible] as the ball player, as the [illegible] par excellent, and he [illegible] Comiskey the magnate, the [illegible] baseball financier of the [illegible] American League Club to the [illegible] day; but to the olden-day [illegible] memories that were im- [illegible] on their minds of "Commy" [illegible] of the greatest first sackers [illegible] covorted around the initial [illegible] of the diamond still lingers [illegible] to be replaced by the [illegible] of today.

[illegible] safe to say that President [illegible] himself remembers almost [illegible], every circumstance [illegible] with his career as a ball [illegible] captain and leader, and [illegible] away back in the hal- [illegible] of the old American Asso- [illegible] golden age of baseball [illegible] '80s, and the golden days [illegible] Comiskey's young and [illegible]. Magnate Comiskey [illegible] the many circum- [illegible] to the minutest details, [illegible] happened those days, [illegible] of transactions and [illegible] much greater moment that [illegible] place in recent years have [illegible] his mind and are forgot- [illegible].

[illegible] and generation Charles [illegible] as a ball player and first [illegible] classed with the great [illegible] same—the Hal Chase of [illegible] Charley Comiskey of [illegible] years ago; the Hal Chase [illegible] reflection of the Comis- [illegible] quarter of a century ago. A [illegible] of their records will be of [illegible] while conditions that sur- [illegible] first baseman's position [illegible] changed to any noticeable ex- [illegible] ever, it isn't a question of [illegible] records, for neither of [illegible] first sackers ever led [illegible] league in the early [illegible] of first basemen have [illegible] better records on paper. [illegible] and Chase were alike in [illegible] they each introduced and [illegible] of a new and dash- [illegible] play, the innovators of [illegible] that were strictly [illegible] of a Comiskey or a [illegible]

[illegible] INNOVATOR.

[illegible] was the first to introduce [illegible] playing away back of the [illegible] was totally unlike the type [illegible] that were held as the [illegible] of his time. Men like [illegible] "Dave" Orr and [illegible] the famous first sack- [illegible] were men of gigantic [illegible] made great targets for [illegible] to throw at, and could [illegible] and do it frequent- [illegible] covered the ground [illegible] about twice the [illegible] that the average [illegible]. He was a power in the [illegible] his infield working [illegible] regularity; he worked [illegible] and through his [illegible] efforts he [illegible] whipped into shape one of [illegible] the game ever [illegible]

[illegible] Gleason and Robinson [illegible] Welch, O'Neil, and one [illegible] making up the [illegible] by the way, this great [illegible] Foutz and Carruth- [illegible] could slug the ball. They [illegible] the .300 mark, and [illegible] of them constant- [illegible] aggregation swept [illegible] then powerful American [illegible] the pennant four [illegible] years.

[illegible] aggregation. Not [illegible] leaders in games won [illegible] years, but they led in [illegible] save 1887, led in bat- [illegible] all teams in any [illegible]. Comiskey, in [illegible] the most daring [illegible] in the association; in [illegible] bases. In 1888 [illegible] but [illegible] had their chief [illegible] with 104, led the [illegible] McCarthy, another [illegible] bases, stole 117.

[illegible] Capt. Comis- [illegible] efforts and per- [illegible] got together [illegible] of the game, a [illegible] better reception in [illegible] batter. Comiskey [illegible] .300 class, standing [illegible] circle. During 1887 [illegible] the leaders having [illegible] of .300, but the captain [illegible] for his directing [illegible] team out when [illegible] or when a hit was [illegible] himself fourth on [illegible] first man on [illegible] followed by two [illegible] then, himself, followed in turn, by either Carruthers or Foutz, his pair of peerless hurlers, that could hit as well as they could pitch.

This line-up he kept intact, or as near as possible, for years, until they knew each other like an open book, knew just what to expect, just what ability the man up had to deliver and how well he could deliver. As a team they were kept running like a piece of well-oiled machinery, yet using every known device and trick, accompanied by plenty of gray matter and inside baseball. During Comiskey's career as captain-manager of the Browns, which extended through ten years, he developed many famous players, Foutz, Carruthers, Hudson, the great "Silver" King, Chamberlain, "Jack" Stevitts, a speed merchant of much renown; Brettenstein, even the now famous Clark Griffith served a short apprenticeship under him. Bushong, his great backstop, was a wonderful help to his manager in developing this galaxy of star hurlers.

LOSES BUNCH OF STARS.

The year 1889 saw the first break in "Commy's" team. Foutz, Carruthers and Bushong going to the Brooklyn club, then in the same association. This and the brotherhood war that followed in 1890 completely shattered and scattered the famous aggregation, Comiskey himself joining forces with the insurrectionists, taking with him Latham, O'Neal and Boyle to the club that was to represent Chicago in the Players' League under his management, a team that was a first division outfit and at times a contender for first honors. With the bursting of the brotherhood bubble Comiskey went back to his old love, St. Louis, and Christopher Von der Ahe. And "Chris" received him with open arms. He had learned in that one year just what Comiskey was to him, what burdens he had borne, what cares his captain had carried. Many times when the irate players that worked for "Chris" wanted to mob him, and he in turn wanted to club his men, "Commy" would step in and smooth out the trouble. In a short time he would have the players feeling good and "der boss's" big, honest face, covered with smiles and beaming with kindly feeling towards "der pest ever."

The year 1891, on his return to St. Louis, Comiskey found but very little material to build a team that would even make a bid for first division, and right then and there did Capt. Comiskey show his wonderful ability to organize. With only McCarthy and Boyle the only remaining remnants left of the old team to build on, by the middle of the season he had a club going that was making a fierce fight for first place, and only lost out to Boston by a narrow margin. In 1892 Comiskey undertook to pilot the Cincinnati Reds through the big twelve-club league that was formed that year by the amalgamation of the two major organizations. Predictions were freely made that Comiskey would give Cincinnati a winner. Those days, as it is today, that grand old burg entwined by the waters of the old Ohio, that run by, and sometimes over it, contained within its virtuous borders a Jonah, and a hidden one. Many able managers before Comiskey came had tried and retried to discover and dislodge the hoodoo. History tells of their failure. Comiskey came, saw and fought, but he didn't conquer. No leader ever worked harder to give a city a winner, to satisfy the owners and followers of the game than did Charles Comiskey. True, he had a certain amount of success. His team of 1892 made a good showing, but after three years, the great manager-captain gave it up as one of the hardest propositions in baseball.

And to his legion of successors, "Buck" Ewing, John Gansel, Kelley, the historic and famous Clark Griffith, not forgetting the last, but not least, aspirant, Henry O'Day, Comiskey at all times extended his sympathy. The grand "Old Roman" today is extending his heartfelt felicitations to the coming manager of the Cincinnati Reds, Joseph Tinker, and later, if necessary, he will be there with consolations.

GOES TO WESTERN LEAGUE.

Comiskey could have continued as manager of the Reds for 1895, but he had secured what he had long sought for, a franchise in the Western League and he couldn't have been brought back to old Cincinnati town with a requisition. So, in 1895, Charles Comiskey blossomed out and made his first start as an owner, securing a franchise from St. Paul. In that city he began a career that led him to the very top notch in the great national game, taking up the task of magnate, manager, captain and first baseman. His first team that he signed up were veterans almost to a man, warriors of long experience, men that had seen service at Nasby, Bull's Run and Gettysburg, so to speak. "Billy" George, "Jack" Glasscock, Antony Mullane, a hurler with seventeen years' experience, Scott Stratton, "Larry" Twitchell, one of the old-time Detroit sluggers of 1887, with himself at first, made up an array of vets that was inspiring to behold. To add "pep" to this ancient aggregation, the chief signed a youngster by the name of Pepper, and that was about all he had in the pitching line. How that bunch of old boys could slug the ball! With no pitching staff to speak of, and fielding of a very mediocre nature, they batted their way to second place and stayed there all through the race.

'Twas essentially a slugging baseball team. In a game against Kansas City they made thirty-four hits, with a total of fifty-one bases. The Kansas City fellows were not very slow with the stick, making twenty-one hits and as many runs, the score ending 34 to 21 in favor of Comiskey's swatters. That season the chief batted above the .300 mark, and kept pace with the best of them.

Comiskey was not noted for his versatility, seldom playing any other position than first base, although on one occasion he occupied the box, pitching two innings against Terre Haute, holding them hitless and runless, and fanning three batters. However, he played safe, not taking a chance until his team had twenty-three runs piled up, and there was no possible danger of falling down. Eighteen hundred ninety-six was the last season that Comiskey donned the spangles. The investment that Mr. Comiskey made in 1895, when he secured the St. Paul franchise, was a paying one. He continued as the owner of the St. Paul club until 1899, giving that city high-class baseball, and it was a matter of regret when he left to take up his duties of placing a team in Chicago.

In a city where the old National had reigned supreme for thirty years, it devolved upon him to make the American League club a success. Baseball history tells how the infant organization grew to the proportions of the old league, in fact, outrivaling it in many respects.

Charles Comiskey was born in the city of Chicago in 1856, but spent his younger days in Dubuque, Iowa, and there blossomed out as a professional under the experienced eye of "Tom" Loftus. After putting in three years' apprenticeship in the old Northwestern League, he signed with the St. Louis Browns in 1882.

SAFETY DEVICE.

Anyone who has driven an automobile any length of time has doubtless experienced difficulty keeping the windshield clear when driving in a storm. The Ohio Electric Car Company in this year's models exhibited at Smith Brothers, has arranged the front window to overcome this difficulty. The window is divided horizontally. In stormy weather the upper half may be swung out slightly, providing a small opening. This opening comes on a level with the vision of the driver, so that in spite of rain on the glass, one may peer out beneath it and keep watchful eye on the thoroughfare ahead.

NOTHING NEW-FANGLED.

W. E. Bush received notice from the Pierce-Arrow factory last week denying recent rumors regarding Pierce cars. The notice stated that the Pierce company would not adopt the left-hand drive or center control, would not use electric starting systems of any kind, would not use wire wheels, vales in the head or work drive. The Pierce cars will continue to use the present puppet vale long stroke motor, cast aluminum bodies and the improvements that have been found best for Pierce cars.

PACKARD TRUCK SALES BIG AT AUTO SHOWS.

This year Chicago's Motor Truck Show was undoubtedly the largest and most valuable exhibition of this kind ever held, according to C. R. Norton, truck sales manager of the Packard Motor Car Company. Speaking of the growth of the truck business, Norton gave out some figures showing the proportions to which the industry has grown.

"Our 1913 exhibit in the First Regiment Armory, represented a cash value of $30,000 or about one-tenth of the entire value of the exhibits of the whole show. Few persons not actively engaged in the motor truck business realize the magnitude of this industry or the extent of its growth during the last five years.

"Manufacturers, merchants and other business enterprises have invested upwards of $12,500,000 in over 4000 Packard heavy-duty trucks and light commercial vehicles now in daily service on the city streets and country roads of the United States and Canada.

"In the express and transfer business alone, we have sold 141 merchants over $1,000,000 worth of trucks, while 105 breweries operate Packard trucks aggregating a valuation of more than $800,000. These represent only two of the 165 lines of business to which we have sold heavy-duty equipment.

"Our selling season is now at its height. December recorded sales totalling more than $803,000. February's business was double that recorded the same month last year, and from present indications March sales will break all previous records in this department of our vehicle business."

KELLY TRUCKS SELL FAST IN LOS ANGELES.

When Western Branch Manager F. G. Miner of the Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck Company came down from San Francisco to Los Angeles last week to inspect the store recently opened at No. 1036 South Grand avenue, Manager J. L. Stone was able to report to him that nineteen Kelly trucks had already been sold.

The Nelson Transfer Company has purchased three three-ton and two one and a half ton Kellys. One and a half ton trucks have also been sold to the M. & M. Farm Company, the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company, the Chandler Oil Company and the Western Pipe and Steel Company. Ten machines have been disposed of to C. J. Baker of San Diego.

Miner, although a vociferously enthusiastic booster for San Francisco, had to admit that Los Angeles is "some" market for trucks.

I want you to compare this car, point by point, with the best $5000 car you know of.

That's a big request, and if I hadn't some pretty good reasons for believing that the Velie equals most $5000 cars I wouldn't make such a request. But I have had experienced engineers look over the engine, the transmission, the general finish of this machine, and say to me, "Renton, you have got a $5000 car here." I have had automobile agents who were selling big expensive six-cylinder cars ride in this four-cylinder car of mine, and say to me, "Renton, I didn't know the Velie Company were making a six. How long has it been out?" And so I say again, look at the best $5000 car you know of, from the viewpoint of power plant, general design, strength, safety, exterior finish, ride in the $5000 car, and then examine the Velie. I think you will see a clear saving of $2875.

No-Rim-Cut Tires
10% Oversize

Never Were Tires Like These

Goodyear tires are unique. We have our own fabrics and formulas, methods and processes—used by no one else.

They are different clear through—not alone in the oversize and No-Rim-Cut features—the things you quickly see.

Why They Lead

Goodyear tires outsell all others because of twenty reasons.

Fourteen years have been spent in their betterment. Scores of able experts have worked on them.

Hundreds of the tires have been worn out in our factory, under actual road conditions.

Thus 240 fabrics and formulas have been compared in service. Methods and processes have been compared—rival tires compared with our own.

How We Work

Every year, for 14 years, Goodyear tires have been bettered.

Yet a half-hundred men—mostly technical graduates—are still employed solely in research and experiment.

We spend about $100,000 per year just to learn how to make Goodyear tires better.

Note the Result

Now we give you a tire which makes rim-cutting impossible—the only satisfactory tire in the world which can't rim-cut.

We give you a tire 10 per cent oversize, which adds an average of 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

We give you a tire which so lessens upkeep that hundreds of thousands of men have adopted it. And their reports have given this tire by far the largest sale in the world.

These things don't come by accident. Tires which lack them must forever hold the lower places. Don't you want these features in the tires you use?

Write for the Goodyear Tire Book—14th-year edition. It tells all known ways to economize on tires.

There is an old saying "there is nothing new under the sun," but within the last few weeks our competitors have conceived a brand new reason for an automobile purchaser not considering a "Cole" car.

They say it looks altogether too good for the money; they say the demonstration is too smooth, and they pretend to believe that perhaps the real quality does not match up with the appearance, and that the purchaser might later on be disappointed.

We have endeavored to assure our competitors that their fears are groundless, and one of the best evidences of this fact is that there are several hundred of these cars now running in Los Angeles County to the absolute and entire satisfaction of their owners. This last week we have delivered cars to such expert automobile purchasers as Owens Bros. & Wells, who operate the Hotel Alexandria and Hayward automobile service, who have just purchased seven Cole cars for that service, and in addition, three of the members of the firm have purchased Coles for their own private use. Mr. Stewart, the designer and perfecter of the Stewart carburetor, also bought a Cole car; and we might add that these people paid just the same price you would have to pay for a similar car.

In these columns in the last two weeks we gave you the names of a couple of hundred Cole owners, any one of whom would be glad to tell you their experience with the Cole car.

You cannot afford to neglect the opportunity to inspect the Series 8 Cole cars. They come in three models—"40," $1825.00; "50," $2125.00; and six-cylinder "60," $2635.00.

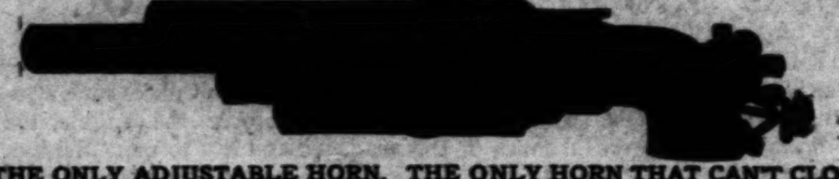
THE BIG 4 EXHAUST HORN

THE HORN THAT IS LIKE NO OTHER HORN.



THE ONLY ADJUSTABLE HORN. THE ONLY HORN THAT CAN'T CLOG.

The Big 4 Horn may look and sound like other horns, but do not be fooled—the resemblance goes no further. The Big 4 Horn is not like other horns, it is in a class by itself, it is the perfect warning device for automobiles today.

The Big 4 is the only exhaust horn which won't clog. The Big 4 has its valve (a sliding disc cut-out) built into the horn. Except when warning this sliding disc is held flush against the musical tubes, thus allowing no mud or soot to enter them. The exhaust escapes through the open cut-out, thus preventing mud or dirt getting into the valve.

The Big 4 Horn is adjustable to suit the exhaust of any car and so need not squeak or squeal.

The Big 4 Horn is very easy and cheap to install, the usual cost being less than $1.50.

HOLLYWOOD HIGH SCHOOL BOYS WIN TRACK MEET.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

IN ONE of the most exciting interscholastic track and field meets held here for the past three years, the Hollywood High School won the city championship yesterday after a hard battle with Manual Arts. Manual and Hollywood were neck and neck all the way, until the last two events of the day. The score of the meet ended: Hollywood, 47; Manual, 41; and the Los Angeles High School, 29.

The broad jump and the relay were the final events and before the winners were declared the score was: Hollywood, 39; Manual, 36. Goodwin of Hollywood then came through in the broad jump with a leap of 21ft. 6⅝in., scoring five points. Smead and Smith of Manual took second and third.

STILL VERY CLOSE.

The score after the broad jump stood: Hollywood, 44; Manual, 40. Goodwin's jump had practically cinched the meet for the foothill boys, but there was a slight chance for the Manual team in the relay, if Manual could win and Hollywood could be shoved into last place. But L.A. High proved too strong for the field and French and Clemmer Johnson romped in ahead of their laps, winning for the Hill Toppers. The Hollywood aggregation was close up for second, while Manual was unable to produce the necessary speed.

Tietsworth of Manual was one of the stars of the meet, winning the mile and half races with a garrison finish in each instance. Clemmer Johnson, took ten points for L.A. High, winning the 100 and 220, with French, of the same school, close up in each race. These two lads scored sixteen of the twenty-nine points made by L.A. and won the relay race.

Candee of Hollywood ran a great 440, winning from Brooks of L.A. in a fighting finish. The time of 53 3-5s. is very good for a high school athlete.

Forbes of Hollywood [illegible] yard hurdles, while [illegible] wood scored a [illegible] Perrin and Richardson [illegible] won the discus [illegible] der named. OXY WINS TRACK MEET FROM GOOD POMONA TEAM

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLAREMONT, March 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Occidental won from Pomona in the annual dual track and field meet here today by a score of 68½ to 61½. The meet was replete with sensational finishes and it was not till the relay that the meet was decided in favor of the Tiger team.

DOPE UPSET.

The dope was upset in nearly every race from the mile run to the relay. Annin, the Occidental freshman distance runner, entered the list of "phenoms" when he won the mile, the half and the two-mile in succession, all in fast time.

Stewart, the lengthy steeple-chaser, clipped a fifth of a second from the Coast mark in the low hurdles, making the barriers in 25s. flat. Durkee, the Pomona weight man, broke the college record in both the shot and discus, putting the former weight 40ft. 9¾in. and hurling the latter 111ft. 6in.

CLOSE MEET.

The meet was close throughout, with the broad jump and relay remaining, the score was 58½ all. The broad jump gave the Tigers a lead of three points. If Pomona could win the relay, the meet was theirs. Cook, who had previously won the 440, had a 25-yard lead over Gillette, and though the Sage Hen captain made a gallant effort to catch the flying "Johnnie," it was of no avail. Gillette ran the first 220 in 21 flat and made the 440 in 49s., slowing up at the finish when he saw [illegible]

POLO ENTHUSIASTS SPEND DAY IN PONY RACING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CORONADO, March 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Society gathered at the Coronado Country Club this afternoon for a programme of pony racing and polo which drew one of the largest crowds of the tournament.

The prettiest race of the first division of sport was the women's quarter-mile for a challenge cup which was won by Mrs. Robin Hayne of San Mateo, riding Paul Verdier's pony, Broncho. She pushed him under the wire a good length ahead of Miss Phyllis DeYoung of San Francisco, who was mounted on Stockdale, a pony from the stable of Will Tevis, Jr.

Mrs. Haynes's performance was a revelation to the society folks, who had not seen her ride. The time was 27 1-5 seconds.

This time was one-fifth second better than the men's quarter, in which Harry Hastings of San Mateo rode the same horse to victory, with K. G. Snowden of the Canadians second on Marcus and Harry Chapman of Boise third on Patsy.

Snowden was the winner of the jumbo race, riding [illegible] longing to Christian [illegible] dena. W. R. [illegible] Snookum-Chuck, an [illegible] owned by O. A. [illegible] dians. Harry [illegible] riding his own horse [illegible] race was a three-eighths dash [illegible] 35 1-5 seconds.

Donald, manager of Anderson, said that Bud weighed 132 pounds. From the size of the two boys, he looked much heavier than Brown.

Dan Morgan, Brown's manager, won the toss of corners and took the sunny corner.

Brown was seconded by Dan Morgan, Earl Mohan, Adam Brown, Harry Atwood and Manuel Vierra.

Anderson had Dick Donald, George Memsic, Dude Clark, Fred Anderson and after several rounds had been boxed, Roger Cornell joined Anderson's crowd.

Eddie Campi, Young Shurgue, Frankie Burns, Johnny Dundee, Frank Rose and Ajax were introduced before the bout started.

There were many prominent men at the ringside.

GOOD PRELIMINARIES.

They had four four-round preliminaries before the main event. The first between Joe Silver and Harry Hammer (135 pounds) was won by Hammer in the third round by a knockout. Hammer showed [illegible] material for a new comer [illegible] fairly well, has a good [illegible] either hand and was very [illegible] his first time out.

The second, between [illegible] and Young Allen, at 118 pounds [illegible] stepped in the fourth round [illegible] referee, George Blake. [illegible] too strong. Allen is a [illegible] but too light and not [illegible] meet Denny. Allen was [illegible] tle fellow and did his best [illegible]

MACBETH IS NEW GOLF CHAMP FOR PRESENT

Defeats Armstrong for the Honor at the Thirty Hole in Very Exciting Match—Runner-up Pl Classy Game, but Is Defeated by New Champi ing, Which Was Deadly.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

NORMAN MACBETH won the Southern California golf championship on the links of the Los Angeles Country Club yesterday afternoon by 1 up in 27 holes.

E. S. Armstrong, the runner-up and [illegible] champion, made a wonderful [illegible] and carried Macbeth to the [illegible] hole after being seven [illegible] early in the second round.

It was a most exciting finish and so [illegible] and keen was the gallery that [illegible] finalists must have felt like national heroes. All the Saturday afternoon golfers and their caddies from everywhere seemed to be on the field [illegible] the big match.

EVEN IN MORNING.

During the morning round Macbeth [illegible] playing splendidly on the greens, which is usually Armstrong's strong department. Macbeth's long game, on the other hand, was not up to his [illegible] standard, while Armstrong outdrove him at almost every tee. They [illegible] the first nine all square, having halved every hole but two, with [illegible] scores of 42 41 respectively.

The homeward round in the morning was a fine exhibition of first-class [illegible] Macbeth making a 36 and Armstrong 38, with the match 2 up in favor of Macbeth.

There was much consolation for the [illegible] in the fact that even a Macbeth [illegible] drive twice in succession out of [illegible] at the second, and even an [illegible] Armstrong can put two balls in the [illegible] at the seventh.

BIG GALLERY OUT.

In the afternoon the gallery had [illegible] to international dimensions—[illegible] all experts. No wonder Macbeth [illegible] the style and graces of a [illegible] gentleman" in very earnest. [illegible] it was that he won hole after [illegible] with a long series of incredible [illegible] 3 at the 3 was the only other [illegible] to appear in that first nine of [illegible] second round and Armstrong won [illegible] one hole—the eighth, with a fine [illegible] a long putt. But Macbeth had [illegible] holing long putts with monotonous consistency and had become [illegible]

Perhaps that was it. At all events [illegible] a hare and tortoise story after [illegible] Armstrong just kept plodding [illegible] on and winning a hole back [illegible] and halving one there until at [illegible] we realized that Macbeth's wonderful lead was reduced to [illegible] and 2 to go.

The next hole was watched in the [illegible] of sympathetic silence that is [illegible] with emotion—and Macbeth [illegible] a short putt and Armstrong [illegible] a long one. Macbeth 1 up and [illegible]

DORMY ONE.

At the seventeenth Armstrong got [illegible] better drive and his approach shot [illegible] him a long putt but Macbeth made [illegible] of his clever recoveries from a bad [illegible] and halved the hole for 4. Dormy [illegible]

[illegible] the eighteenth Macbeth landed [illegible] the tricky side of the hill, but [illegible] on the green with his third. [illegible] Armstrong playfully holed another long putt, Macbeth missing his, [illegible] game went all square, with [illegible] for Armstrong's fine recuperative [illegible]

[illegible] Macbeth showed what he [illegible] do at the first tee—a regular [illegible] to the ordinary player. You [illegible] to land your ball neatly on a [illegible] bunker's back—deviation to left [illegible] sends you rolling down the [illegible] Both our heroes [illegible] difficult shots and for a moment [illegible] looked as though they would show off by having the [illegible] Macbeth did, in fact, by [illegible] putt. And Armstrong [illegible] an inch or so.

HERE'S HOP[illegible]

DINGLEY AT NATIONAL FACTORY IS SURPRISED.

The first snowfall that Bert Dingley ever "participated in" was recently at Indianapolis, while he was visiting the factory plants of the National Motor Vehicle Company. Dingley spent several days at the National factories, going through every department in an analytical manner with the various engineers, superintendents and foremen. Dingley represents the National Motor Car Company of Los Angeles, and his factory visit was but a part of his general scheme of making a careful study of the automobile business.

He reports that the trip through the National factories was a revelation, and that he was surprised to find such a rigid system of manufacture, careful, painstaking and exact workmanship. "I knew the car was good, and knew that the factory was good, but I was astonished to find that the National people do so much work on their cars, especially the million and one little details, more than other companies do," says Dingley.

Dingley says that he wants every member of his organization to visit the National factories soon, and benefit by the experiences and educational value. With George M. Dickson, general manager of the National company, Dingley visited the Indiana Legislature. He says that his visit has taught him many things, how laws are made, how cars are made, and how snow falls.

LATEST HAYNES MODEL ARRIVES.

Next Tuesday will be a red-letter day at the Haynes Auto Sales Company's headquarters on Figueroa street when the latest Haynes car—Model 24—will be displayed for the first time.

Many features present themselves upon inspection of this new Haynes car which have been overlooked in the advance advertisements. For instance, the car has a rather rakish appearance and is quite low. The cylinders, of which there are four, are cast in pairs with a one-half-inch offset. The suspension of the car is of special Haynes design, known as a combination four-point flexible and rigid suspension. The car is equipped with a dual type magneto, a splash and force feed lubricating system.

As its predecessor, Model 22, Model 24 is equipped with the Leece-Neville separate unit electric starting and lighting system. The left-hand drive with a center control is also a new feature of this car. It has a wheel base of 118 inches, is upholstertd both in front and the rear seats with twelve-inch cushions and is equipped with forty-inch springs, semi-elliptic in design, and forty-eight-inch three-quarter elliptic springs in the rear.

AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA IN WAVERLY ELECTRIC.

Miss Gladys Caldwell, prima donna, and John L. Dickinson, baritone, of the Sheehan Grand Opera Company, visited the factory of the Waverley Company when the company was in Indianapolis recently and were shown some of the latest models of Silent Waverley electrics.

Miss Caldwell's fancy was so captivated with one of these models, the Limousine Four, that she graciously consented to be photographed in it. The novel seating arrangement of the car with its four separate chairs luxuriously upholstered and providing a clear view ahead for the driver, caught her fancy first. "I do like elbow room when I drive a car," she said, "and see, I can turn this handle as far as it will go without touching Dick's shoulder. Isn't it fine? Did ever anyone see such taste and such comfort combined? Why, it's just like a little drawing-room," and it only took Miss Caldwell a matter of half an hour to pick out the upholstery and attend to the details of ordering a Limousine Four for her own use. In this model car the seating arrangement permits the owner to sit in the usual sociable left-hand rear seat and drive without having her vision obscured by a passenger in front of her. The division of the rear seat into three chairs gives utmost elbow room for each passenger, and the fourth occupant sits cosily in the right-hand corner diagonally facing the driver.

Comfort, safety and sociability are thus all provided in a car that had made the most pronounced hit of the season.

Very Tight Fit.

MACBETH IS NEW GOLF CHAMP FOR PRESENT YEAR.

Defeats Armstrong for the Honor at the Thirty-seventh Hole in Very Exciting Match—Runner-up Plays Very Classy Game, but Is Defeated by New Champion's Putting, Which Was Deadly.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

[illegible] MACBETH won the [illegible] California golf cham[illegible] on the links of the Los [illegible] Country Club yesterday after[illegible] 1 up in 37 holes.

[illegible] Armstrong, the runner-up and [illegible] champion, made a wonderful [illegible] and carried Macbeth to the [illegible] hole after being seven [illegible] in the second round.

[illegible] most exciting finish and so [illegible] was the gallery that [illegible] must have felt like na[illegible]. All the Saturday aft[illegible] and their caddies from [illegible] seemed to be on the field [illegible] the big match.

[illegible] IN MORNING.

[illegible] the morning round Macbeth [illegible] splendidly on the greens, [illegible] usually Armstrong's strong[illegible]. Macbeth's long game, [illegible] other hand, was not up to his [illegible], while Armstrong out[illegible] at almost every tee. They [illegible] the first nine all square, hav[illegible] every hole but two, with [illegible] of 43 41 respectively. [illegible] homeward round in the morn[illegible] a fine exhibition of first-class [illegible] making a 36 and Arm[illegible] with the match 2 up in fa[illegible] Macbeth.

[illegible] much consolation for the [illegible] in the fact that even a Macbeth [illegible] twice in succession out of [illegible] the second, and even an [illegible] on just two balls in the [illegible] seventh.

[illegible] GALLERY OUT.

[illegible] afternoon the gallery had [illegible] international dimensions— [illegible] No wonder Macbeth [illegible] the style and graces of a [illegible] in very earnest [illegible] that he won hole after [illegible] a long series of incredible [illegible] the 1 was the only other [illegible] in that first nine of [illegible] and Armstrong won [illegible] the eighth, with a fine [illegible] putt. But Macbeth had [illegible] putts with monot[illegible] and had become [illegible]

[illegible] that was it. At all events [illegible] story after [illegible] just kept plodding [illegible] winning a hole back [illegible] one there until at [illegible] realized that Mac[illegible] had was reduced to [illegible] to go.

[illegible] was watched in the [illegible] silence that is [illegible] Macbeth [illegible] putt and Armstrong [illegible] Macbeth 1 up and [illegible]

[illegible] ONE.

[illegible] Armstrong got [illegible] approach shot [illegible] putt but Macbeth made [illegible] recovery from a bad [illegible] the hole for 4. Dormy [illegible]

[illegible] Macbeth land[illegible] side of the hill, but [illegible] the green with his third. [illegible] holed an[illegible] Macbeth missing his, [illegible] all square, with [illegible] Armstrong's fine recupera[illegible]

[illegible] showed what he [illegible] regular [illegible] player. You [illegible] ball neatly on a [illegible] to left [illegible] down the [illegible] our heroes [illegible] for a mo[illegible] as though they would show off by halving that par 4 in 3. Macbeth did, in fact, by holing a long putt. And Armstrong escaped by half an inch or so.

HERE'S HOPING.

So Macbeth recovered his laurels. He is now Southern California and club champion and if he will only kindly become coast champion, too, h's fellow members will endow him forever with their affection. He really does make a nice handsome champion, doesn't he?

A great stag banquet was held last night at the Los Angeles Country Club for the presentation of the prizes. There are seventeen altogether, of which Macbeth gets two—the championship and the qualifying round.

Armstrong gets the runner-up trophy. Woodcock gets the first prize for second sixteen, with Winsor Walton runner-up. Conde Jones wins the first defeated eights, with Morris Phillips as runner-up. J. C. Niven wins the second flight defeated eights with Martin Chase as runner-up.

Alexander MacKeigan wins the third flight cup with W. H. Keller as runner-up. Hugh McFarland wins third defeated eights with P. A. Coon as runner-up. W. C. Pennell wins the fourth flight cup with P. C. Lewis as runner-up.

Altogether San Gabriel has made quite a nice little haul of silverware in this tournament with no less than five of her members taking home prizes.

DINGLEY AT NATIONAL FACTORY IS SURPRISED.

The first snowfall that Bert Dingley ever "participated in" was recently at Indianapolis, while he was visiting the factory plants of the National Motor Vehicle Company. Dingley spent several days at the National factories, going through every department in an analytical manner with the various engineers, superintendents and foremen. Dingley represents the National Motor Car Company of Los Angeles, and his factory visit was but a part of his general scheme of making a careful study of the automobile business.

He reports that the trip through the National factories was a revelation, and that he was surprised to find such a rigid system of manufacture, careful painstaking and exact workmanship. "I knew the car was good, and knew that the factory was good, but I was astonished to find that the National people do so much work on their cars, especially the million and one little details, more than other companies do," says Dingley.

Dingley says that he wants every member of his organization to visit the National factories soon, and benefit by the experiences and educational value. With George M. Dickson, general manager of the National company, Dingley visited the Indiana Legislature. He says that his visit has taught him many things, how laws are made, how cars are made, and how snow falls.

LATEST HAYNES MODEL ARRIVES.

Next Tuesday will be a red-letter day at the Haynes Auto Sales Company's headquarters on Figueroa street when the latest Haynes car—Model 24—will be displayed for the first time.

Many features present themselves upon inspection of this new Haynes car which have been overlooked in the advance advertisements. For instance, the car has a rather rakish appearance and is quite low. The cylinders, of which there are four, are cast in pairs with a one-half-inch offset. The suspension of the car is of special Haynes design, known as a combination four-point flexible and rigid suspension. The car is equipped with a dual type magneto, a splash and force feed lubricating system.

As its predecessor, Model 22, Model 24 is equipped with the Leece-Neville separate unit electric starting and lighting system. The left-hand drive with a center control is also a new feature of this car. It has a wheel base of 118 inches, is upholstertd both in front and the rear seats with twelve-inch cushions and is equipped with forty-inch springs, semi-elliptic in design, and forty-eight-inch three-quarter elliptic springs in the rear.

AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA IN WAVERLY ELECTRIC.

Miss Gladys Caldwell, prima donna, and John L. Dickinson, baritone, of the Sheehan Grand Opera Company, visited the factory of the Waverley Company when the company was in Indianapolis recently and were shown some of the latest models of Silent Waverley electrics.

Miss Caldwell's fancy was so captivated with one of these models, the Limousine Four, that she graciously consented to be photographed in it. The novel seating arrangement of the car with its four separate chairs luxuriously upholstered and providing a clear view ahead for the driver, caught her fancy first. "I do like elbow room when I drive a car," she said, "and see, I can turn this handle as far as it will go without touching Dick's shoulder. Isn't it fine? Did ever anyone see such taste and such comfort combined? Why, it's just like a little drawing-room," and it only took Miss Caldwell a matter of half an hour to pick out the upholstery and attend to the details of ordering a Limousine Four for her own use. In this model car the seating arrangement permits the owner to sit in the usual sociable left-hand rear seat and drive without having her vision obscured by a passenger in front of her. The division of the rear seat into three chairs gives utmost elbow room for each passenger, and the fourth occupant sits cozily in the right-hand corner diagonally facing the driver.

Comfort, safety and sociability are thus all provided in a car that had made the most pronounced hit of the season.

Dillon's Clouters Slam in the Final Inning.

A fair-sized crowd saw the White Sox scrubs take their game from Hen Berry's Angels at Washington Park yesterday afternoon by an 8-to-7 score.

Tozer and Driscoll, the pitchers who worked for Los Angeles, both had their bad innings. Cicotte, the Sox heaver, was clouted for a single and two triples in the last of the ninth, which added to a tray spot to the short end of the score board and gave the foreign rooters a scare.

The score:

CLOSE HOCKEY GAME.

Duarte Stars Just Manage to Beat Y.W.C.A. Team By One Goal in Very Exciting Contest.

After one of the most spectacular matches for the Neil Nettleship trophy and the ladies' hockey championship of Southern California, Duarte just managed to beat the fast Y.W.C.A. eleven, by the narrow margin of one point. The scores were 3 goals to 2 goals. The match was played at Exposition Park yesterday afternoon.

At half-time, each team had scored 2 goals and both were at fever heat. During the second period the play was terrific, each side being intent upon making the winning hit. Crowds of women enthusiasts shrieked themselves hoarse and pushed up and down the touch lines, in an effort to impart more enthusiasm in the tiring contestants.

Miss Alice Scott, captain of the unbeaten Duarte eleven, scored the first goal after two minutes of play. This nettled the "Christians," who rushed the sphere down the ground at a tremendous clip and equalized, Mrs. Herzog scoring from the right.

By this time both teams had gained their second wind and went at it hammer and tongs. After a beautiful pass by Mrs. Maddock, Mrs. Seymour put the champions once more in the lead by scoring. Nothing daunted, the Y.W.C.A. team pushed last year's pennant winners off their feet. Miss Gray equalized amidst prolonged cheering.

Upon resumption of play both teams played their best. First one side then the other seemed in a position to score, only to be thwarted by the excellent work of the goal-keepers.

Two minutes before the call of time, Mrs. Seymour again came into possession of the ball and shot a goal. Duarte has at last found an equal, if not a superior. The Y.W.C.A. will make it more than interesting in their next future. Following is the line-up:

Duarte—Miss Alice Scott, captain; Mrs. Gordon Maddock, Miss Marjorie Maddock, Miss Marjorie Morgan, Miss Dolly Scott, Miss Hilda Carter, Mrs. Emily Seymour, Mrs. J. Allan Munroe, Mrs. H. R. Miller, Miss Doris Beck, Mrs. Scott Boyd. Y.W.C.A.—Miss Marguerite Miller, captain; Miss B. Gray, Miss F. Brook, Miss Enid Handyside, Miss N. Bixford, Miss G. Brack, Mrs. D. Herzog, Mrs. R. Farquhar, Miss J. McCall, Miss Lorraine Handyside, Miss E. Welsh.

U. S. C. Defeats Stanford.

fell in a heap on the cinders, while Jackson, without apparently losing a stride, romped home a winner.

He did his lap in 50 1-5s., making the total time for the relay 3m. 26s., flat. This breaks the Southern record in about four places. What happened to McClure was decidedly unfortunate, though it looked as though Jackson had the best of him. McClure said, after the meet, that he thought that he could have beaten Jackson as he was full of sprint, but this will be proven the next time they meet.

WHITTED DISQUALIFIED

This made the score 62 to 60 at this point, but Templeton wanted to jump off the tie with Watkins. It then developed that Whitted had been disqualified in the low hurdles, for running out of his lane and off the track, in taking the eighth hurdle, the third place going to Laird of U.S.C.

Templeton was persuaded by Manager Burbank to let the matter drop to avoid further argument, so after order had been brought out of chaos the final score stood 63 to 59 for U.S.C.

A wild scene followed and the joy-mad rooters began to celebrate the first victory over Stanford.

The meet opened with the hammer throw, Drake of Stanford winning easily, with Hendricks of U.S.C. taking a good second. Bailey was drafted for the event and took third place for the Trojans, a point that proved worth a mint at the end of the meet.

A terrible blow fell on the Trojans when the men were called for the mile and Capt. Linton Smith was missing. It developed that he had been taken with the mumps early in the morning.

WILSON TOO FAST.

Torrance faced the speedy Wilson and Angell, in a race where he seemed sure only of third place, but after four hard laps he fought Angell off his feet for second, Wilson of Stanford running a beautiful race for first. If Smith had been in the race there might have been a different story, but this Wilson boy is wonderfully good.

Capt. Stanford, of Stanford, then upset all the dope by winning the 100-yard dash in 10 and 1-5s. Throop, Courtney and Bradley were all in front at the fifty-yard mark, but Campbell started to climb and nosed out Waldo by six inches. During this time Bill Carrigan, ptomaine stomach and all, came rambling up from the rear and took third from McNair, of Stanford, who appeared to have the place cinched at the 75-yard mark.

The 220 was simply a repetition of the 100, Campbell's great sprint being too much for the Trojans. Throop was off his form as he broke badly at the tape. McNair took the third.

"The meet is a landslide for Stanford," was heard on every side. Then Fred Kelly stepped on the field with ten points, five in the shot and five in the high hurdles. In the hurdles he left the field by a clean eight yards. Ward got second, owing to the fact that Whitted unfortunately knocked down three hurdles and was disqualified.

The two-mile saw another idol broken, when Dodge defeated Swigget. The U.S.C. man was drawn out by Angell in the first three laps and killed off, so that Dodge had more sprint at the end of the long grind that the famous Swigget.

Don Dawson made a wonderful leap in the broad, clearing 23ft., 2 and ½in. Earl was second with 22ft. 5½in.

GREAT QUARTER MILE.

The 440 developed a terrible battle. From the crack of the pistol, the race was between McClure, Jackson and Hodge. Jackson took the pole with Hodge and boxed McClure. McClure, in his struggles to get out of difficulty, jabbed a spike into Jackson and bumped him in the wind.

While all this was going on, Hodge was winning the race. Jackson stopped when he could have coasted in for a third, allowing Gard to get the point. It was a great race and spilled more of the dope.

Kinney and Templeton took eight points in the high jump, causing another slide for Stanford. Cole beat Tipton out for second place in the 880, the veteran being forced into third place. Bonnett, of Stanford, ran a great race, finishing in 2m. and 1s.

Then came the final thrill of the great meet. Both universities should be proud of their respective teams, they are made up of splendid clean limbed American athletes.

THE ENDORSEMENT

The Packard Motor Car Company now has on its books a greater volume of new business than ever before. We wish to remind our patrons that prompt action is necessary in order to secure desirable dates of delivery.

Unfilled orders for Packard vehicles aggregate today, March 14, $5,395,300.

These orders are for vehicles not merely sold to dealers. They are for Packards actually sold by dealers to customers.

STAMINA

DRIVING a new Packard "38," William R. McCulla left the new Southern Hotel in Chicago at 2:30 a.m., Monday, February 17. Seven hours and nine minutes later he arrived at the Hotel Pontchartrain in Detroit. The distance is 284 miles.

Three stops for gasoline and tires occupied a total of 15 minutes. The actual running time therefore was 6 hours and 54 minutes, making the average speed for the entire distance a little more than 41 miles per hour.

This record, we believe, has never been equalled under any circumstances. Considering the frozen, rutty condition of the mud and gravel roads traveled by the Packard "38," it stands as a marvelous endorsement of the maximum service car.

This means absolute approval of the Packard square deal one-price policy and is an unqualified endorsement of Packard vehicle features.

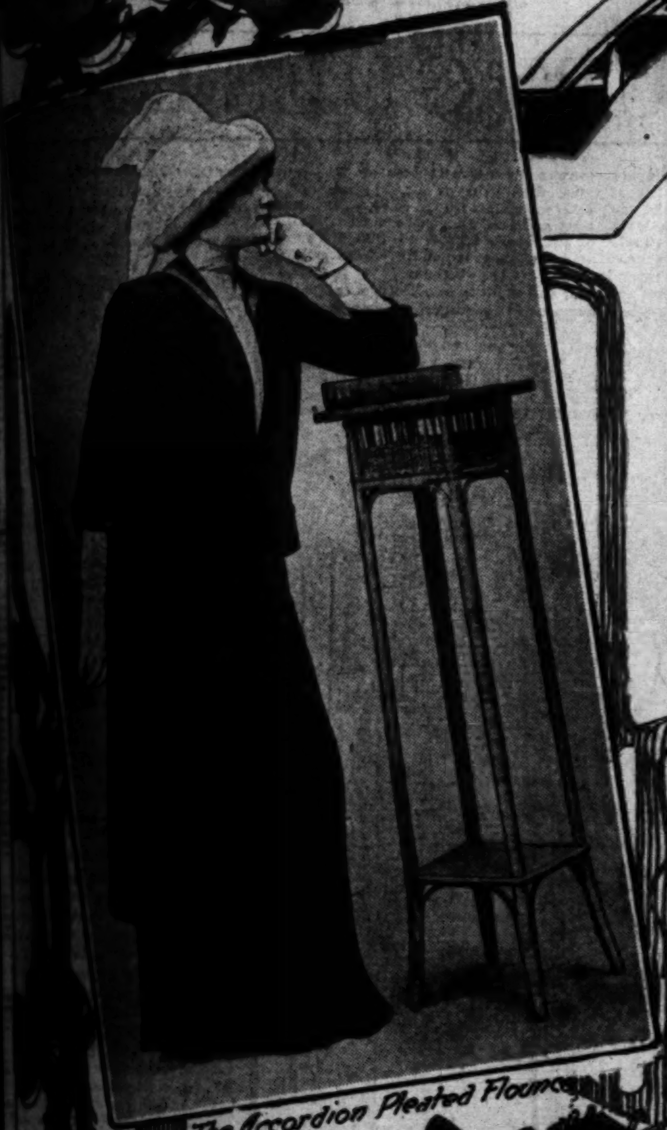
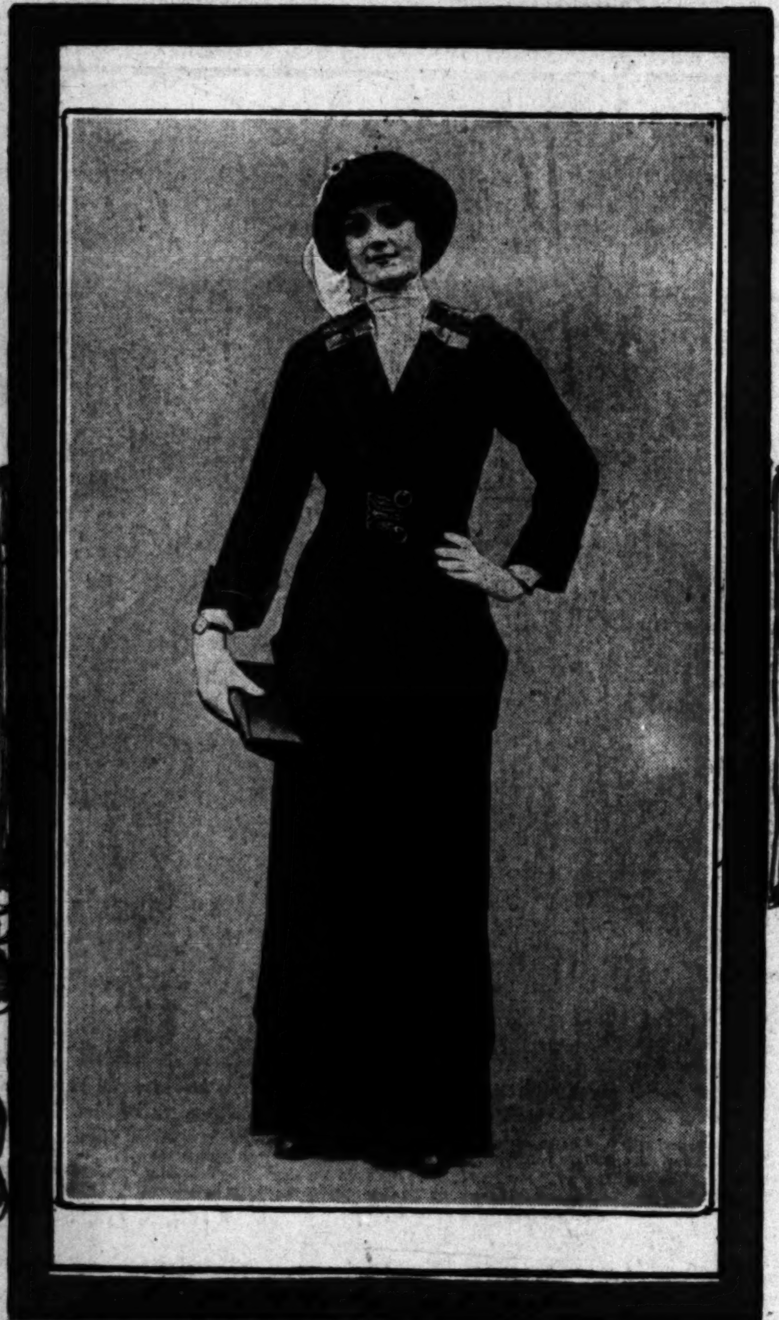
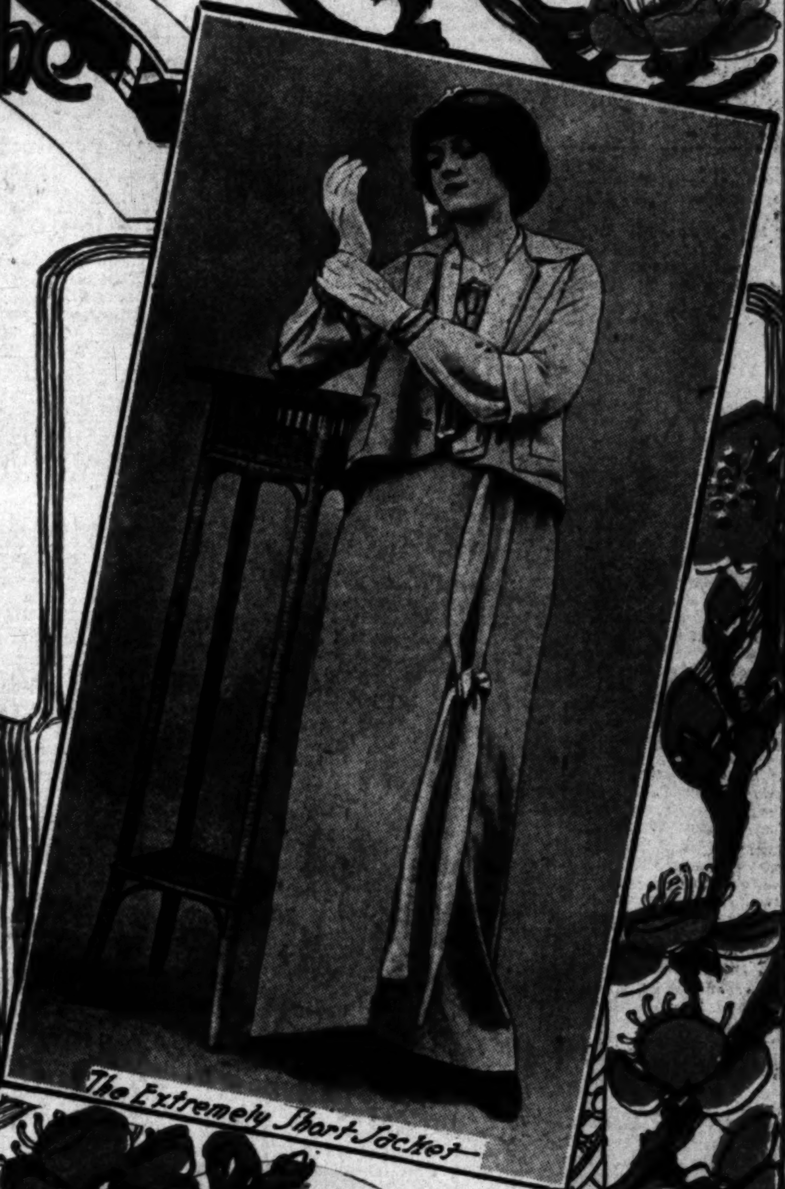
FEATURES of the SPRING SUIT



The Accordion Pleated Flounce





The Extremely Short Jacket

A CHANGE in modes is always an interesting subject to the feminine world, and here is a collection of suits which emphasizes the best features of the spring models. They represent the creative genius of the famous Parisian designers and should win the admiration of every woman capable of judging smart costumes.

A Drecoll model of corbeau-blue silk poplin is trimmed with narrow pleatings of chiffon and silk. The jacket is slightly below hip length, sharply cutaway in front and fastened at the high waist line with a two-button clasp. Over the deep revers are smaller pointed ones of white satin. The sleeves are elbow-length and a double frill finishes the cuff.

Made with a panel front, cut with side pieces which form a deep band at the hem, the skirt is especially modish.

"Cafe-au-lait" corduroy is used for the suit featuring the extremely short jacket. Hanging in straight, full lines, the odd little jacket extends a trifle below the waist line in front and a few inches more at the back. The lining of palest tan silk crepon extends below the short sleeves of the corduroy, forming full undersleeves, which are gathered into tight cuffs trimmed with green silk. A plain skirt, softly gathered at the belt and adorned with a side sash, accompanies the jacket.

The suit which suggests the pannier effect is developed in navy-blue serge, the material being arranged in graceful folds over the hips of the jacket. A collar of blue silk finishes the neck line, the ends of which are gathered beneath strips embroidered with crewel work. Here the touch of red so strongly favored this season appears, for ruby-red wool outlined with sapphire blue are the colors used. This is a Bulgarian note worthy of remembering.

The sides of the skirt are softly draped at the bottom, the fullness disappearing beneath a broad front panel.

Brocade, so popular during the winter, will repeat its success this season. Dark-blue brocaded silk is used for the jacket belted with a broad side sash. The rounded collar is joined to revers which extend to the high waist line, and the coat is fastened by three small buttons on the girdle. Tightly fitted cuffs appear below the bell-shaped topsleeves. Completing this suit is a skirt of blue charmeuse.

Paquin is responsible for the attractive suit showing the accordion-pleated flounce. Blue serge is the material used, and the jacket is short and hangs in straight, loose lines. Over a broad collar of the material a smaller one of chamois-colored broadcloth covered with another of blue satin is arranged. A narrow cuff of the chamois broadcloth finishes the short sleeves.

An overskirt with rounded sides extends over the pleated flounce. A lining of chamois satin is used for the jacket—following the mandate of fashion that linings correspond in color with the trimmings.

Bedford cord is numbered among the most popular materials, and it is used to the best advantage in the costume by Redfern. The jacket has a shawl collar and cuffs of light-gray satin, and is fastened beneath with a strap and button. The fullness beneath the arms is gathered under a narrow belt which extends across the back. From below this falls a peplum with square-cut corners.

A slightly draped skirt with soft gathers at the waist line completes the costume.

This is a well-selected sextet of spring suits, and you will make no mistake by choosing whichever one appeals to you most.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

HOW DO YOU CARE FOR YOUR GUESTS?

"THE guest room of the house is an indication of the spirit of the hostess."

It must have been a man who said that! We who are women and have judgment enough to consider the matter carefully would be sorry to think the statement true.

Think for a moment of the guest rooms where you have spent one night or more during the visits you have made as a stranger or as a welcome friend, or stop nearer home and look with an unprejudiced eye at the guest room in your own house.

If you reflect a little, I fancy your experience will prove to be the same as mine. While there are many places where I have been deliciously comfortable, the memory abides with me of chambers in which I have felt sunk in the depths of forlornness from the lack of attention my hostess had bestowed upon the ease of her guests.

One I recollect with especial distinctness. I had been sent as a delegate to a convention and the arrangement made in advance that I was to stay at the home of an old family friend. Instead of being met at the station by my hostess-to-be, a substitute awaited me with the information that my friend had been called out of town by the sudden and alarming illness of her mother, and that my entertainment had been assumed by one of the few unappropriated hostesses of the convention. I smothered the pangs of homesickness that assailed me and prepared myself to make the best of conditions and to comport myself as a willing if an unexpected guest.

I will spare you some of the details. It was muggy weather in late spring, the house was atrociously overheated, and we had roast pork and mince pie for dinner. I ate lightly, despite the well meant efforts of my host to ply me with food, and, pleading fatigue after a hard day's travel, went early to my room, yearning for my bed.

Possibly there may be a harder bed somewhere in the habitable globe, but if so I have never met it! The pillows were large and lumpy, the sheets were too short and came up from the bottom as soon as I was between them. When I tried to light the gas to remake the bed I made the harrowing discovery that there were no matches in the room. I straightened the covers as well as I could by the sense of feeling, but by the time this was done I was too nervous to sleep, notwithstanding my weariness. I tossed restlessly most of the night, longing to know the time, but unable to see my watch; devoured with thirst after the pork and mince pie, but afraid to start in search of the washstand, lest I might never find my bed again.

By the time morning came I was in the grip of a sick headache, which held me a prisoner for two days, during which I tossed on my flinty couch and agonized with homesickness and longing for my very own bed.

Guest Room Comforts.

This is an extreme case, perhaps, but have you not known instances like it? How often do you visit a friend and find everything as you would like it to be? The bed may be resplendent with handsome covers, the bureau decked out with lace and fluffy coverings. But is the bed well made and are there pins and hair pins and other necessities on the dresser? The towels may be rich in embroidery, but are there wash cloths in abundance provided and is the soap dish immaculate, with fresh soap? Is there a light convenient for the mirror and for the head of your bed, and are there a few books with which you can while away an idle moment? Is there an extra covering to throw over your shoulders if you lie down for a nap, or to draw up if the night turns cold? Are the pillows for show or for slumber?

I grant there are certain articles it is expected you should carry with you in traveling. Even if there are full supplies of toilet fittings, if you find an array of hair brush and comb, nail file and shoehorn, nail brush and powder in waiting you are supposed to use your own possessions in this line. Nevertheless it is a delight to find all these aids at hand in case your luggage should have been delayed or you should have forgotten to tuck in your clothes brush or your tooth powder or your button hook.

In at least one home where I visit I find what I consider a perfectly appointed guest room and if I lay stress upon this rather than upon other spare chambers I have occupied it is because the hostess of the first is a woman in moderate circumstances. In her home I do not find a maid to unpack my trunk or to offer me her services in dressing; my friend is more likely to come in at night to turn down my bed for me than to send her one maid to do it. Yet no wealth could make me more comfortable.

In the first place the room is prettily, although simply furnished. The bed is excellent, and it is always well made, with the lower sheet drawn tightly, the coverings tucked in well, an extra duvet laid across the foot, a small pillow as well as a pair of large ones provided.

The scarf on the dresser is of plain linen with no lace or silk, but on it are spread shoehorn, clothes and hair brush, comb, button hook, nail file, scissors, powder box and puff. The pin cushion is generously stocked, the washstand holds all requirements of tooth and face powder, soap and hand lotion, wash cloths and towels, fine and coarse.

In the closet are hangers for my frocks, and a wash kimono and a pair of soft slippers in case of need.

At the head of my bed is not only an electric reading lamp but a candle and matches lest the electricity should fail. A small pitcher of drinking water and a glass are there, too, and there is space for one or more of the books that fill a rack on another table. Writing materials are in the table drawers—paper, envelopes, postcards, blotters, stamps, inkstand, pens—all one might need.

At one side of the room is a couch on which to take an afternoon rest and it is placed so that the light from the window falls right for one who wishes to read herself into drowsiness. The shades at the windows are dark enough to exclude the morning light.

What You Owe a Guest.

Do I hear you say that you cannot spare a room like this for chance guests, that you need every chamber of good size that you have, and that you must tuck your guest into a wee apartment which is all you can yield for the occasional visitor?

I sympathize with you, for during a number of years I was in the same position. But always I bore in my mind a hospitable and crowded home in which I made some of the most delightful visits of my girlhood, where the guest chamber was a hall room, termed by the family "the shelf." There was space in it for nothing but the single bed, the small bureau, the tinier washstand, and the diminutive table and a couple of chairs. Yet the furnishings were skilfully arranged to make the most of the limited space and the supply of towels, toilet needfuls, writing materials, and the like were as generous as though the room had been ten times its size.

Leave the contemplation of the spare rooms of others for a moment and look at your own. If you were a visitor would you be content with it, if its comforts were backed by a hearty welcome, or do you rely upon the latter to make up for deficiencies in the way of conveniences for washing and dressmaking? Is there nothing you can do to remedy the shortcomings of the room as it now is?

A great deal can be done if you will set your wits to work. In the first place, grant the guest the space to which he or she is entitled. Don't let a friend find a three drawer bureau with two of the drawers filled with your own belongings and but one drawer left for the guest's clothing and toilet articles. Don't offer a closet half full of your best frocks, so that the impression is made that you have to turn yourself out to let the visitor in.

If the room is small study compactness of arrangement. Put up a shelf for books, place a shirt waist box under the window or a utility box at the foot of the bed or a dress box which runs on casters under the bed. All sorts of expedients have been devised for the benefit of the dwellers in city tents and should be [illegible] your guest room livable.

If there is no opportunity for [illegible] commodations there and the [illegible] share the family bath room, at least [illegible] a towel rack in the spare chamber [illegible] a place for hair and tooth brushes [illegible] ders and lotions of various kinds [illegible] above the wash stand in the bath [illegible] Make your friend feel that there is a [illegible] prepared for her and that she [illegible] to take pot luck, so to speak, with the [illegible] of the household when it comes to [illegible] tions!

Decline of Hospitality.

I have heard some persons say that [illegible] space is as limited as the [illegible] should be out of the question. I [illegible] with this statement. To me it is a [illegible] ancholy thing to reflect upon the [illegible] hospitality that seems to [illegible] flow from the high cost of living [illegible] rapid rate of existence, or the [illegible] absorbing occupations outside, or the [illegible] packing in our houses.

Whatever the cause, the result is [illegible] deprecated and we who make the [illegible] the land should correct it as best [illegible] We may not hope to restore the old [illegible] free fashion of entertaining [illegible] and guests, but there is no reason [illegible] should not introduce hospitality [illegible] to comply with conditions and [illegible] just as cordial, as wholesome [illegible] ful as the earlier way of [illegible] we loved to our rooftrees.

The way to make our homes [illegible] is not by mourning over changed circumstances or even by endeavoring to [illegible] poor imitation of what used to be [illegible] adapting ourselves to what we [illegible] The invitation to an apartment [illegible] be less generous than to a large [illegible] and it should be remembered that [illegible] living in a flat is [illegible] entertained in a tiny living room [illegible] meals in a minute dining room [illegible] expect to sleep in a [illegible]

We have not yet reached the [illegible] the human form divine [illegible] smallness of the accommodations [illegible] for it, but we certainly [illegible] untarily to a manner of living [illegible] tle is liberal except the [illegible] housekeeping bills.

So give your attention to [illegible] or the quarters which are [illegible] your guests and see if comfort [illegible] achieved without [illegible] dance of towels, soap, and [illegible] powder and pins, on which I [illegible] haps needless stress [illegible] fort, are not dependent [illegible] room, but may be [illegible] pass and a single bed is as [illegible] double one when well made. [illegible] according to your cloth, [illegible] and take for a motto [illegible] spise not the day of small things.

"I WANT a recipe for good white bread, how much flour is to be used in it and how to mix it. A recipe would be most thankfully received.

"MRS. VON K."

"I have been keeping house long and am fairly successful in everything I cook with the exception of my bread. I have tried a number of different methods, but none is successful. Will some one kindly tell me the exact proportions for two small loaves of bread and a small pan of rolls? I would like to make the latter in the evening with yeast, and mix it in the morning. Can you tell me exactly how long to let sponge rise and how long to let it remain in the pans? I live in a steam heated house and can always keep bread in a warm place away from a draft.

These two queries were lying on my desk awaiting their turn to appear in this department when the following letter, written in answer to the appeal of another correspondent, came into my hands. I give it as a reply to both the above.

"In response to a request for a bread formula I would like to give mine, in which I use potatoes. I certainly have most delicious bread and my recipe is so simple that I would like to lend a 'helping hand,' as I am much interested in this Corner. These are the directions:

"Select one good sized potato, slice and boil until done; mash smooth with a potato masher. You should have a quart and a half of the potato water. Break up three-quarters of a cake of yeast, put it into a cup of warm water to dissolve. When entirely smooth pour the yeast into the potato water, stirring in enough flour to make a batter stiff enough to drop from a spoon. Set in a warm place to rise. This I do at noon.

"Before going to bed my sponge is up, light as a cork. Then I make it up stiff by taking one cup of sugar, one large tablespoonful of cottolene or lard, and one-half tablespoonful of salt. I put these into my mixing bowl, then turn in my sponge and one pint of warm water. I put in the flour next, folding it in with a large spoon and taking care not to get the dough too stiff. I knead it for some minutes, grease the dough well on the top and bottom, then cover it and set it to rise. In the morning I find it beautiful and light, ready to be made into loaves. I grease the top of the loaves, so as to make the crust tender.

"You will have to use care and not let the bread get too light. Have the oven a good heat and bake slowly. I bake mine an hour. Of course you have to be governed by the size of the loaves. This amount makes six good sized loaves. I should like to hear from any of the sisters who may use this recipe. If the directions are carefully followed there will be no such thing as failure.

"F. O."

This recipe ought to be helpful to "Mrs. Von K.," although it is on rather too large a scale for C. D. L. My own recipe, which I give below for her benefit, is as explicit as I can make it, but it is impossible to offer such close directions that a certain amount of judgment is not called for. The nature of flour differs, some thickening more than others, so that the full allowance of one brand is too much of another.

Atmospheric conditions affect the rapidity with which the bread rises, so that one cannot say that a fixed length of time will always suffice to bring the dough to the correct degree of lightness. So, too, with the oven. Unless you have an oven thermometer you cannot be sure of having the same temperature each time you bake or all the time the bread is in the oven. The only way is to use common sense in following careful directions and learn by mistakes as well as by successes.

The recipe I give has been used in my own house with complete satisfaction for years, and yet there are other rules which would work quite as well and are preferred by other housekeepers.

Sift two quarts of good flour into a bowl with a half teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of white sugar. Heat a pint of milk almost to boiling with a heaping teaspoonful of butter, put with it a pint of boiling water, and let the liquid become lukewarm. When it reaches this stage put into it half a cake of yeast dissolved in half a cupful of tepid water, rubbing the yeast perfectly smooth. Turn all into a hollow made in the middle of the flour, stir it with a spoon to a dough, turn it on a board and knead it for ten minutes. The dough should be just firm enough to handle, but not stiff. If it seems stiff add a little more lukewarm water. Should it seem softer than you can handle, work in a little more flour. The general rule is that there should be fully twice as much flour as liquid and the above direction does not quite come up to that stipulation.

Flour the board before you put the dough upon it and flour your hands. Knead the dough by pushing it from you with the palm of the hand and drawing it back with the fingers. When you have worked it for ten minutes turn it into a bowl, cover it with a towel or with one of the perforated covers that come on bread mixers, and let it stand in a warm corner until it has risen to twice its original bulk. This will probably take about six hours. Turn it on the board again, divide it into three equal parts, two for bread and one for rolls, knead each about five minutes, put the two loaves in greased pans, and set them to rise for about an hour.

If the loaves seem large divide the quantity of dough. A good sized loaf of bread should bake in three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven. It is a mistake to make the loaves too large.

Lay a piece of brown paper over the top of them when they go in and remove this at the end of fifteen minutes. When you take the loaves from the oven leave them in the pans for about ten minutes, then take them out and tip them on their edges.

Work over your dough for rolls, adding a couple of tablespoonfuls of butter to the dough, make them into rolls and let them rise to twice their first bulk before you bake them. They will require from fifteen to twenty minutes baking in a good oven. I hope with all my heart these directions may help.

To While Long Hours Away.

"I am a shut-in and have been for nine years. The hours drag so heavily for me that I have been wondering if through your corner I may be able to get some quilt pieces, new ones, of all kinds, and some sheet music which some one is through with. I would like it instrumental, for the piano, up to the fourth grade. My only child suffers from incurable spinal trouble. I will gladly pay postage or express on anything I get. MRS. L. R."

Here is an application that ought to go straight to the hearts not only of other shut-ins who can sympathize with the sufferers but also of the well, strong persons who can come and go as they please and seek their enjoyment outside of their homes when they wish. I don't believe any of us who have this blessing can guess what it must be to be really shut in and incapable of independence.

Won't some of you who have the joy of health forget your own interests long enough to make a search through your piece bags and music racks and see if there are not some items there which may mean little to you but will bring a measure of happy occupation and pastime to those whose best pleasures fall far below those you take as an every day matter of course?

Such an application as this is practically sure of a generous response and I know I am not making it in vain.

Hard Rye Rolls.

"Would one of the readers of the Corner be so kind as to send a recipe telling me how to make hard rye rolls?

"READER."

I shall have to depend upon one of our housekeepers to reply to this question. Rolls made of the ordinary rye bread I know, but not the variety known as "hard rye rolls." Does the adjective apply to the way in which they are mixed or the manner in which they are baked? I shall hope to receive directions for them which can be published here.

Kings, 10-10], two tablespoons baking powder [I. Corinthians, 5-6].

"Follow Solomon's advice for making good boys and you will have a good cake [Proverbs, 23-14]. Nuts should be put in last, the raisins should be seeded, the figs chopped, and the almonds blanched and sliced, and all these well floured to prevent their sticking to the bottom.

A SHAMROCK CENTERPIECE

DESIGNED BY
E. J. BUCKMAN

As a timely offering, I have had designed a shamrock centerpiece, and whether your feelings are green or orange today, I know that in embroidery affairs you will be an enthusiastic supporter of the centerpiece here shown.

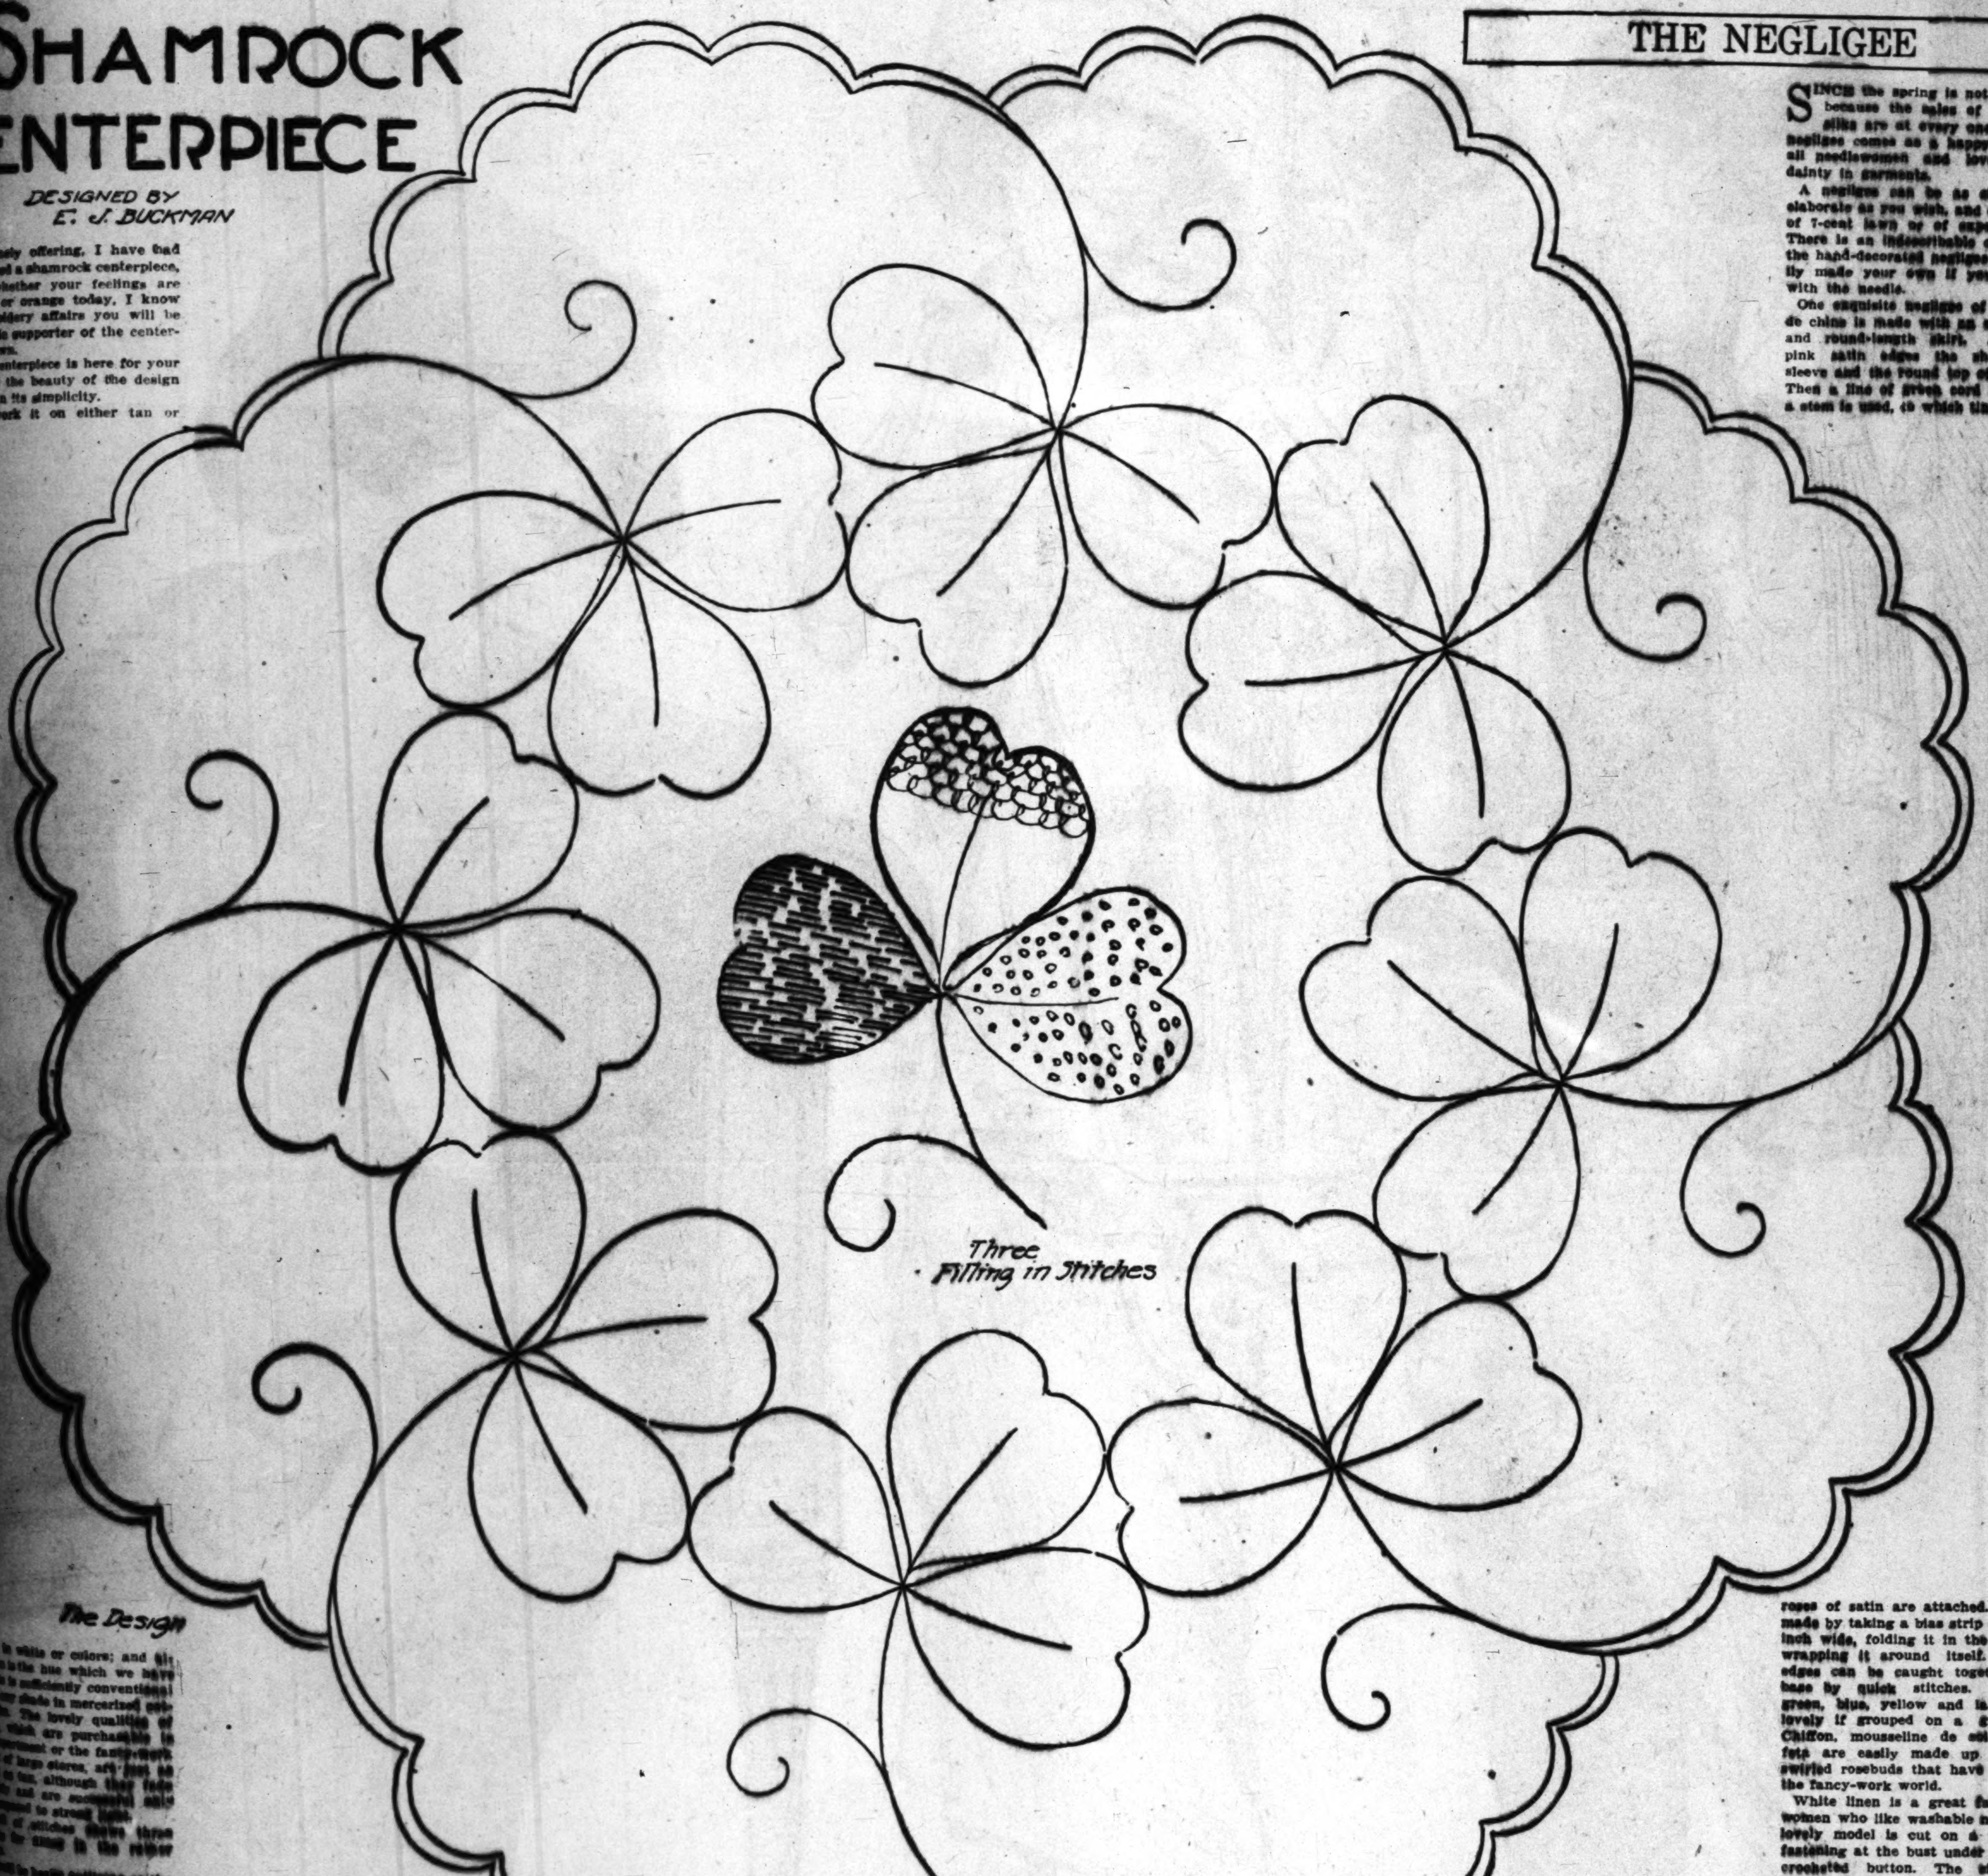
The entire centerpiece is here for your approval, and the beauty of the design lies, I think, in its simplicity.

You will work it on either tan or gray. Blue in any of the practical, durable shades will work up beautifully. Any shade that will carry out the color scheme of the room in which this centerpiece will appear will be delightful.

The scallops should be padded in any of the ways which I have mentioned to my readers. Soutache braid has been found a very easy padding. Hold it as you would couching thread and work the buttonhole stitches over it. Darning cotton in twelve or sixteen threads is also a quick filling. Hold this in the same way and work over it in the regular buttonhole stitch.

The old reliable padding of long stitches in darning cotton is always good and sure, if you are not prone to try new ways. Continue the stems that extend from the scallops, in outline stitch, whipping over again to produce a heavy string effect.

I hope that the promise of this centerpiece will be fulfilled to hundreds of my friends. Till next week, then.



How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

DAINTY BOUDOIR CAPS

SINCE these dainty little caps were introduced about four years ago they have never lost their popularity, and reappear with new charm as every importation is shown. So easily are they made and such dainty gifts are they for hope chests or special occasions that every needlewoman should use her cleverness in fashioning at least one of them.

The general style is the same: a round full top and a frill or a soft band on the edge; but, oh, the lovely changes that can be rung on the one idea! Exquisite pieces of lace, embroidery and ribbon can be pieced together and ornamented with handwork, fit for costliest dresses. The work is so interesting that boudoir caps have a habit of duplicating themselves, and the worker finds two or three where only one was planned.

One plain net cap has a pleating of net two inches deep. The entire cap is run in straight lines with coarse mercerized blue, pink and lavender threads, under and over in long stitches. The combination gives an iridescent effect and there is still retained a laciness that is attractive. Around the edge of the ruffle is a triple chain-stitch of the colors, forming a border which is dainty and can be made by any woman. At one side is a cluster of roses made of the coarse threads swirled around in relief as you have seen it on the ends of scarfs and centerpieces.

Dotted swiss is a practical fabric for boudoir caps. It can be combined with shadow laces or any of the val patterns. These can be applied in straight lines that form squares. The material should be cut away, for if the sewing be careful and the material of good quality, a cap of this type should last several seasons. The ruffle in this instance is attractive if made of very narrow strips of swiss attached to the full top, and composed for the rest of its width of rows of lace insertion and lace whipped together.

The allover valenciennes and shadow laces are exquisite when made into boudoir caps, touched up with color. Some of leaves and flowers in the pattern have been taken by a clever French designer and worked in color. The effect is lovely. Long solid stitches of coarse silk are used for the leaves, while the flowers are composed of clusters of French knots. A garland of swirled roses made of doubled satin ribbon defines the crown, and on the ruffle at only one side is a group of roses and handworked leaves that weight down the lace over the hair.

Beaded chiffon is another favorite, the pattern of beads requiring very little ornamentation. It is more durable when made over colored silk, and the ruffle gives a pretty frame for the face if made double, the pleated chiffon falling separately over the silk underruffle.

Ribbon can be whipped over cording and ornaments fashioned of this in loops, cabochons and braids. A very effective trimming is of two rosettes of ribbon, one on each side, a loop of braided ribbon cord connecting them.

Flowers made of ribbon cut out in separate petals and attached to a center of bought stamens are easily made. You have had so much practice in this season of handmade flowers that the idea should be carried out quickly and easily.

As a parting thought a description of the latest boudoir caps will be inspiring, to say the least.

It is of white valenciennes over white chiffon. White satin forms a huge pond lily at one side, while a pale green cord of silk twines in and out around the crown. This is easily done if the lace be open in design. On the lace ruffle there are two lily buds made by hand, and the stems are of cord looped in a chain stitch. The buds hang loose over the ruffle.

The pond lily can be developed in any other flower, the combination of white silk and pale green being delightful in dainty cool suggestion.

Boudoir caps have been decried as encouraging negligee habits, especially in hairdressing. They are far from that, and are delightful little cover-alls for hair that is combed, we hope, but simply arranged for the breakfast or the rest hour.

New Jabots and Collars

A VISIT to the counters where dainty neck fixings are sold reveals the fact that jabots and collars are lovelier than ever. Frills are no longer worn on the coat; they have been supplanted by the jabot and rabat collar.

A pretty jabot can be made of tulle or Brussels net cut in a strip twelve inches long by seven inches wide. On this embroider a dainty design with mercerized cotton. This can be more successfully executed if a piece of stiff paper is basted under the tulle. Whipstitch an edging of valenciennes lace to the edge of the strip and baste the pleats in place. Finally press with a heated iron and bind the top with a bias strip of lawn.

If you do not embroider well, charming collars can be made of fine allover embroideries. Many of the loveliest designs are colored to represent the old colonial needlework. Select a pattern which fits well and arrange the strip of embroidery around the edge. Carefully miter the corners, so that the design matches perfectly. There is great satisfaction in making one's own collars, for they usually fit well and are of designs and materials to suit the personal taste.

It is an easy task to fashion a rabat collar of handkerchief linen bordered with Irish lace. Cut the collar and rabat from the linen, using a good pattern. Turn in a narrow hem and slipstitch it neatly in place. To the outer edge of the collar and rabat whipstitch an edging of Irish lace an inch and a half or two inches in width.

Other collars are fashioned of black moire silk with a rabat of pleated cream-colored shadow lace.

THE NEGLIGEE

SINCE the spring is not far off and because the sales of cottons and silks are at every one's door, the negligee comes as a happy thought to all needlewomen and lovers of the dainty in garments.

A negligee can be as simple or as elaborate as you wish, and can be made of 7-cent lawn or of expensive satin. There is an indescribable charm about the hand-decorated negligee that is easily made your own if you be clever with the needle.

One exquisite negligee of point crepe de chine is made with an empire waist and round-length skirt. A band of pink satin edges the short kimono sleeve and the round top of the bodice. Then a line of green cord to represent a stem is used, to which tiny handmade roses of satin are attached. These are made by taking a bias strip of satin one inch wide, folding it in the center and wrapping it around itself. The raw edges can be caught together at the base by quick stitches. Pink, pale green, blue, yellow and lavender are lovely if grouped on a green stem. Chiffon, mousseline de soie and taffeta are easily made up into these swirled rosebuds that have swept over the fancy-work world.

White linen is a great favorite with women who like washable negligees. A lovely model is cut on a plain style, fastening at the bust under a washable crocheted button. The sides sweep backward in a curved line and a border of eyelet embroidery is added by hand, of course. The eyelets are grouped in large triangular motifs, and a running vine of slender leaves connects each two. Daisies in eyelet work are used on the vine.

This would require quite a few days' work, but think of the joy of the possession. When you recall the entire frocks and petticoats of muslin worked in eyelet design by your grandmother you will be convinced as to the durability of this kind of embroidery.

An exquisite negligee of white china silk is trimmed with ecru shadow lace and white Irish crochet insertion. The yoke and upper part of the sleeves are of the lace. Silk gives a body to the empire waist, and the long, straight skirt is attached to the high waist line by five rows of tucked shirring. The bodice is edged with a row of roses done in coarse silks swirled around a center, the raised forms being exquisite in their relief. A line of roses extends down each sleeve, ending in a cluster of satin ones in the same color halfway down. A petticoat of china silk is made with a scant ruffle, knee deep, trimmed with lace and insertion applied in deep curves and further decorated with the silk roses and cluster at one side.

Japanese crepe, procurable in the most artistic, unusual tones, is an excellent fabric for negligees. Can you picture a stone-gray model trimmed with a royal-blue satin collar and revers that are folded in at the fastening? Embroidery or, rather, applique or cretonne flowers is the decoration above the cuffs and collar. The blue flowers are cut out and buttonholed on the crepe with blue and gray thread. The effect is of Japanese embroidery, without the endless work.

The dressing sacque is a chapter in itself, and will do for another time.

THE SMARTEST FASHIONS of WELL-DRESSED FOLK

A ST. PATRICK'S DAY TEA

HERE is an attractive collection of afternoon frocks appropriate for teas and luncheons. The woman who recognizes beauty of line and coloring will duplicate one or two models for herself.

The afternoon frock of malachite green is of silk ratine, brocaded and plain being combined. This is a feature strongly emphasized in the spring modes, and here is an excellent example of successfully combining two varieties.

The bodice has a bolero jacket fashioned of brocaded ratine, with long leg-o'-mutton sleeves. An underbodice of plain green is shown, with a round yoke of shirred white chiffon.

The overskirt of plain ratine is gracefully draped over a foundation of the brocade. Flat covered buttons adorn the front of the frock.

Voile embroidered with colored wools is numbered among the smart fabrics, and the charming frock of rose-sprigged voile is especially dainty. The embroidered material is used to produce a redingote effect. Cuffs of the messaline finish the wide sleeves. The overskirt is scalloped and bound with green, and the girdle has a flat bow trimming the front. Plain white voile forms the slightly draped underskirt.

Yellow silk crepon is the material used for the hostess' gown. A panel of pale-yellow chiffon, slashed in front to form a V-shaped yoke, is decidedly new.

Unusually lovely is the gown of lilac-colored crepe de chine. The bodice has a vest of cream crepe de chine and lace, and the portion below the yoke is accordion-pleated. Long close-fitted sleeves finished with cuffs of lace complete the bodice. From beneath the wide girdle falls the accordion-pleated overskirt, bordered with lace.

White chiffon and lace are combined to form the bodice of the gown with the skirt of eggplant-purple charmeuse. A broad flounce of the lace trims the hem.

These costumes should furnish many suggestions to the woman who is replenishing her wardrobe for spring.

Silveroid is the perfected white roofing developed by twenty-five years' experience in the roofing industry in Southern California. By reason of its beauty, durability and cheerful adaptability to the ensemble of the California home, whether among the orange groves, in the foothills or by the sea, it has become the most popular of all forms of roofing used in this glorious Southwest. The pleasing gray-white color is incorporated in the material and is therefore of a permanent character, blending in brightest harmony with the brilliant hues of the California landscape and adding the charm of its welcoming appearance to the schemes of the artist and the architect. Have it on your home—it will cheer you up.

aggregated more than 63,000,000 board feet, nearly all of it building material. Everything is busy, the brains of the architect and the contractor, the money of the capitalist and the muscles of artisans in the building trade, all straining every effort to put the harbor in shape for the opening of the Panama Canal and to provide housing facilities for the millions who will visit the Coast in the time of the great exposition at San Francisco. There will be neither idle money, muscle nor mind in the Great Southwest, nor any chance to rest until the exposition is over at the end of 1915.

Los Angeles Heads the List.

THE State government, through the Secretary of State, is engaged in preparing a "Blue Book" intended to give the productive and industrial standing of the various counties in California. These number fifty-eight, and in nearly everything Los Angeles county heads the list. It is the first in value of farm property, with a total of $199,998,200 to its credit; first in the value of all crops, $14,720,884; first in the value of fruit and nuts, $6,731,532; first in the value of hay and forage, $3,430,698; first in the value of dairy products, $1,415,144; first in the number of bearing lemon trees, 219,149; first in sugar-beet production, 152,059 tons. The county is second in the number of poultry, second in bearing orange trees, second in the cost of irrigation investment, with a credit in this respect of just short of $8,000,000, second in bearing olive trees, in walnut products, and third in honey and potatoes, fourth in bearing apple trees and mineral products, fifth in milk, sixth in alfalfa, eighth in apricot trees and grapes, the latter of which total nearly 45,000,000 pounds. The land area of the county is 2,602,880 acres, and the increase of farm value in ten years is $125,180,554. The value of domestic animals amounts to over $8,000,000, and the number of bearing orchard trees, non-tropical, is just short of half a million, while the bearing tropical fruit trees fall just short of 2,000,000, and of nut trees there are 359,349. There is scarcely any kind of fruit that does not flourish here, Los Angeles county being credited with 5736 bearing fig trees, nearly 85,000 bearing olive trees, 6853 bearing grapefruit trees, and of small fruit the county is credited with a product of 7,337,987 quarts, while the bearing almond trees number almost 77,000. The almond product amounts to 57,770 pounds and the walnut product to over 6,000,000 pounds.

What Will It Be Three Years Hence?

APRIL 1 of this current year the Pacific Limited, a new express passenger train, will be put on between Chicago and Los Angeles, the first train leaving Chicago on that date west bound, and returning from here April 5. The equipment for this passenger train costs nearly $250,000. Three railroads, the Salt Lake, the Union Pacific and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, are interested in this service, which will be daily between the two cities, making the run in seventy-two hours. There are seven trains in the service, every bit of each all steel equipment, and there are seven cars to each train. These cars cost about $25,000 each. This enormous amount of money in this luxurious passenger service is designed for a normal year. It staggers the imagination to think what the railroads will be required to supply in 1915, when many millions of Americans will cross and recross the continent to and from the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco. It seems as if the current year and the two that follow it would be filled full every moment of the time with opportunity for every one to do something for the general public good and to make something of individual private profit.

Crude Oil Enough for Centuries.

IN THE Simi Valley, in Ventura county, a tract of nearly 3000 acres has been bought at $225 an acre for the purpose of developing oil. Simultaneously comes news from away up in the Puget Sound region, more than as far from here as half way across the continent, of the discovery of oil in the great Olympic range, lying between the Pacific Ocean and that great inland sea, Puget Sound. Those who are interested in this enterprise seem to be not well informed as to conditions in the oil industry. They seem to be afraid that the deposit lies too low to be reached by human enterprise. They are just now engaged in boring a well 2000 feet deep, which surpasses the limit of anything yet attempted there. Here in the Great Southwest, where the oil industry is a generation old, we have become well satisfied to get a good well at 2000 feet, and some wells penetrate the earth to nearly twice that depth. Until the Puget Sound people have sunk a hole 4000 feet, they need not be discouraged.

Where They Celebrate Blossom Week.

THE people of Santa Clara county have borrowed a beautiful idea from our trans-Pacific neighbors, the Japanese, in holding annually what they call "Blossom Week," after the Japanese cherry-blossom show. Blossom Week will soon be on hand in Santa Clara county, and many thousand people will go out to see a landscape set thick with fruit trees, and the fruit trees presenting a scene much like an old-fashioned snowstorm, only the snowflakes are replaced with the blossoms of the plum and prune trees. Santa Clara county stands first among the fifty-eight counties of California in the total number of bearing orchard fruit trees, and of course first in the number of plum and prune trees, also first in the number of apricot and cherry trees. The value of all the crops in the county falls just short of $7,000,000, and the fruits and nuts account for a value of $4,234,874. With a land area of only 849,920 acres, the county stands very high in the amount of cultivated farms, for there are 734,819 acres under cultivation. Santa Clara county furnishes the United States with nearly all the prunes used, and on top of that nearly all Europe. California apricots, dried and canned, are found in every corner of the civilized world, and Santa Clara furnishes the largest part of these.

Extending the Orchard Area.

IN SAN FERNANDO VALLEY, close to the gates of the city of Los Angeles, during the spring now coming to a close the planting of fruit trees will number a total of 200,000. These are all or nearly all deciduous fruit trees, one planter putting in seventy acres solid in pears. From Riverside county comes the news that during February there were received there 300 separate shipments of deciduous nursery stock. Nearly all of these were full carload lots, and they are going out into the comparatively waste places of the county, Hemet leading all the other districts, and Beaumont, up in the mountains, coming second. Great care is taken in examining this stock to see that it is free from all insect pests and all disease. Down in the Coachella Valley, 15,000 offshoots of the best-known varieties of the date palm will arrive and be planted.

By the Shores of the Loud-Sounding Sea.

HE WHO has not seen the seacoast in Santa Barbara county, whatever else he may have seen in other parts of the world, has still a sensation awaiting him. And of all that beautiful coast, what part is to be set ahead of Carpinteria? The enterprising people of that neighborhood seem to know the value of what they have, and seem determined to make the most of it. They have already paved five miles of the public highways, all of them close to the sea, with the best asphalt pavement, and the work is being pushed along, with the intention of eventually paving the valley its entire length from Carpinteria to Santa Barbara, a distance of fifteen miles. The city of Carpinteria has just finished a grammar school at a cost of $35,000. One of these days we shall have a paved highway all along the coast by the Western Sea from Tia Juana to San Francisco, and then the world will want to come here and bowl along that level road, with the mountains rising on one side and the waves rolling in on the other. At every point by this Western Sea activity is at white heat in the preparing of the good roads. The work on the Shore Boulevard between the beach cities of Los Angeles county from Santa Monica to San Pedro harbor is in actual progress. From Redondo the route lies through Hermosa and Manhattan, and on down to the new town of Torrance, going through Playa del Rey, Hyperion and west of Playa del Rey to Venice and Ocean Park, and on up to the old Santa Monica Canyon. Santa Barbara is booming, with improvements representing a cash expense of $1,500,000 being laid out for a new street railway, a link of the highways going through the city, bridges over the streams, the State Normal School, Y.M.C.A. building and Cottage Hospital.

"Column Forward!"

A RECORD OF INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

Things move with remarkable rapidity in the Great Southwest. Bank clearings in Los Angeles for the first week in March totaled just short of an average of $5,000,000 a day. During the same week a real estate deal on Main street involved in the direct purchase a value of $3,000,000, and immediate re-sales of the same property at an aggregate value of $2,000,000 for a small portion of the original purchase. At the harbor of Los Angeles during the month of February the receipts of sawed lumber totaled 63,361,000 board feet.

The Friday Morning Club of Los Angeles has sold a lot on West Adams street for $35,000, and will proceed to erect a new clubhouse at No. 940 South Figueroa street.

The National Engraving Company has leased a lot on Pico facing Olive street for twenty-five years, and will put up a factory building to cost $30,000.

The American Potash Company has purchased twelve acres at Long Beach, where a plant will be constructed to convert kelp into potash, and will employ 250 men.

At Brawley, in Imperial Valley, a tract of 3000 acres of new land has been broken for cultivation. Close to the city a three-acre tract has just been sold for $500 an acre.

A tract of land 7200 acres in extent in Coachella Valley particularly adapted to date-raising has been purchased from the Southern Pacific Company, to be divided into ten-acre tracts and put on the market.

In the Salt River Valley the Egyptian cotton planting last year covered a total of 400 acres. The results were so good that for the current year the acreage will be much larger.

For the year 1912 the building permits issued in Phoenix, Ariz., reached a total value of $672,223. For Federal, school and other purposes, the buildings constructed cost $482,000, making a total of $1,144,223.

John A. Roebling's Sons Company is building a big fireproof warehouse at Second and Alameda streets.

The Bekins Van and Storage Company will build a six-story warehouse at No. 1335 South Figueroa street. That thoroughfare is developing rapidly.

The Young Men's Christian Association building at San Bernardino has been completed at a cost of $80,000.

At Glendale, a tract of twenty-seven and a half acres has been sold to New York capitalists for subdivision purposes for $42,000.

A construction company has orders for the erection of a concrete loft building on Broadway between Seventh and Eighth on a lot with a frontage of 120 feet by a depth of 140.

An immense army of workmen is now engaged at El Segundo on the Standard Oil Company's big yard constructing five additional stills.

On Spring street just south of Fourth, adjoining the Hibernian Bank building, a lot is about to be improved with a seven-story structure.

The American Beet Sugar Company is preparing 13,000 acres for seeding to sugar beets in the San Fernando Valley.

At Torrance, the new industrial town at the harbor, the Fuller Shoe Company is building a factory to cost $200,000 and employ 150 men. At the same place the Torrance Pearl Manufacturing Company is expending $100,000 on a factory which will make a new industry in this section of California.

The managers of the Sierra Power Company announce the intention of expending $1,000,000 around Riverside within the next year.

The Washington Insult.

THE occurrence itself is past, but it will live long in the memory of the women who went to Washington to represent the women's suffrage movement throughout the country. Five thousand earnest, dignified women—educated, cultured women, who love their country and have its welfare at heart, who have made a careful study of the economic and political conditions throughout the country—who represent a movement not to unsex women, but in their own judgment to better the conditions under which they must live, hold property, pay taxes and educate their children—these 5000 women, representing their cause in the inaugural pageant were subjected to lewd insults and jeers, and were even struck and spat upon by a vulgar, idle, salacious mob of men, while the police stood by and enjoyed the whole proceeding as a huge joke. They allowed it to go so far that the safety of the women was threatened by mob violence. The hoodlums massed themselves especially immediately in front of the stand in which sat the ladies belonging to the executive party, where police protection should have been particularly efficient, and the comments made by the mob were of so vile a nature that the ladies were obliged to leave the stand.

Finally it became absolutely necessary to send a hurry call to Ft. Meyer for mounted troopers to defend these women who were representing their cause in peace and dignity. It recalls the day when Cyril and his dogs loosed themselves upon Hypatia, in the ancient, cultured city of Alexandria, and literally tore her fair body to pieces, not because she was a political disturber or a menace to the morals of the community, but because she was educating and enlightening the women of her day—because she was bringing to both men and women a higher standard of ethics and intellectuality—and because it was a woman who dared to do this thing upon which organized bigotry frowned.

Doesn't it send a chill through all good citizens to think what might have happened if the troops had not arrived?

What sort of men were they who took it into their own hands to belittle the women's purpose? The sort who knew no better way to do it than to use jibes which bring the blush to any modest woman's face, to spit upon and strike the women; the sort of men, probably, whose wives, mothers and sisters support them, and who see an end of their dominance if their own women should ever wake up; the sort who had probably been roistering and drinking.

The clean, industrious, thinking man who opposes women's enfranchisement does not let this lead him into the mistake of offering the advocate physical disrespect—if it were so, we might as well return to the customs of the Roman arena, in Nero's day. And the opposition of the other kind of men will only strengthen the women's movement. The Washington episode, which should give our capital city cause to blush for many a day, will gain thousands to the standard of the suffragettes.

The Political Order Changeth.

AFTER sixteen years of uninterrupted management of the government by the Republican party, the American people have been pleased to turn the whole machinery over to the Democratic party. This is the second time they have done this in half a century. We sincerely hope that four years from now this last experiment shall prove more satisfactory than the first.

Let us look briefly over the last sixteen years under the control of four Republican Presidents. When Mr. McKinley went into office in 1897 he found a bankrupt treasury, industrial stagnation reigning all over the United States, with bank clearings in every city at the lowest ebb known in years. Bank clearings are an index of active circulation of money or the contrary, or in other words of activity or depression in industries.

The very week it became known that Mr. McKinley had been elected the bank clearings began to increase. After he had been inaugurated they took a leap forward, and with few and not important exceptions, from that day to the election last November the bank clearings showed steady growth, and they were a true index of renewed activity increasing by leaps and bounds in nearly all our industries. Mr. Taft has gone out of office and Mr. Wilson has gone in with a treasury full of money and with every American industry buoyant.

It will be the hope of every good American that at the end of the four years' term of the new President it will be found that like conditions prevail. We shall not have to wait until the end of the term to know how things are going. The eye that watches the reported bank clearings in the newspapers week by week will see exactly how things are trending.

No intelligent and fair-minded person will deny to President Wilson high ideals and patriotic intentions. His inaugural address breathes a lofty patriotism and a heartfelt desire to be useful to all humanity.

Yet that address will fail to inspire confidence in the minds of close observers and careful thinkers, however friendly they may be personally to the new President.

New York once, weary of corruption, elected to the Mayoralty Seth Low, a man very much of the same type as President Wilson. His administration of the municipal government of New York was largely a failure. We would not say his ideals were too high or his patriotism too lofty; but we do know his plans for administering the government were not practical.

The real statesman knows that there are limitations to government activities, things in human nature which no laws can reach and no administration affect.

Mr. Wilson has proclaimed aloud that his administration will be "progressive," and from his appointments it looks as if he meant what he said. Of this we are heartily glad. The American people seem to desire radical changes in government procedure, and let them have their wish. It will bring up before us sharply and definitely the conservative and the radical methods of government, and at the end of four years we shall be able to know better the effect of the radical kind. One thing it will do, if only one; that will be to bring back into American politics two great national parties, with clearly-defined issues between them, and eliminate all necessity of the multiplicity of partisan organizations.

Is the Art of Reasoning Lost?

THE question may seem offensive to the whole human race, but yet there is solid fact that justifies the asking of it.

In fact, only twice in history have men arisen capable of teaching the rest of us how to think. When that most acutely intellectual race, the Greeks, were jumping at conclusions as generally as women who fall back upon the declaration "because" for everything they think, Aristotle rose up and taught men to collect and collocate and study carefully facts, and then draw conclusions from all the facts attainable.

Very soon after Aristotle's day the world forgot his science of thinking, and went back to the dreamy methods of Plato, which continued largely throughout the Middle Ages.

Then in England came Francis Bacon and revived the Aristotelian method of reasoning, and to Bacon's teaching we owe all the scientific progress to which we are indebted for all our industries and all the luxuries we enjoy.

The question at the head of this article is asked because of the declaration on the part of a man of reputed scientific standing who says he has discovered a new way of accounting for the different color in the complexions of the human race. He declares it is a matter of food and of food alone.

The black races owe the color of their skin to the fact that their food is almost all fruit; the yellow races to the fact that they live mostly upon cereals, and the white races to their regimen of milk and flesh.

We say without fear of reasonable contradiction that this scientific pundit is utterly wrong, and has generalized on a few of the multitudinous facts that should be weighed to reach a verdict.

We say further that the old reasoning which attributes the color of the skin to the influence of climate, food and manner of life, all taken together, is the true method of reasoning.

For 300 years or more the people of northern Europe have been acquiring continually a darker skin. The French were once almost all blonds and the Saxons were practically all blonds. The northern Celts were mostly strawberry blonds. The Germans were blonds, and the Scandinavians more so.

The Iberian Celts were dark, and through intermixture with the Latins, Pelasgians and other darker-skinned races the people of all Europe have tended continually toward brunettism.

In our own country, and particularly in California, a change of complexion is going on quite rapidly. In future generations the skin of the American people is likely to be decidedly copperish.

Take the present generation of tennis players, automobile tourists and bareheaded people of both sexes, and you can notice a very decided browning of the skin, whether they eat oranges or beefsteak.

Artistic Philistines.

THE old order changeth. It always has been changing. It is reasonable to suppose it always will be changing. These changes embrace every human interest, spiritual, mental and material.

The Hebrews of old ran largely to religion and its cognate moralities. Their contemporaries, the Philistines, ran almost exclusively to material things and their cognate immoralities.

The American people, with the Hebrew scriptures as their guide, have been, generally speaking, a religious people, and their art has taken religion for its predominant tone or at least the moralities.

We are now to have a change consisting of a recrudescence of Philistinism in our arts. To hear these Philistines of the day talk about literature, painting and other things one would suppose that only Puritanism or pietism had ever been considered by the artists of any nation. They either do not know or forget the Latin satirists and comedy writers, and surely they have never seen the pictorial arts of Pompeii as found in the museum at Naples, where in pictorial portraiture are found all the disgusting, degrading and destructive immoralities of old Sodom.

These Philistines of today develop absolute hostility to any art in painting, sculpture or literature, whether prose or poetry, that takes any cognizance of the sweet things, the pure things, the good things, the things that affect human life.

But ven- opinion where perhaps I should not, allow me to say that I think those boys got appendicitis not from eating cheese, but from eating too much cheese. As the Eagle tribe find things, we can eat anything that comes within the scope of the regular Eagle regime, provided we do not overindulge in any kind of food. We find that our internal economy may become badly upset by overloading our stomachs with any kind of food, however digestible it may be if partaken of in due portions. If the question concerning these sick boys were submitted to us, in our wisdom we would say that they might have acquired an attack of appendicitis, typhoid fever, or any of the other diseases that attack the internal organs by eating too much of anything.

The trouble with the human race is that your life is too artificial and your manner of life too complicated. Of course you are a highly-organized race and your constitution is very complex. You need not remind me that the constitution of the Eagle is very simple and his manner of life very natural. That is where we get our freedom from disease and our longevity. That is where you get pretty nearly all the diseases that attack your system and why so many of you die before you reach the age of three-score and ten. We Eagles scream with amusement when we hear you talk about living to be 100. If you used your brains more and indulged your passions less you would be young at 100. But the trouble with you human beings is that in your very complex life you give too much play to your passions, even when you know you are doing violence to your own constitutions.

See why there are no doctors, no hospitals, among the Eagle tribe because diseases are few and as a rule not dangerous among us. It is because our life is very simple, and although we are dumb brutes with small brains and undeveloped reason, yet we live according to the laws of our nature and keep our passions in due subjection, with the little bit of logic God has endowed us with.

The more highly developed the human race is the more it seems to give way to its passions and to be governed by its appetites rather than by the clear light of reason. You have your sciences and your libraries full of treatises of the most recondite type, but yet it is your baser appetites that lead you. You have works on logic that teach you the construction of syllogisms with their major and minor premises, their middle terms and conclusions. But when it comes to eating or drinking, or any other pleasurable act of life, it is not Wheatley's treatise on logic that guides you, but your own palates.

Your doctor tells the boys they got appendicitis from eating cheese, but the next time the boys see a box of Camembert or a chunk of Limburger their lips will drool with eagerness and they will stuff themselves just the same as if they had not been warned. Oh, don't take refuge in the excuse that they are only boys and have not had the experience of life to lead them. Go to the classic shades of your college walls where your gowned and capped dons talk science by the yard, and they live by their appetites just as much as the greenest boy in the newsboys' home. What is "high" game, and when do your scientific people like their mutton best? Is not "high" game a wild duck or a grouse whose flesh has become half if not wholly putrid by being kept too long? And is not a ripe leg of mutton one that has been hung until it falls from the hook?

Human beings resemble the animal creation in many, many respects. Some of you are like the Eagle, others like the lion, and some like the elephant. According to your own retort uncourteous when you are addressing one another, a good many are constituted very much after the fashion of the asinine race, either in its purity or in its half-bred condition known as the mule.

This is not so bad as it might be. The poor donkey is a useful animal, and his main limitation is lack of brains. He is not so bright as the elephant or the dog, but he is a mighty good friend to his human master who frequently does not appreciate his worth.

Now there are birds and birds, and four-footed beasts and four-footed beasts, and not all the creatures whose pinions fan the circumambient air are Eagles, nor are all the quadrupeds thoroughbred horses or intelligent elephants. Lots of our humans are more like buzzards than Eagles. Indeed, if a census were taken of the men of the buzzard type and those of the Eagle type, we Eagles think you would find about nine of the filthy-bird type to the one of the noblest species of winged things.

The Eagle tribe knows the regimen that befits his constitution, and never departs from it. An Eagle would drop dead of hunger from his aerie on the granite hilltop or the big branch of a pine tree rather than eat a mouthful of carrion. The vulture would not take the trouble to hunt a breakfast a single mile in the morning if there was a carrion carcass anywhere within reach of his olfactory nerves.

Now what kind of a bird does a human being resemble who indulges in "high" game and ripe mutton? Are they like the Eagle tribe that eats its meat quivering under vivisection, or are they like the buzzards that prey upon the dead things that stifle the air with stench?

So there are men that resemble in type the higher grade of animals, but if you will not consider me too impertinent I would venture to guess that nine out of ten of you resemble the lower orders rather than the higher ones. The intelligent horse or the more intelligent elephant will seldom over-indulge although given the choicest provender, unless he has been famished with hunger beforetime. But who ever saw a pig who knew when he had enough, and how many of you humans resemble the horse in his abstemiousness compared with those who resemble the pig in his insatiable greediness?

Well, dearly beloved, there is no degeneracy in the Eagle tribe. It is all normally sound and good. Do you not wish the same compliment could be made to you, with all your science and brains?

Faillieres reigned in France, since Czar Nicholas reigned over Russia and the Emperor William over Germany, domesticity has become delightfully, nay, sublimely fashionable, and one likes to be dans le mouvement. Our own Mayor Alexander was so completely in the picture that we just had to elect the dear old fellow.

And then Willard accuses Los Angeles of an entire lack of hospitality and sociability. How comes Willard to think us unsociable and inhospitable? Funny. Such a nice young man, too. So clever, so witty, and above all so gorgeously worldly. Well, perhaps they will lionize him in New York. You never can tell.

Madame la Comtesse.

WHICH reminds me of the dear countess. Formerly Miss V. of New York, the sweet thing has recently been paying us a little visit. Put up at a Pasadena hotel and registered in the book as Madame La Comtesse, etc., etc.

Her valet.
Her maid.
Her dog attendant.

Talk about swank! And some of us can remember when the dear girl made her own shirt waists—and made 'em jolly well, too.

An old friend seized the occasion to lionize the titled nobility and gave a bridge party in her honor. Great discrimination was exercised over the invitation list. You can't let any old friend meet a countess!

Exactly an hour and a half beyond the appointed time a luxurious limousine arrives. Flutterings within. The countess is here.

Apparently in great pain she permitted us to be presented. She looked over and beyond us and touched our fingers at a height of seven feet. Then the hostess observed four persons remaining in the machine.

"Won't your friends join us?" came the kindly suggestion.

"Friends!" The countess gazed upon her hostess with unutterable scorn. "They are my servants."

"Then you will like them to be accommodated in the servants' hall," with the utmost suavity.

"They will remain where they are," said the proud countess with dignified hauteur.

Her Ladyship remained just twenty minutes after that. The bridge tables looked lonesome and the other guests felt a bit electrical. When the gentle creature finally departed the silence was thunderous.

"I can only beg all your pardons" said the hostess, with uncanny self-restraint. "Marriage has a queer effect on some people."

Male Influence.

WITH the Spring Fashion Show still exercising its baneful influence, and with my lady paramount in every department of our city life, I feel no end of a courageous beggar to refer once more to the desirability of male teachers in our schools. Especially as several female teachers have already signified their intention of scalping the Lancer at the earliest opportunity. You will recall that this debased creature had the temerity to say that male teachers were well worth $200 a year more than the females if for no other reason than that masculine influence was positively the most important thing in a boy's education.

Well, I have waited two weeks to get my breath—and now I say it again. I think it is a genuine misfortune to any boy to be raised and educated exclusively by women. Nay, I will go further and agree heartily with a Hawaiian correspondent on the subject, that male teachers are also better for girls for at least half of their studies.

The Young Schoolmarm.

THERE is a curious and marked difference between the girls and boys who have studied under men teachers—a difference all for better. They seem to lack a certain pettiness, they seem to suggest a fuller development of their powers.

But what sort of boys are they which have received instruction at the hands of a young and comely schoolma'am? It is incongruous, nay scandalous, that young women of 20 and 22 should be entrusted with the education of growing boys of from 16 to 18, as occurs all too often in our country districts. The inevitable always happens with dreary regularity and any young teacher in such a school will confess to a long series of love letters which pour in upon her from her promising pupils.

The whole atmosphere of such schools is one of sickly sentimentality and a boy's masculinity is undermined at the outset. From 10 on, boys pass through a trying and difficult age during which their manhood is moulded for better or worse. A young and inexperienced woman is wholly incapable of exercising the necessary influence and guidance, no matter how earnest, how conscientious she may be.

In French the sun is masculine, the moon feminine. The growing plant needs the sun. The moon improves and delights the world, but she is never missed to the same dreadful extent that the sun is.

Woman's influence has stood for softness, gentleness, and love through the ages. A very good influence, too. But before that boy is made gentle, before that boy is taught love, before that boy is irrevocably softened, he must be made strong, definite, true, wholesome, sound. Let the women's influence predominate for a year or two after birth, but from 10 to 20 years of age her influence should be withdrawn to a minimum.

Who's Who---And Wherefore.

THE WORLD IS MINE.

THERE'S a business man in Los Angeles who might well appropriate to himself the boast of the romantic Monte Cristo. The world belongs to F. W. Braun, the laboratory genius, a great deal more than it belonged to Dumas's hero. It is decidedly interesting to know that there is a manufacturing plant in operation here in Los Angeles whose products are found in every chemical laboratory, every scientific laboratory and every assay office of importance in the world. Go into a laboratory-supply house in New York or Boston and you will find these Braun products there. Go into such a house in London, Paris or Berlin and they are known there as well as at home. In the City of Mexico, in Buenos Ayres, in Rio de Janeiro, in Johannesburg, South Africa, in Melbourne, Australia, in Tokio, Japan, you will find them wherever you go. Go into an assay office in the Rocky Mountains anywhere, in the Ural Mountains in Russia, in the mines of Western Australia or in those of South Africa, and there you will find these appliances.

The reason is that they are the most efficient and the most cheaply operated of anything of their kind known to the scientific world. A municipal government wishes to make an analytical assay of a piece of bituminous street pavement. It used to take about three days to do this. An F. W. Braun device will do it in a few minutes. Another little device of this establishment will in as few minutes turn you out molten iron from the crude ore. There is a lathe in the Braun establishment up on New High street which shaves down zinc plates into shavings for use in the cyanide process in gold mining that has no equal in the whole mechanical world. Its efficiency comes from a simple device which sends a current of cool air through a little water in the inside of the cylinder which keeps the machine cool while running at high speed, and thus lessens greatly the cost of producing this material, so largely used in mines.

These are simply two out of many appliances coming from the Braun establishment, and they have been all developed right in the shop under the direction and inspiration of the proprietor of the establishment. It is something to have the name of Los Angeles attached to a scientific concern of so great efficiency.

Frederick William Braun is an Illinoisan, born October 6, 1858. You can guess from his three names, the given names being those of the former Emperor of Germany and the surname being distinctively Teutonic, that he comes of German stock. His father and mother were both Rhinelanders.

Fred Braun was educated in the public schools, and afterward at the College of Pharmacy in Chicago. Having finished his education, he went to Roanoke, Tex., where he opened a drug establishment. It was the first business house in the town. From there the young man went to Colorado City, Tex., where he opened up in the wholesale drug business. But about the time the first big real estate boom in Los Angeles was drawing to a close, carrying the name of this city all over the world, the fame of the California metropolis reached the ears of the young man in the Texas drug store, so in May, 1888, F. W. Braun was found in Los Angeles, where he opened a wholesale drug store on New High street. He prospered in his business so much that larger premises were needed, and be bought the Vickrey building, corner of Main and Republic streets, to which he added and added, until it became one of the largest business establishments in this city. This was in 1896, and 1907 he sold his interest in this business and went into the machinery-supply business, finally landing back on New High street near the scene of his early venture, where he is now found conducting a chemical, scientific and assay supply house, as noted above, all the world over. The house not only manufactures the appliances devised and designed in and for the house, but also is a large importer of the finest goods of this kind to be found in the markets of the wide world. It draws particularly upon Germany, which in the last twenty years has taken the lead of all countries in this kind of work.

Mr. Braun is a large property-holder in Los Angeles, one of his recent ventures being a magnificent hotel on Second street at the corner of Clay. Looking after this real estate business calls for a good deal of the business man's time, and he is only occasionally found at the office on New High street, where he acts in an advisory capacity. He formerly conducted three houses, one at San Francisco and one at San Diego, added to that at Los Angeles. The San Diego branch exists no longer, but the one at San Francisco is in successful operation.

Here's another inspiring thing about the career of F. W. Braun. These two establishments now existing are conducted by former employees of the founder, and are largely owned by them. The heads of the San Francisco house began as messenger boys, and those here began at the very bottom of the ladder, and through Mr. Braun's help they have become possessed of important and remunerative business interests.

Mr. Braun is married, and the pair have one child, a girl. He belongs to the California Club and the Los Angeles Athletic Club, to the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, the Chamber of Mines, and various other important organizations.

Eighty-four, Keen as Steel.

It is probably owing to a sound constitution, temperate habits and the California climate that a man can be active in his career at the advanced age of four score and four years. Think of a man born in Alabama, September 6, 1829, graduated from the military academy at West Point in 1854, a lawyer in Los Angeles in 1859, and now hale and hearty, looking after an orange grove of 200 acres in the very heart of the San Gabriel Valley.

That briefly sketched is the record of the career of Alfred Beck Chapman, known well for half a century here as A. B. Chapman, formerly associated in the practice of the law with the late Andrew Glassell. Glassell & Chapman forty to forty-five years ago, with offices in the Temple Block, were doing most of the heavy law business of Southern California. Many and many a successful lawyer who has practised in this city since, some of them still engaged in their profession, studied law in the office of Glassell & Chapman, and there became thoroughly possessed of the fundamental principles of American jurisprudence.

The Chapman home was once on the corner of Second and Main streets, where the Higgins building now stands. The Glassell home stood on the other side of Main street a little north of Second street, and the Baker iron works was carried on on the west side of Main street at the corner of Second, right across the street from the Chapman home. The two members of the law firm owned a good deal of city real estate, but Mr. Glassell had more faith in broad acres than in town lots. At one time he controlled about the whole of the big valley now including Tropico and Glendale, coming down along the hills to the city limits and running westward along the railroad nobody knows how far.

Imbued with the spirit of his partner, A. B. Chapman went out into the San Gabriel Valley and secured a tract of 2600 acres right in the heart of that garden spot of the world. It lies just east of Sunny Slope, another great property developed by the late L. J. Rose. These two ranches were rich in the possession of a vast and valuable water supply from artesian sources, the original springs of which lie in the great mountain uplift just back of the property. A stratum of impervious rock or clay curls up about the eastern edge of the Chapman and Rose ranches and throws the subterranean stream to the surface.

It has not been all play these thirty years that Mr. Chapman has spent on that vast principality of nearly 3000 broad acres. He brought about 200 acres of it into bearing orange trees, no slight accomplishment in the early days. It was about 1880 that Mr. Chapman undertook this work, before a railroad connected with the East, when the cultivator had to feel his way at every step because of lack of experience, when labor was scarce and dear, markets remote and undeveloped, transportation of crops awfully expensive, fertilizers but little known and not well understood, and all sorts of predaceous insects attacking trees and crops.

The orange producers of Southern California within ten years from the time Mr. Chapman undertook the development of his property will never forget the campaign against the red scale and the more strenuous one against the cottony-cushion scale. This last threatened to exterminate the orange orchards of Southern California, and the writer has seen men with grizzled beards who went through all the hardships of the Civil War stand in the midst of a big orchard with the tears rolling down their cheeks as they faced the destruction of their livelihood and the wiping out of their property values.

There is no doubt that during all these vicissitudes no man ever detected a quiver on the lip of A. B. Chapman. He said to the writer one day, when talking of the expense of obtaining fertilizers from the East, the fighting of predaceous insects, the rapacity of the railroads, the dishonesty of commission merchants, and other difficulties incident to the business, that it would tax the brain of Napoleon to manage an orange ranch of the size of his.

A. B. Chapman has been married twice, and has raised three sons and three daughters, all married with one exception and all living here, highly respected and useful citizens, except one, who is leading a similar career in Spokane, Wash. Mr. Chapman is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and has always done his full share in encouraging everything of a useful public character in this community.

He Sells Out Friend and Foe.

Persistency is born in some men as a family trait. For years and years Philadelphia knew a family engaged in the wholesale lumber trade, which business was handed down from father to son generation after generation. When the Civil War broke out, in 1861, millionaires were scarce in the United States, but one of these lumber-dealing Clarks was easily worth a million.

To this one on October 27, 1848, in the city of Philadelphia, was born a son, duly christened Thomas Brainerd, with the Clark name an inheritance. The boy was educated in the public schools, and finally graduated from Wyers Academy at Westchester, Pa. Although the family was engaged in lumber and some of them are engaged in it yet, the boy went West with four brothers to cultivate a vast tract of land of about 15,000 acres in Missouri, bought by the elder Clark from the government in 1831. The father of Thomas B. Clark not only dealt in lumber but encouraged the use of it. He organized and guided the fortunes of the first building association ever known in the world, and for years Philadelphia numbered more citizens who owned their own modest homes than any other city in the world, a result of this organization inspired by the father of Thomas B. Clark.

Before going out to Missouri to cultivate the big tract of corn land, Tom Clark, a boy of 12 or 14 years of age, enlisted in the Pennsylvania Volunteers and was in a regiment of the reserves standing behind the lines at the terrible battle of Antietam, but never called into action.

In 1879, Thomas B. Clark came to Los Angeles, and with the Northcrafts, father and son, opened up an establishment for the sale of fireproof safes, an' this developed into a general auction business. The younger Northcraft, C. L., is still living at Pomona, and if there is a more popular man in the community than Charlie Northcraft he can be elected to any office he likes.

The persistency of the Clark family which stuck generation after generation to the lumber business in Philadelphia probably accounts for Tom Clark continuing for a whole generation in one line of business in the city of Los Angeles. In the old days he was about the only auctioneer in the city, and many a friend he sold out to the entire satisfaction of the seller. He has a man in his employ known as Tommy Shooter, who has been with the house for thirty years almost to a day, and he knows more about the combinations of burglarproof safes than Louis Brandeis, Frank Kellogg, Untermeyer, and all the other monopoly investigators know about all the business combines in the world.

There is one particular line of auctioneering in which Mr. Clark is particularly skilled. That includes pictur furniture, and art objects

Beginning Service.

AT TRAINING STATION AT SAN FRANCISCO.

[illegible] BEGIN with, I must tell of the feeling of one who desires to place himself upon the long list of men who are [illegible] their country in the navy. First, I [illegible] to learn more about the life in [illegible] after I had seen the posters in [illegible] postoffice. I sent to the government for the illustrated booklet, "The [illegible] of a Man-o'-Warsman," which I [illegible] and read several times. I [illegible] to take a trip to the city, [illegible] navy recruiting station was located. The officer in charge courteously [illegible] explained the several branches, [illegible] procedure of enlistment. A queer [illegible] over me as I watched the uni[illegible] working in the office. I felt a [illegible] come into my blood—a fascination [illegible] life that follows the briny deep; [illegible] port, from sea to sea, from [illegible] country, the kinetoscopic scenes, [illegible] care-free life of the ocean—[illegible] that the call was on me, and I [illegible] and anxious to answer it. I re[illegible] home with a pocket full of information and had a long and earnest talk [illegible] parents. It was soon decided that [illegible] join the navy without a long delay. [illegible] day I returned to the recruiting [illegible] where I was physically and mentally [illegible], passing successfully.

[illegible] decided upon the yeoman branch [illegible] service, which I think is the best. I [illegible] a test of clerical and typing [illegible], and I passed this examination. [illegible] sworn in, taking the oath of allegiance, and having read the rules and or[illegible] now a full-fledged sailor. I was [illegible] a meal certificate and sent to [illegible] best hotels in the city, where I [illegible] meal on Uncle Sam. I re[illegible] that afternoon to spend the [illegible] time with my family.

[illegible] the hardest things that I had to [illegible] pack my belongings. There were [illegible] things I thought I would need. [illegible] and I took only my shaving out[illegible] few trinkets. My mother gave [illegible] good reminders, of which I am al[illegible], and her face is ever before [illegible] me in the right path. My [illegible] gave me sound advice, and I [illegible] his words, thereby keeping [illegible] trouble.

[illegible] I left home with my suitcase [illegible] to the recruiting station [illegible] I was given my "shipping papers," transportation and subsistence [illegible] there was another recruit to go [illegible] the training station at San [illegible]. The fellow was young and had [illegible] an apprentice seaman. We [illegible] to eat lunch at the hotel, after [illegible] officer escorted us to the depot, [illegible] bade us farewell and good luck on [illegible]. The train took us to the [illegible], where we took the steamer [illegible] Pacific Coast metropolis. The up [illegible] pleasant and full of amusement [illegible] there were many people on board [illegible] never braved the per[illegible] journey. There was seasick[illegible].

[illegible] two days, and I never had a [illegible] on the water. On the second [illegible] was a good roll to the old [illegible] the majority of the passengers [illegible] to their staterooms. That [illegible] passed the far-famed Golden [illegible] the waters pulse through the [illegible] to one of the most beautiful [illegible] in the world. Arriving at San [illegible] found Pier Three, as my or[illegible], and took the little steam [illegible] the U.S.S. Pensacola and Goat [illegible] the middle of the San Francisco [illegible] boat came alongside the fa[illegible] found a few real sailors [illegible] with snickers and stares as [illegible] that we were prisoners or [illegible] had done some misdemeanor. [illegible] over and found to be the [illegible], so were given a hot [illegible] we were fitted with "sleep[illegible] mattress, mattress cover, [illegible] blankets are called. This [illegible] installment of the $60 outfit [illegible] outright to each recruit. [illegible] kept in the "rookie shack," as the building is called where the new sailors are housed until they are outfitted and sent to the detention camp.

Cleanliness Demanded.

In the navy everything is clean, from the deepest hold up to the smallest utensil in the galley. When we entered the "rookie shack," we were obliged to help sweep the place. We were given an antiseptic bath and then we read, smoked and talked of our respective home towns. We "turned in," for the night at 8 o'clock. This sanitary bath is given each recruit, and he is taught from the very start that cleanliness of person is demanded by his shipmates as well as the authorities. On board ship if a man is found to be in any way unclean he is taken out on the "fo'c'sle" and given a good scrubbing with a "ki-yi," or fiber scrub brush. This operation once undergone, a man has no desire to be careless in his personal cleanliness.

The next morning I awoke with a start at the loud tones of the well-known reveille bugle call, which was sounded at 5:30, and immediately was dressed and up with the rest of the newly-made sailors. We "turned to" and cleaned the building, "swabbing" or mopping the floor and paintwork, sweeping the walks and porch, and making the place "ship-shape." We ate breakfast and later in the morning were sent to the big barracks, where the surgeon examined us and we were vaccinated. One lad who was from my home town was sent home because of a weak heart. This shows how strict the examination is given at the station. After this step we were at leisure until the next day, when the mysteries of sailor's "togs" were unfolded to us.

We "fell in" after breakfast and were marched to the storerooms, where the "clothing and small stores" are kept. There is a chief petty officer in charge of the recruit shack, and he is the first officer with whom the recruit has to deal when he joins the navy. This officer is a jolly little German and he has the laugh on every recruit when he first tries on his new clothes. The complete wardrobe and toilette, amounting to $60, includes six suits of clothes, four suits of underwear, caps, hats, handkerchiefs and smaller articles of wearing apparel.

We were shown how to "stow" our clothes in the canvas bags, which were then "made fast" to our roll of bedding and we started after the chief, who said: "Now, me lads, shoulder your bundles and follow me." We "followed" him and started up the steep hill, bound for the detention camp. It is a steep climb, and our bundles were heavy, but finally we reached the camp, where there were about a hundred recruits playing various games, scrubbing clothes and amusing themselves. We were greeted by shouts of "Rookies!" "Four years, old boy!" "Does your mother know you're out?" and "Anyone here from Dallas?" the latter meaning is there anyone from the Texas city. This greeting originated a long time ago. The Lone Star State sends more recruits than any other State, and all are "shipped" from Dallas, so it is easy to see that—it causes a good many laughs when hurled at the strangers. We were immediately given "Bibles," or "The Recruit's Handy Book," which contains all the instructions and codes of signals, besides many pages of ship terms, diagrams of knots and splices, and the promotions and rates of pay in the navy. My hair was clipped to within half an inch of the scalp. This is done so there is a uniform appearance of the men, and for various other reasons. We were assigned to shacks, where we made our beds on cots and started to learn the main signal system, the "semaphore," also the "wig-wag," and the compass.

Clothes and Their Care.

These recruits, now better known as apprentice seamen, are drilled every day in the use and care of small arms, company drills and many field maneuvers. They are taught how to stencil, roll and press their clothes. A tailor is there to see that each garment fits, and there is no charge for this work. After the clothes have been marked so there will be no mistakes as to the owner, the recruit is also instructed how to "stow" or arrange each article in his clothes bag so that everything will be handy and yet compact. All the sailors wash their own clothes in fresh water with "salt-water soap" that is furnished free to each man. There is plenty of salt water to rinse the clothes in and long lines to "stop" or tie them to. The "whites" are the duck uniform, and it is the uniform used to drill in at this place. These clothes soil easily, but I found that if I did not sit on the ground or play some of the rough games I could easily make a suit "pass inspection" for two days, and sometimes three days.

After nearly a week at the "D Camp," there was an itching, tickling sensation felt on the left arm, the vaccine was working. This operation is one of the regulations of the navy and every sailor has a small pit on his left arm. Each recruit is vaccinated until there is a positive "cowpox," and usually one application of the virus is sufficient. Sometimes there is a man who is immune to it, but after two or three treatments a good "pit" is obtained.

In the course of the three weeks that a man is required to stay at this camp his hair has started to grow, he is used to the new clothes, and he is versed in the signals and company drills so that when he goes to the barracks he is well prepared to take up the training in earnest. All this time he does no hard work, more than scrub his clothes and shack; take a turn in the "mess hall," and drill the remainder of the time that is not spent in playing the outdoor games.

On a Monday morning the men of a company ready to descend from the high hill are told about the place to which they will go and how to act there so they will not get "on report." The chief petty officer, who is detailed as instructor, tells each man many things to watch out for and gives him an idea of what is expected of him. The surgeon examines each man and, if healthy, pronounces him eligible for the next step in the training station, and so the month-old sailor is sent to the big barracks.

At the Barracks.

Upon arrival there a hammock made of canvas, lashing, and clew ropes are given each man and he is taught how to sling, lash, and adjust his individual sleeping gear. The hammock is the best bed in the world—so soft and pliant; always a soft spot where it is needed, and no danger of the covers falling off, or of the sleeper rolling out of bed. At night when the recruit unties or "slings" his hammock he is making his bed for the night.

Bag and hammock inspection is held once each week, and each man must have his outfit scrupulously clean and "laid out" correctly. There is personal inspection each morning and general inspection each Saturday, when all men on the island are required to be present and in full dress. At this inspection if anyone is seen to have an unclean garment he is given extra duty. Inspection of the buildings and grounds is held each Thursday and everything must be "spick and span." Wednesday nights "Dad," the old "jimmy-legs" or master-at-arms who has charge of the big mess hall, has his prayer-meetings, and all the bad boys have to come and kneel and pray with a "holy stone." This is a great happening, as the decks of the hall must be "stoned" once each week with big stones and wet sand, and then mopped with soapy water and "swabs." The chaplain has a real prayer meeting on the same night, and it is easily seen that his meeting is more patronized than that of the master-at-arms.

One of the initial instructions given the new men is how to take care of themselves in the water. There is a swimming pool, with heated water, and officers are detailed to teach the men how to swim.

The drills are now taken up in earnest, and the best company wins the "colors" at the Wednesday battalion drill. Four times a week the companies have boat drill, under sails and oars, and sometimes lifeboat drills. These drills are given with the small rowing and sailing cutters, and aboard the training ship. At other periods come the ordnance, marksmanship and artillery drills, where uses and kinds of shells, explosives and mines, also the guns and parts are carefully explained to the apprentices. "Seamanship" in the "rigging loft" where the tangled mysteries of knots and splices, the "scared bowline" and the "double carrick bend" are unraveled to the young sailors.

On visiting days, Wednesdays (battalion drill,) Saturdays and Sundays are held baseball games, and there is not a man who is not a real "fan" when it comes to this game. There is always a crowd from the nearby cities in attendance, relatives and friends of the boys and officers. On other afternoons there are many athletic games and contests, for which prizes and medals are awarded. Two or three times a week there is a moving pictures show, and twice a month a company of actors presents a play for the benefit of the boys. There are prizes offered for "local talent" and "fine" shows are sometimes seen. All the prizes and the cost of the athletic goods come from the chaplain's amusement fund, which is the revenue from the papers, barber shop, and pool tables, which really is the profit from the boy's own spending. Skating is allowed during the week evenings, and much fun is caused from this exercise and amusement.

The walls of the immense drill hall are covered with representations of flags of all nations, and the signal codes used in the navy. Wherever the eye looks there is opportunity to learn. A huge compass face is painted on the walls, and all the boys soon learn to "box" or bound the sea-guider. There is a "log," and "leadline," where the "marks" and "deeps" can be learned. Out on the pier there is the "chain" or shelf where "heaving the lead" is taught and it takes no time to get the knack of throwing the weighted line that indicates the depth of the sea. The drill hall is well ventilated and heated, and many happy hours are spent in the sailor's leisure time "dozing" under the radiators, getting in extra naps. The place is a veritable house of knowledge, there being all these representations of signals and flags. At one end of the hall is a mounted and "full-rigged" thirty-foot sailing cutter, from which many practical ideas may be learned.

Battalion Drill.

When a company has been at the barracks for a week or more it is made one of the battalion and takes an active part in the general routine work of the station. One week is spent on detail in the mess hall, ground detail and various small duties. Each morning at the "setting-up" exercises the battalion is assembled and the drill starts. Many of the physical drills are timed to the popular marches and two-steps, played by the station band. The drill with the nine-pound rifles is called the "grinder," and the name is befitting the strenuous exercise with the guns.

Reveille bugle call is sounded at 5:30 a.m., when "all hands" are "turned out" and "lash and stow" their hammocks in the "nettings." The decks, as the upper floors of the barracks are called, must be cleared in fifteen minutes, when "turn to" call is sounded and all the men on detail must be at their respective cleaning stations. After this is finished the men have ample time to wash, smoke and prepare themselves for breakfast, which is "piped down" at 7:15. Then there is freedom until 8 o'clock, when "colors goes," and everyone stands at "attention" while the band plays the national air, then salute, as Old Glory is unfurled to the balmy breezes at the top of the flagpole. The setting-up drill follows for half an hour, then company drill for the rest of the period. At 9 the battalion is dismissed and "sick call" is sounded, and all men who do not feel well consult the doctor. At 9:30 "assembly" calls the men to the morning inspection, which is followed by "passing review," and then the several drills that the companies are scheduled for.

At 11 o'clock come dismissal and freedom until noon, when dinner is served and then more freedom until 1, when the battalion is once more assembled, and mustered. The order is given: "All hands over the masthead," which means that everyone must march down to the dock and onto the ship and climb hand-over-hand the "rigging," up to the top of the main mast and down the other side on the ropes. This is great fun and all are taught how to "run" up the "shrouds" and hang onto the cables

Mexico's New Oil Fields. By F. G. Carpenter.

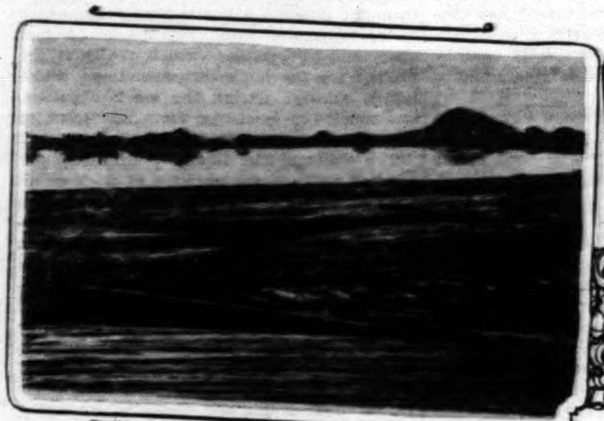
Source of Wealth.

THEY ARE NOW YIELDING 200-000 BARRELS A DAY.

THE WORLD'S BIGGEST OIL WELL—A LAKE OF PETROLEUM WHICH HOLDS 3,000,000 BARRELS—THE DOS BOCAS GUSHER, AND ITS TWO THOUSAND FEET OF OIL FLAMES—FUEL OIL FOR OUR NAVY AND THE PANAMA CANAL—AMERICAN COMPANIES WHICH ARE MAKING MONEY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TAMPICO—This will soon be the chief oil port of the world. It lies in the heart of oil lands which are now producing 200,000 barrels of petroleum a day, and great oil tanks are going up which will hold a supply of millions of barrels. Tampico is situated a little back from the coast, half way between Vera Cruz and the Rio Grande. It lies near the mouths of the Panuco and Tamesi rivers, and it has a harbor so deep that the biggest ocean steamers can land. The wharves and jetties and other harbor improvements were designed and built for the Mexican government by American engineers, and they have cost millions. The port is 2000 miles from New York, 4800 miles from Liverpool, and a little more than 5000 miles from Hamburg, and tank steamers will soon be carrying oil from here to all parts of the world.



The great oil lake near Tampico.

Great gusher which flows 110,000 barrels daily.

The rivers, which join just above Tampico, flow through the oil fields, and during the past year eighty steel tanks have been built on their banks, all being on deep water. About thirty of these tanks belong to the Pearson syndicate or Mexican Eagle Oil Company, and the same company is putting up refineries here. It is a British syndicate, backed by the Pearsons, which has also large interests in Mexican railways, electric plants and mines. Its oil branch has a paid-up capitalization of $25,000,000, and the market value of the stock is twice that amount. It has altogether more than a half million acres of oil land.

The Waters-Pierce Company was until lately a branch of the Standard Oil Company. It has large interests, including storage tanks on the rivers. And then we have the Mexican Petroleum Company, which is largely controlled by California oil men. It has an authorized capital of $50,000,000, and it owns something like 700,000 acres of land, much of which is still unexplored. One of the Mexican Petroleum Company's wells has been producing for more than two years, and although only partially opened it turns out 25,000 barrels of oil a day. This company is now erecting storage tanks near Tampico, while the Texas Company is doing likewise on a tract of land of about a thousand acres opposite this port. The latter company has already constructed a temporary wharf and is shipping oil to the United States ports.

In addition to these companies there are others operating in the vicinity, and altogether there are over thirty different organizations at work.

The New Oil Territory.

These new oil fields extend for hundreds of miles along the Mexican gulf. The profitable wells are scattered all the way from here to Vera Cruz and oil has been found in paying quantities farther south and on the isthmus of Tehuantepec. The exact width of the territory is not defined, but they are striking oil sixty miles back from the sea, and the region in which the prospecting is going on is said to be about as large as the State of Illinois and over a distance twice as large as the State of Massachusetts wells have already been sunk. In many places oil has been struck at 400 or 500 feet, but the best wells are much deeper, and the great gushers have come from a depth of 1800 or 2000 feet.

Take, for instance, gusher No. 4, or the Potrero del Llano No. 4, which has a capacity of 110,000 barrels a day. That well belongs to the Pearson syndicate, and I have just had a talk with one of the engineers who has to do with its working. The hole was bored three years ago. When the oil was struck it burst forth in a great stream which rose to a height of 400 feet, and it continued to spout for more than three months before it could be controlled. During that time it was pouring forth petroleum at the rate of 5000 barrels an hour, and it covered the whole country with oil. It filled the rivers and lakes and contaminated the stream. Thousands of cattle were lost from the fact that the oil covered their grazing places and they could not get fresh water. Acres of oil flowed out to the sea, and the Mexican gulf had a coating of oil for 300 miles along this part of its coast.

A Lake of Oil.

In their efforts to save the oil the Pearsons dug a lake or reservoir covering several acres and ran the petroleum into it. The lake had a capacity of over 3,000,000 barrels, and it took just twenty-eight days to fill it. That lake is still full of oil, and there are guards who watch it day and night for fear of fire. The vegetation about the shores has been cut back to a distance of 300 feet, and electric lights are kept burning every night to aid in guarding the oil. I am told that the oil is fast deteriorating. Some of it is caking, and it is questionable whether it will be worth a great deal when the time comes for it to be exported or sent to the refineries.

The great gusher is now under control. The engineers succeeded in putting on caps after this flow of three months, and it is now connected with a pipe line which carries it off to the tanks and the coast.

An Oil Flame Two Thousand Feet High.

Another enormous gusher was the Dos Bocas, near the mouth of the San Geronimo River, sixty-seven miles south of here. This was struck at 1800 feet on the fourth of July, 1910, and it produced the greatest fireworks that have even been seen on Independence Day. The oil came forth at the rate of about 4000 barrels an hour almost immediately, and caught fire from the boiler of one of the engines. It then sent up an enormous column of smoke and flame, which reached, it is said, a height of 2000 feet, the flame measuring from forty to seventy-five feet in width. That flame lasted for over two months, and at night it could be seen for more than 200 miles away on the Mexican gulf. It illuminated the whole country, and newspapers could easily be read at midnight at a distance of seventeen miles away. It has been estimated that something like 100,000 barrels of oil were daily consumed before the fire was put out.

An enormous amount of money was spent in the efforts to shut off this Dos Bocas well. The owners tried everything to extinguish the flames, but it was only when the salt water of some subterranean channel broke through that they were choked. This water became mixed with the oil and ruined the well. I am told the oil still flows and that there is a lake of oil and water there which is hot now, although the fire itself has disappeared. The mixture is valueless.

Another well is the Casiana well, which produces 24,000 barrels a day, and scattered over the field are other wells which are running from 500 to 2500 barrels a day.

These are not fairy stories. I have before me a report of the United States Geological Survey as to the big gusher of 110,000 barrels daily capacity. It was drilled under the supervision of Dr. C. W. Hayes, who formerly belonged to the survey, and he had left the discouraged drillers, two days before it was struck, for a trip into the country. As he went away on his mule he told them that they would probably reach oil within twelve feet or more. He had only gone fifty miles and the drill had gone down seven feet when the oil and gas threw the tools out of the well and it began to flow at a 10,000-barrel rate. It steadily increased. Within twenty-four hours the flow was 20,000 barrels. The next day it was 30,000 barrels, and the gain continued until it reached 160,000 barrels, after which it subsided to its present flow, which it has kept up for three years. The well has a pressure of over 800 pounds to the square inch and is now controlled by eight-inch pipes which carry it off to the tanks.

It is said to be the largest oil well of history. The Lucas gusher at Spindletop, Tex., flowed 75,000 barrels a day for a day or two, and the production of some of the Russian wells is reported at slightly over 100,000 barrels, but none has approached the yield of big gusher, No. 4.

A Great Subterranean Oil Lake

The Potrero del Llano, or big gusher, is supposed to have tapped a mighty subterranean lake of oil which lies something like 2000 feet below the surface of the earth and is capped by a solid shell of stone 300 feet thick. This stone shell does [illegible] quire iron casing, and it so [illegible] reservoir that the top can never [illegible]

This is said to be the first well [illegible] kind which has ever tapped a lake [illegible] troleum beneath a solid rock cap[illegible] the great wells of Russia and [illegible] have been in dirt formation, and [illegible] had trouble with cave-ins, fires and [illegible] handicaps before they could be [illegible] and their flow cared for. This [illegible] case with the Dos Bocas well, which [illegible] have written, caught fire and was [illegible] also by the salt water rushing in. [illegible] should the big gusher take fire [illegible] form only a thin column of flame, [illegible] could be extinguished above the [illegible] and the flow of oil preserved.

The big gusher is supposed to come [illegible] an entirely different field than [illegible] Bocas, and there appears to be [illegible] tion between the giant reservoir [illegible] feeds it and that which supplies [illegible] Bocas. The pressure of the lake [illegible] enormous, as may be seen, when it [illegible] membered that it threw a column of crude oil as big around as a nail [illegible] than 300 feet into the air.

Streams of Gold.

Oil wells like these are very [illegible] gold. I am told that the oil as it [illegible] forth is worth here in the [illegible] about 58 cents a barrel. At 50 cents [illegible] rel, the big gusher, if it could be [illegible] to flow all its full capacity, would [illegible] $55,000 a day, or more than [illegible] hour, or between $40 and $50 every [illegible] day and night all the year through. [illegible] is one kind of gold that old mother [illegible] now spitting out in this part of the [illegible] It is a pity that the big gusher [illegible] the British.

This same Pearson Company has [illegible] interests all over Mexico. It has [illegible] on the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, [illegible] pumps that oil to its refinery at [illegible] where there is a branch of the [illegible] National Railway. That oil is [illegible] the export trade, its situation [illegible] easy access to the Pacific ports [illegible] Salina Cruz, while tank steamers [illegible] Atlantic side can be loaded at [illegible] wharves.

I am told that they are [illegible] steamers which cannot cross the [illegible] Tuxpan near here by running [illegible] out into the sea to where the [illegible] depth of sixty feet. Here the [illegible] ers can catch up the flexible pipes [illegible] take on the oil. The pipes are [illegible] mile long, and they are connected [illegible] ten great tanks on the shore, each [illegible] holds 55,000 barrels. These tanks [illegible] from the big gusher I have already [illegible] to, which is thirty-three miles [illegible]

A New Oil Fleet.

I hear also a report that the [illegible] American Line will put on a fleet [illegible] steamers to run to Tampico and [illegible] awaits the building of [illegible] warrant it a constant supply of [illegible] this character. It takes about [illegible] of oil to fill a ship, and a [illegible] will carry from 32,000 to [illegible] It is rumored that a British [illegible] already been organized to build [illegible] fifty tank steamers, each to hold [illegible] rels, the same to be engaged in [illegible] can trade. Connected with the [illegible] will be also fifty tanks of the [illegible] and the scheme is to carry the [illegible] fuel trade to the various [illegible] United Kingdom and the [illegible]

As it is now, hundreds of [illegible] barrels are being shipped [illegible] and Tuxpan every month. [illegible] last one United States [illegible] shipped 328,000 barrels of [illegible] oil from Tampico to [illegible] October the Gulf Refining [illegible] 50,000 barrels. The new [illegible] steamer Adorna, which has [illegible] 60,000 barrels, has entered the [illegible] will take cargoes of oil from [illegible] Oil Company's refinery in [illegible] gentina, and on the return [illegible] at Tampico and bring [illegible] finery.

Log of a Naval Recruit

and "ratlines" or cross-ropes on the vertical ropes which steady the mast. After all the men have done this trick the companies go to their respective drills, and at 3 o'clock "retreat" is sounded and then come all the various games and amusements. There are baseball, basketball, football, bathing, boating, tennis, pool and billiards, piano playing, bowling, fishing, and all the funmakers that are to be found in a good gymnasium.

When supper time comes at 5:15 each and every fellow on the island is ready with an appetite like a bear; and each one surely does justice to the "chow" that is all ready, hot and steaming before him. After the meal there is "nothing to do till tomorrow"—just to play cards, checkers, and the many sailor games. There is a large, well-lighted library, furnished with typewriters, pens, ink, and desks, where the recruit may write home of the good times and new experiences he is having. There are many good fiction and scientific books at his disposal where he may read and amuse himself. One who has ambition may read and acquire knowledge so that he may change his rating from apprentice seaman to yeoman or hospital apprentice, ratings which pay nearly twice as much. A man can study mechanical books and benefit by being promoted from coal-passer to higher mechanical ratings. All this time the men are being drilled, fed and clothed, entertained free, with a variety of shows and amusements, and getting a good sleep every night; incidentally learning the rudiments of the life on the sea that soon is to be his.

The Navy Department says in its booklet on the service about the moral character of the enlisted men of the navy: "The notion often prevails that bluejackets are of loose moral character and composed largely of foreigners. This is a grievous mistake, as the Navy Department will positively not accept recruits who are not of good moral character. It is obvious that shiftless, unscrupulous men would not remain in the service long and would not make good man-o-warsmen. What the department wants is honest, conscientious men who will go into the service with the intention of making it their life work and stick to it. As to foreigners, over 96 per cent. of the men in the navy today are American citizens, and none but American citizens are now accepted." "The shortage in the service today is due to the fact that only a small percentage of those who apply are accepted." "If an undesirable character gets into the service, which sometimes happens, he will soon be discharged." "If a man is a rowdy and a bully, he will soon find the entire crew arrayed against him, and his life as a bluejacket will be miserable and of short duration. If a man conducts himself on board ship as well as he must conduct himself on shore, he will not realize that there is any such thing as discipline." This is all very true, and only men who growl, steal, or do wrong are sent to the "brig" and eventually are given "kick-outs" or dishonorable discharges from the navy. This kind of men are the real cause of the "knocking" that has been done to the service of one of the best countries on the globe. If a man acts only half-way decent and keeps his mouth closed he will be shown little favors that he will appreciate and always remember. Church is one of the many things that is a good part of the navy. Every man is requested to go to church each Sunday, and any man who is not respectful and quiet during the service is severely punished.

During the four months that a recruit is required to be under this interesting course of instruction he is allowed shore liberty once each week. Saturday and Sunday are liberty days, and the two sections of a company alternate on the liberty days. When a man is rated ordinary seaman from apprentice seaman he "rates" more liberty and is allowed to go ashore during the week. I am now in the yeoman school, where I get shore liberty every night from 4:40 until 7:15 the next morning, and Saturday I am off from 11:20 and can stay until the following Monday morning.

The first liberty is the great time for the recruits, and I never will forget my first liberty. It was on a Saturday, and I was all "decked out" in my dress blues, wearing them for the first time. The tug Vigilant carries the party ashore, after the inspection and checking out. The Saturday liberty is granted from 1 o'clock in the afternoon, so we had all the time necessary to see the big city that was beckoning us. We had a fine trip across the bay, in sight of the Golden Gate; the ferries passed us, and in the bay were the four monster cruisers of the famous Pacific fleet, where we some day will be. There were many large ships at anchor in the harbor to interest us, and the trip was one of new-found interest. The western metropolis was soon reached and unfolded to the 200 recruits who were turned loose in it. I went with a shipmate to see the wonders of the city, and eventually we found ourselves in the far-famed Golden Gate Park, where we had the time of our lives.

We saw the Stadium where we had marched when President Taft used a silver spade to break ground for the Panama-Pacific Exposition. This was one of the greatest experiences that I have had since being in the navy. The parade was a couple of miles long, being composed ot many soldiers, sailors from the cruisers, and about 300 boys from the station. We assembled at the foot of Market street and, headed by the automobiles, marched up to Van Ness avenue, where the parade proper started. The head of our navy and country was carried in a big automobile from the Scottish Rite Temple out to the immense Stadium where the ground-breaking ceremonies were held. We followed the machines through the Panhandle and into the park, and when we got there we were assembled in a gigantic circle, surrounding the thousands of people who were there to witness the important happening. There was much to interest us—fireworks, the national salute of twenty-one guns and music galore—and that night when we got back to our hammocks we were "all in," but happy.

As we stood, that day of my first liberty, on the immense ground, overlooking the great city, I saw many ruins left from the frightful earthquake. I remembered a passage from a little book that I had read telling about the fair, called "The Wedding of the Seas," in which the author has described San Francisco in this manner: "Though the habitations of men turned to ashes in a day, or became a wilderness of twisted beams and molten ruins, yet the flame could not touch the spirit of the people nor shatter the faith of those who wrought as one to build anew the city they had long known and loved. Human brotherhood, welded by the fusing force of misfortune, wrought with the courage of heroic effort."

So ended my first shore liberty, and I checked in on time at the station and the next day I was hard at work again. Two happy months have passed since that time, and I am still in the yeoman school, where I am learning every day how to make out blanks, forms, reports and the many different papers for the navy. I have one more examination to take and then I expect to be rated and sent to China or Japan.

Uncle Sam's Housekeeping.

[Joseph Buckin Bishop, in March Scribner:] During the most active years of canal construction, when the force was at its maximum, the government, acting through the commissary and subsistence department of the Canal Commission, was housing, feeding and, in large degree, clothing and providing with all necessities of life, nearly 65,000 persons. This was about the number of employes and their families of dependents. It maintained a central commissary or department store and about twenty branch stores in as many villages and settlements of the Canal Zone. It operated the Hotel Tivoli, a public hotel with modern facilities and accommodations for 500 guests; about twenty line hotels for American employees, and about the same number each of mess-houses and kitchens for common laborers. It did a business of about $7,000,000 annually, and was self-sustaining.

There is a steady diminution in the volume of business as the canal nears completion, and the force is reduced, but the system continues in operation unchanged and will continue till the end. When the canal is thrown open to commerce the plant will be used by the government to furnish supplies to the operating forces, the isthmus military establishment, the United States naval vessels, and all passing ships which desire to purchase them.

Every morning at 4 o'clock a supply train starts across the isthmus from Cristobal, made up of refrigerator and ordinary freight cars carrying ice, cold storage and other supplies. These are delivered at the stations along the line between the Atlantic and Pacific, and by the local quartermasters are taken to the hotels, mess-houses and dwellings of the employees.

Prices in general have been and still are lower than those prevailing in the United States because supplies are purchased on very large contracts, awarded on open competitive bidding, and no profit is sought by the government.

Hogs Work for Living.

[Manchester Guardian:] In this country they make partridges feed themselves from an automatic machine, but that is nothing to a Canadian device for making pigs grind their own meal.

A traveler who is on a visit to Winnipeg noticed from a window seat in a railway carriage so many of these appliances at work on the farms that his curiosity was aroused. In the exhibition at Winnipeg he found them on show in the farm machinery section. The chief part of the outfit was a barrel, with a milling appliance inside, into which Indian corn is poured.

The barrel is on a swivel, and there are holes low down in the sides from which radiate bars of wood so placed that when a hog presses his snout against the bars the barrel turns round. This works the mill inside and newly ground meal falls under the hog's nose.

In order that the hog may waste none of his power in slipping there are slats on the floor against which he can brace his hind feet and so keep the mill going. As many as fifteen hogs can get a chance at the meal at the same time, and when a full force is at work the mill goes round at a lively rate, and each hog commanding a hole has a continuous trickle of meal as his reward. The machine is so contrived that no hog can get any meal unless he stays in the procession. He must either push and travel with the mill or drop out and let another hog take his place.

The claim of the inventor that the machine is a labor saver is conceded at a glance when business is brisk. Only a hog fattener or a butcher would be qualified to pass judgment on the second claim, which is that hogs that have regularly worked for their living make better bacon and pork than hogs that have never done a snout's turn all their lives.

Five Cafes for One Dinner.

[London Mail:] An elderly man in evening dress entered a restaurant in Soho the other night. The waiter took his hat and coat, and in a moment brought him a dish of five oysters and poured out a glass of water.

The diner, who had not said a word, ate the oysters thoughtfully, emptied the glass, paid the waiter, and in five minutes had left.

"He's off to —'s for soup," said the waiter. "He never has more than one course at any place. With the soup he will have half a bottle of white wine and some toast. Then he will go to a third place for the fish, and a fourth for something from the grill. With this he will have half a bottle of burgundy. He never has any sweets or cheese, but finishes at a fifth restaurant, where he gets the best coffee.

"He told me one evening that he found out five restaurants in Soho each of which excelled in a certain dish. He says the little walk between each course helps his digestion. A dinner takes him about two hours."

New York's Canal.

[Christian Science Monthly:] Comparatively few persons have given serious attention to the fact that a great barge canal, at an estimated total cost of $101,000,000 is being constructed across central and western New York State. This great walled up waterway with its locks, water gates, spillways and highway bridges winds across the State from the Hudson to Tonawanda, giving access to the old Erie canals, Oswego canal, Lake Champlain, St. Lawrence and Great Lakes, opening a grand highway from the seaboard and the first city of the Union. When one considers that the canal extends, as the crow flies, 353.5 miles across the State, and with the branches to Lake Champlain and Lake Ontario, has a total length of 463.5 miles, it will be recognized as one of the largest engineering feats in canal construction, ranking second only to the Panama Canal. There has been no end of difficulties met with, such as quicksand and floods, and frequently bridges had to be built to make the work possible.

"Hell's Safety Valve." By Lewis P. Hathaway.

SOURCE OF HOT AIR.

"HELL'S SAFETY VALVE" is a name that has been applied to a spot on the eastern end of South Mountain, a hill 2000 feet high that lies some four miles south of Santa Paula in the citrus district of Ventura county.

Here is a place where the hottest kind of hot air is constantly expelled through large holes and crevices from some mysterious region in the earth's interior in a manner that fills the ordinary visitor with alarm, and at the same time interests any person who is inclined to a study of geological problems.

For at least thirty years and doubtless for many centuries this wonderful natural safety valve has been "popping off" with the surplus pressure from some subterranean boiler, thereby preventing what must otherwise have been a damaging explosion.

The outward rush of heated air is accompanied by a subdued roar, something like that which is heard when an old-fashioned bellows is blown upon a blacksmith's fire; or similar to that caused by the rush of air from the small end of a high-pressure pipe connected with modern heating plants operated in large buildings in eastern cities.

En route to Stockton's hot air caves.

Demonstrating method of taking a "sweat bath"

The exploring party.

The heated air expelled is phenomenally dry, yet when it strikes the human skin a most profuse perspiration is the result, and this has given rise to an apparently well-established belief that it has wonderful curative qualities.

It is on land that is being patented by Joshua Stockton that this volcano indicator is located. It is an out-of-the-way place that has been visited by comparatively few persons; the big hill to the south of Santa Paula has to be climbed; it is a bit too far for a walk; too rough for an outing. And without a guide one might lose the way and be compelled to remain on the mountain over night without water and without food. Stockton, however, is cutting trails and expects some of these days to provide an easy route to this and numerous other wonder-places in his mountain domain.

Stockton lives a hermit life to some extent. For five years he has been holding down his claims, working out assessments, planting trees, growing whatever of fruits and vegetables he needs for his living. He makes occasional trips down the mountain to Santa Paula for his mail and for the few store supplies that may from time to time be necessary for his comfort.

Stockton relates that in days long gone by he frequently had need for a physician's care and attention, but that in the five years he has been living on the mountain top he has not made a single call at the doctor's office; and that he has never since been a patron of the drug store. Nearing the sixty-year mark in his life journey he is as spry as a young man of twenty and he insists that he is good for a full century of years and possibly more.

It is to his discovery of the hot air holes and the fact that the air therefrom has life-giving properties that Stockton attributes his youthful vigor; his ability to climb South Mountain at a pace that would make an ordinary pack horse heartily ashamed of itself, and put other mountain climbers in the hospital did they attempt to keep within sight of him.

Several years ago, according to the owner of the mountain mystery, he fell over a rugged cliff while engaged in the work of making a trail; he was tugging at a stubborn chaparral root which suddenly gave way and caused him to plunge outward to what was expected would prove his entire destruction. When he finally "came to" and started back up the mountainside, his body full of pain, and his blood chilled with long exposure, it occurred to him to warm himself at the larger of the holes where the mysterious outpouring of the heated air had previously been discovered. Here he crawled and drew his form across the mouth of the hole and was soon comfortable. Presently there was an unaccountable perspiration upon the surface of his body; he felt himself being stimulated and before half an hour there was not a pain in his entire system. Presto, he was cured!

He could scarcely believe that he had been in peril or that his experience had been other than a "Little Nemo" nightmare. Instead of crawling wearily over the mile and a half of distance that intervened between the "safety valve" and his hermit cot, he walked as spryly as before. Next day he visited the scene of his accident and reassured himself that his experience had been a reality and not a dream.

And in the years since that time, Stockton says, he has taken hot-air treatments whenever he has thought he needed them, always with the same beneficial effect that followed his strange discovery. Scoffed at generally by sufferers to whom he told his unusual tale, Stockton has prevailed upon a limited number to make the trip to his wonderful hot-air "cure" and he ventures the information, with positive sincerity, that in every instance relief followed the treatment given. These treatments were for rheumatism, for sprains and for various other ills which were not so serious as to prevent the sufferer making the trip to the Stockton mystery place.

Stockton has never made an effort to promote a sanatorium; he is content to go on working out assessments, raising dry-weather crops on the few acres that he has improved, reading books by daylight, and at night either peacefully sleeping or harking the coyote's falsetto wail. He has ever believed in the theory that the world would some day make its way to his door, especially to his superheated caves, there to regain its health and strength by natural methods.

The writer, in company with Prof. R. B. Haydock, principal of the Oxnard schools; J. P. Rasmussen, member of the firm of Bartlett & Company, Ventura, and R. L. Hill, Ventura jeweler, visited the Stockton claim recently. The party left the Southern Pacific train at Santa Paula, where it was met by Mr. Stockton, who had, as he said, strolled down the mountain during the breakfast hour. A horse was provided for the fat member of the party and for the transportation of the lunch materials. Stockton led the party a merry chase over the four miles that lay between the station and his mountain abode and in due time the fat horseman and his wearied animal arrived. Joined later by County Supervisor H. C. Henderson and his brother Sam Henderson, a wealthy rancher and business man, who own land adjoining the Stockton holdings, the entire party accompanied Stockton on a tour that touched the numerous wonder places on his large holdings. The hot-air caves were visited; the members of the party "tried" the treatment, marveled at its results and tread softly upon the crumbling rocks that some were inclined to believe formed the covering of Purgatory.

Later Stockton conducted his guests to points at lower levels of the mountainside where foul-smelling gases are expelled and where ample evidences of the proximity of oil bodies are everywhere found. Wonderful croppings of gypsum and infusorial earth mystified the visitors; tons and tons of finely powdered rock, encompassing nearly all the shades of the spectrum, were found.

But at no point was there more to interest and excite the imagination than at the reddened end of the mountain where the heated air roars ever on and on in its rush from the earth's interior. None of the party was sufficiently qualified with chemical knowledge to analyze the air that came from the holes and crevices. Its temperature, however, was in the neighborhood of 150 degrees Fahrenheit; it was perfectly dry and there was the slightest odor, not in any way sulphury, but rather indicative of lime. Though no one knows as yet—the mystery may never be solved.

The efforts of investigative persons to gain Stockton's permission to blast off the end of the mountain with dynamite with a view of discovering if possible the source of the heat, were unsuccessful. "It might start a volcano," said Stockton, laconically, "and I'd hate to be responsible for the damage it might do."

This is one of the sights that California's tourists have so far overlooked; and it is well worth a visit. One feels himself getting very close to nature when he bathes his body in the heated atmosphere that is blown from the subterranean fanning mill, perhaps from volcanic fires that may some day burst forth and deluge the beautiful Las Posas Valley and its most productive farms with molten lava. One decides that it is not very far from the surface that the fire is burning and one wishes for a ton of dynamite and a fuse a mile or two in length.

ORA AND LEONARD.

TAXICAB drew up in front of St. [illegible]trick's—not that other taxis had not been drawn up in front of that par[illegible] cathedral, not that they had not borne a dainty perfumed burden; but the cargo was something unusual, wholly unperfumed save for the great [illegible] of fragrant violets fastened under [illegible] of the high-girdled frock of silks [illegible], and the naturally sweet aroma [illegible], healthy, clean young body. The [illegible] with its natural tendency to curl, [illegible] flashes of gold was caught up [illegible], but half-carelessly under a great [illegible] violet. "[illegible] I'm thinkin' on to-night, Tauny—it's to Ameriky Oi'm goin'," whispered the girl.

"No—Nora—cushla!" he whispered back, his arms about her neck.

"Oi'll not be shillalahed by the loikes of me dad iver agin at all, at all," she said, clinching her small fists.

"Thin it's wid yez Oi m goin'!" averred the small man.

"Ye'll not! Yell sthay wid yer mither—shes nane ither cheeld. And it's all the foul things they'll say ferninst us!"

The boy thought a moment, then thrusting his hand into his pocket, brought forth something carefully wrapt in old rags, which proved to be a shining shilling—a treasure he had hoarded away from the knowledge of his parents ever since the finely-clad stranger had ridden through the village. He put it into her warm litle palm, and pressed it there.

"Be a good gairl, Nora—promise me! Oi'm comin' to get yez some day!" And with a great sob the boy ran from her, and disappeared in the dark.

The girl put her hand to her breast. The shilling was there on its little silver chain. Why had she always worn it? She had no false sentiment about Tauney. It would be a tragedy if he were to attempt keeping his word. An impassable gulf yawned between them. He was probably married to Maggie McCree, with a baby or two, and getting ready for the spring planting of potatoes.

"Sthand out o' me light—it's stoppin' me work ye are!" The red head tossed, and the white hands continued to glide in and out among the silk threads, as the machinery crashed and rattled above her. The noon whistle blew, but instead of scurrying for their lunch baskets as usual, the girls lingered to see what was going to happen.

"You have very pretty hands—they could wear jewels with the grace of a princess."

"It's the same that ivery mon tells me, Mr. Leonard!" responded the girl, shaking back her curls. There was a titter.

"I suppose they've told you, too, that you are possessed of a most extraordinary beauty," pursued the young man, not in the least disconcerted. "What a hit you would make on the stage!"

"Would Oi, though?" And a sudden fire leaped to the girl's eyes, but she controlled herself admirably. "Oi suppose yez think the loikes uv me should have a red autymobile, a marble palace, and a moon-eyed calf loik yersilf a pesterin' around!" She waited for the girlish laughter of her friends to subside, then standing with arms akimbo, and her hands on her pretty little hips, she continued, "Oi may be a greenhorn, but its learnin' fast Oi am, and Oi'll not be fooled be the loikes of yez, at all, at all! The back of me hand to yez!" And turning away, she extracted a little mirror and powder chamois from her pocket—for she was, in truth, learning fast.

As Nora ran down the path from the factory, her mother, with a baby in her arms, stood in the door, shading her eyes with her hand.

"Who was the mon r. walkin' wid yez? And where did yez git the thing on yer arm?"

Nora lifted her rounded arm, and eyed the jade bracelet, a bright spot in either cheek. "Sure Oi loaned it of a girl," she lied. "The mon was Misther Leonard—the boss' nephew."

"Divil a minit will Oi sthand for that!" spoke up the father, stopping in the alternate plying of knife and fork. "Keep away from the loikes of him! Yez kin run wid lads of yer own class."

Nora regarded herself in the cracked mirror, hummed a tune, seated herself at the table, using her fork with all the elegance of a lady to the manner born. She had served in a family of refinement and wealth during the year before her family joined her in the new country. "And don't be puttin' on airs over yer own father. Kape yer place, Oi'm tellin' yez, or it's no good end ye'll come to!" And the father brought his fist down, making the dishes dance.

"Moind yer father!" shrilled the mother, dragging a screaming youngster out from under the stove.

Nora hurried out of the house eating an apple, all of the wilful defiance of young prettiness astir within her. She had tasted the sweets of independence and refinement. She loved her home and her people with all the warmth of her young Irish heart, but she assumed that she was superior to them, and while she had in the main followed their cautioning, she despised them a little for what she termed their ignorance.

"You're late," said Leonard, not rising from his comfortable reclining position on the grass, as the panting girl joined him in the thicket, out of sight of the factory.

"Me father watches me that clost!" she said, dropping down beside him.

Then the lessons began—lessons in the elementary knowledge that every child must master in school, and Nora was an apt scholar. The young man was idling the summer away at his uncle's home, and the pastime was interesting. That the girl resisted every attempt at affectionate demonstration compelled as much respect as he had ever permitted himself for anyone in her class. Besides, she was really more entertaining than the young women with whom he mingled on a social equality. Her wit and naivete held him. He began to read to her, and then the girl's real growth commenced. She grew to love Shakespeare and Moliere under the patient interpretation of her teacher. He read her the news, and talked to her about events in the world of achievement. Slowly her mind was formulating a plan to become a part of that wonderful world—not as a kitchen maid or a factory girl—although she did not despise these humble professions. And she grew more patient and respectful in her relations at home.

The time was come when Leonard must go. What should she do without him? There was nothing but to sink back into the commonplaces—no chance for education, no chance for becoming somebody—something.

"Where are ye goin'?" asked the father, as she tried to slip silently out of the house that night. "Come back here. It's a deal of watchin' ye'll sthand, Miss. She's thricky, mither. She thricked us once, and bad cess to it, sh'll thrick us agin."

And she did. She managed to speed through the lots in the dark, and finally sat panting on the top plank of the fence that inclosed the Leonard orchard. The young man strolled up and joined her. He laid his hands each side of her on the fence, and looked up at her in the moonlight.

"Nora," he said suddenly, "I want you!" But she eluded his arms, and sprang down on the other side of the fence. A sudden hope was kindled in her heart—and then the gulf yawned between them. She knew what he meant. He whispered some hurried instructions, and pressed a roll of bills into her hands.

As she went slowly home in the darkness, her hand clutched the little shilling that had always hung about her neck. So this was the meaning of all Leonard's kindness, his patience and instructions. Her good father was right, then. The gulf was impassable.

She sat down on the stoop in sudden panic at the feel of the bills in her hand. She commenced to count them, then covered her eyes dizzily. She had never before seen so much money together, much less carried it in her hand. She started up, with a sudden determination to return it. She stood still, a plan gradually forming in her brain. After all, it was a mere bagatelle to him—to her it would mean everything, her entire future. She noiselessly entered the house, ascended the stairs, and packed her shabby suitcase. She would take only bare necessities, she told herself. Then as she opened the lower drawer, she spied her simple party dress with its tawdry trimmings, and the blue kid slippers. She thrust them into the case.

As the girl raised her head, she looked straight into a pair of tawny eyes, that had evidently been regarding her for some time. They were set in the very white face of a young man, with a large, good mouth, and hair that defied all attempts to subdue it and smooth it down. The two made their exit from the church with perfect decorum, but when they reached the arch-crowned peristyle their young hands flew together, and half laughing, half crying, Nora kissed him squarely on the lips, oblivious of all observers.

"Is it yerself' Oi see agin' afther all the years!" she cried, lapsing into the brogue.

"I was scarcely sure it was you—I could not believe my own eyes!" And those same eyes devoured the girl with admiration. The flattery was so obvious, that Nora, with a desire to show off, sent a languid, heavy-lidded glance toward the street.

"Call a taxi, Tauney dear, and we'll go uptown to my apartments. We can talk it all over on the way!" But her affectation quickly vanished, and the two, cuddled closely side by side, clasping each other's hands, recounted their struggles with the world to obtain education, culture, and to secure a footing among the best of men and women—that great so-called middle class from which spring all the genius and power of personality—the sturdy stuff that builds governments and makes history.

"And how are all the folks?" asked Tauney warmly. "They must be proud to see you so beautiful and so wonderful, with everybody in the big theater admiring you."

The girl shifted uneasily. "I'm not so really great—not yet. And—the truth is—I don't know anything about the folks."

"Nora! Ye're lyin'! Ye used to lie to me in the old days to tease me!"

"If I'd written them, Tauney, they'd a' made me come back," the girl said hurriedly, "back, where I'd have been nothing but a factory girl at $3 a week until I married some dirty, dhrinkin' slouch gettin' six. Ah, Tauney, don't be hard on me! After I'd succeeded, I thried to find them—but no one knew where they were."

The young man had drawn away from her coldly. Nora reached under the carpet for her latch key. It was gone. Her heart sank. The door was opened by a well-groomed man, not overly young.

"I feared the priest had eloped with you, my charmer—or that you had run away again, like the dear little trickster that you are. Oh—you have company, I beg your pardon."

"Is it the holy father you're speaking of!" she said, and frowned. "This is Tauney. We'll be with you presently, dear." She drew Tauney into the dining room. He closed the door behind him, and set his back against it.

"Now tell me all," said Tauney, white to the lips.

"It was that man's money gave me my start," responded Nora, looking bravely into his eyes. "Tauney—Tauney, don't look at me that way!" And she grasped his trembling arm. He pushed her from him.

"And this is the price you've paid for it all. Nora—my little girl neighbor. I've thought of you and dreamed of you all through the years, planned for you, waited for you—and this is the end."

"Open that door!" she commanded fiercely. "Ye might as well know the whole truth!" And she drew him into the next room.

"Misther Leonard," she began, "I did a dirthy, dishonest trick to ye the night ye gave me that money. But I was only sixteen, and ye'd taught me what there was in the great big, beautiful world, and what I might be. Ye asked me to go with ye—but I didn't want to be bad. My whole future was in that little roll of bills—the temptation was too great, I tricked ye—I took your money, and—didn't—pay! I offered ye the money today, ye wouldn't take it—but said like ye did that night—'Nora, I want you!' Tauney boy, don't ye see it's a debt of honor? But up to now I've kept meself like ye said—and I've always worn the little shilling next me heart." The girl broke down, and wept. When the storm had subsided, Leonard was the first to speak, as he laid a cool hand on her head.

"Nora—girl, you owe me nothing. I'm not a good man, but I'm not a brute. Why—I—I only did it all to test you," he lied, "and I found—a good woman." He raised her hand gently to his lips and kissed it, then taking his hat turned to go. He paused at the door. "Your people are in the city, on the East side." And he scribbled an address. "Use that money to educate your sisters—and I hope they improve their opportunities as has my little Nora." A twinkle came into his eye. "By the way, there's another baby—came this morning."

Easter At St. Mary's. By Ruth P. Ford.

LOVE'S TRIUMPH.

"IT IS beautiful, Evelyn, the triumph of love is beautiful. We were all against the poor man at first, but our hearts were moved to rejoice with him—then to pity him—and then—"

Aunt Martha prefaced her story with these words, but before she finished speaking, some one from the house called her to the telephone. It was a lovely afternoon in May, and in the seclusion of the vine-covered summer-house she had begun to tell me of the minister's love affair, in which the whole town had been interested. It was my first visit to the South, and to Lynnville, my native village, in years, and Aunt Martha had many things to tell me. She returned in a moment, absorbed in thought, and began again.

"It was early in December when the new rector came, just a little more than a week after Joseph and I had celebrated our silver wedding. The latter event was on the twenty-third of November, you know."

I smiled as Aunt Martha mentioned the date.

"We didn't know anything about superstition when we selected that day, and so we have not held the date responsible for any of our troubles. They have been offset by our joys."

I didn't interrupt again, even by a look, for Aunt Martha was intent upon her story. In fact she lost herself in it as she used to long ago when she told me stories in my childhood.

"It was early in December, as I was saying, and Mr. Benson arrived on the morning train. Joseph had met him at the station, for he was to be our guest for a few days. As they came in the gate, I was standing by the flower pit, cutting some of the beautiful chrysanthemums left from my decorations. I had grown them in profusion for our wedding anniversary, and had a number of pots left over. I can't tell why I had an impulse to say to the minister, after we had stood admiring the flowers, 'I shall give you some for the rectory when you leave us,' except that I had shared them with other friends—and then I must have felt he needed flowers in his pathway.

"His answer to my proffered kindness was, 'How lovely, I wish Miss Andrews could see them.'

"Then a tell-tale flush spread over his face, as he realized he had perhaps said too much. And I saw trouble in store for the little flock at St. Mary's. We had secured a young man because the church could not afford to support a man of family. He was in love, of course, and a wedding would soon follow. We had had the experience more than once before, and had almost learned to expect it. My first feeling was one of indignation, as I contemplated the course young ministers invariably pursue—finish college, get a poor little struggling church, and then a wife. All this flashed through my mind in an instant. Then I thought of my recent anniversary, of another poor young man who finished years ago at a law school, and took him a wife very soon afterwards. The struggles and triumphs of our twenty-five years passed in swift review before my mind, and I could only sympathize with the minister. But he never knew the inward battle by which I was won to his cause. And by similar mental conflicts, no doubt, other members of the congregation were won, for all felt discouraged when it was whispered about that he was engaged. But the news leaked out that he was engaged to the daughter of Col. Andrews, a prominent and wealthy man of Templeton, which is the See city you know, and so near. Now, we smiled at the minister's frequent visits to the bishop.

"The litle flock felt encouraged. Their rector was to marry a rich girl, and all would go well. The church would not be taxed, and would not have to lose its minister. His love affair became the congregation's love affair. Every one took an interest in it, and looked forward eagerly to the coming of the bride.

"But among the whispers that reached us later was one to the effect that the father objected to his daughter's marrying a poor minister, so now we felt a pride in helping our minister to provide a home. The old rectory was inconveniently situated, so we sold it and bought the sweet little cottage near the church—the place adjoining us—for the rectory. Dear old Maj. Cowan, who owned the property, sold it to us for just what money we had. He has means, you know, and has done much for the church.

"Our guild members busied themselves furnishing the house and putting the place in order. How interested we became! We made improvements inside the house and out, and asked donations from every one who could give anything.

"But gradually a shadow came over the minister's face. He seemed sad and abstracted. We were much troubled over this turn of affairs, and questioned among ourselves, 'Could he be displeased with anything we had done?' We couldn't think so, for he expressed himself kindly. 'Was he tired of the little church, and longing to accept a call to a larger one?' No one dared ask him. 'Maybe his depression of spirit is due to the Lenten season,' some one suggested. So we planned a particularly pleasant meeting at the rectory soon after Easter. The day was cool, and we had a cheerful fire burning in the grate. We thought that by carrying the coals of our kindness to his own hearth, we would kindle a blaze that would thaw out the coldness in his heart. We couldn't believe the matter of any real consequence, yet it ought to be removed before the bride came. And the time of her coming was near.

"We thought the minister might want something done that had escaped us, and we would get near to him, win his confidence, and he would speak out. And, oh! Evelyn, he did speak out.

"We had a busy afternoon, inspecting every nook and cranny of the house, putting in place some pretty things that had not been shown before, and when everything was done, we served coffee and sandwiches.

"While Mr. Benson tried to be cheerful and agreeable, and to take an interest in what we were doing, we could see that he was deeply troubled, and he grew more depressed as the afternoon wore away. Finally, when we were nearly ready to leave, he went out of the room for a few minutes, and came back with an open letter in his hand. Pale and trembling, he paused by the center table and said 'Ladies, I wish to thank you from the bottom of my heart for all your interest and kindness, but it is due you to tell you—I have long tried to do so—that your work is useless, I am not going to be married.' Then he sank into the big chair by the table, and, dazed and pallid, read the note he was holding in his hand. It contained only a few words, but I can never forget them. They were just these: 'Dear Edward: I cannot marry you. Father is alone, and it is killing him. You must go now, and I must forget. Louise.'

"The letter dropped from his fingers. He buried his face in his hands and wept. We were speechless, astounded, and every one in tears. His grief was so silent, so manly, but oh! so touching. Some of the ladies slipped noiselessly by him, out of the room. Others, wiping their eyes, looked at each other with brave resolution, feeling they must stay to comfort the minister. Dear 'Mother Brown,' whom we call 'the church's godmother,' was the first to speak. She went up, and, laying her hand on his head, said: 'Son, be comforted, there is something better in store for you than this. Don't you know there is a way to work out every one of life's problems? Just look up and have faith.'

"His only response was a gentle pressure of the hand. Then the few of us remaining in the room gathered around him, and Evelyn, I am afraid we fairly chattered our sympathy. He looked up with the most appealing, agonized expression in his eyes, and then we understood all his strange conduct that was before misunderstood.

"Oh, dear friends, if the trouble were anything I could remedy, I would do so at once,' he said, 'but it is my poverty the father objects to. He is a proud, cold man, and even his daughter's happiness has less weight with him than his pride. He will never relent, and—I must endure.'

"He rose from his seat. We bade him good-by, expressing all the kindness and sympathy we could, and left the rectory with sad hearts.

"What more could we do? We had given all we had to spare, and had been so happy in the giving. Now what was it all for? The rectory, that we had taken such pleasure in turning into a dear home nest, was without a mistress, and the rector was broken-hearted.

"One morning two or three weeks later, the news spread through town that Mr. Benson had been called to Templeton. No one knew what the visit was for, but everybody was guessing. In a litle while Mrs. Stevens, the president of our Guild, called all the members by 'phone, and asked us to meet her at the rectory that afternoon, saying she had some news for us. Of course we conjectured that the father had relented, and given his consent to the marriage, so we went with light hearts to the meeting. But the joy was not unmixed with sadness.

"On leaving town, Mr. Benson had written a note to Mrs. Stevens, enclosing one from Miss Andrews. Her father had left home without bidding her good-by, but left a letter explaining that as he did not wish to stand in the way of her happiness, he would return to the haunts of his boyhood in Canada. He had lived there when a lad with relatives. He told her that while her marriage was the sorrow of his life, he wanted her to marry the man she loved. He was afraid that if she lived under the pressure of grief, she would die early, as her mother had.

"We were in great excitement that afternoon, wondering what the outcome of the visit would be, and half-fearing lest it should not be a happy one.

"But the next day Mrs. Stevens had this message: 'Please have the house ready. Louise and I will be home tonight.'

"They came, and the bride was given a warm welcome, but she was a sad bride. Her heart was heavy, and she had a troubled look.

"We learned from the rector that the bishop and Col. Andrews were friends from boyhood, and called each other familiarly by name, and that their wives had been girlhood friends. The rector was a young friend of the bishop's, whom the latter had influenced to go into the ministry, and often addressed as 'my own son in the faith.'

"The bishop approved of the marriage, and while he was much grieved at Col. Andrews's treatment of his daughter, he said 'Tom's wound would heal, and he would come to view the matter in the right light.' The girl was taken to the bishop's residence and mothered by her mother's old friend, when her father left her.

"The months passed calmly on in the village church affairs, the members doing all they could to make the minister and his wife happy, and to soothe her sorrow. We kept in close touch with her, and knew that her father did not write her, and that she had no hope of his changing his feelings toward her. She had written him, but her letters were returned unopened.

"The kind bishop had visited Col. Andrews during the summer, feeling his way toward bringing about a reconciliation, but soon found that the time had not come for this. So there was nothing to do but wait.

"The bishop had told him a secret, however, that made him uneasy. He remembered so vividly his wife's passing away at the birth of their only son, and his sorrow at the loss of the babe on whom he had counted so much.

"His heart was wrapped up in his daughter, and the truth was he would never have given her willingly to any one. He was very unhappy in his self-imposed exile, and his loving friend, the bishop, knowing this, was tactfully trying to lead him out of his wrong attitude into a forgiving frame of mind.

"Lent had come again, and toward the close the bishop had an unexpected call to an eastern city, but was to return to the cathedral for Easter. He let Col. Andrews know of his whereabouts, and of his intention to go home for Easter, hoping the colonel would go with him, and that when so near Louise, he could bring them together. He had no response for a few days, and then came this telegram: 'I'm heartsick, John; take me home to

When Spring Comes. By Neeta Marquis.

A FEBRUARY DAY.

WE KNEW it was going to be a delightsome journey, from the fact that Chloe was wearing a four-leafed [illegible] in her shoe, if for no other reason. [illegible] had found it in her lawn the night [illegible], and with careful foresight placed [illegible] the heel of her stout walking boot.

[illegible] Southern California spring comes to [illegible] mountains in December or January [illegible] the rains are kind. But this February [illegible] was only just now hanging the valen[illegible] of renewed leafage on the scrub oak, [illegible] of fuchsia-like blossoms on the wild [illegible]berry. The day started with blue and [illegible] in the violets and jonquils for sale [illegible] the street corners of the city as we [illegible] through, in the golden plumes of [illegible] bending under their weight of fragrant [illegible] pollen against the background of [illegible] mountains above Altadena, and in [illegible] soft blue smoky distances and the [illegible] sunshine filtering through the silver [illegible] mist.

[illegible] seemed strange to find evidences of [illegible] registered thus in the sumach. [illegible] not have believed that any of our [illegible] mountain growth would take Jack [illegible] jokes so seriously. The sumach, [illegible] divides the space on foothills and [illegible] slopes with the sage, buckthorn, [illegible] oak, holly and manzanita, is usually [illegible] which gives most color to the [illegible] springtime, tipping its heavy-pointed [illegible] with deep glowing reds which are [illegible]active. But now the bushes stood [illegible] from their closest neighbors, [illegible] to a dry yellow which bordered [illegible] dusty ochre than warm chrome. [illegible] as if flame had coursed through all [illegible] veins, sapping the life, but leaving [illegible] unconcerned.

[illegible] was only the second time in seven [illegible] that I had taken time for an [illegible] junket, and the trail felt good [illegible] my feet. I imagine I should like [illegible] moccasins instead of heavy-soled [illegible] when traveling thus, if I were only [illegible] to it. There must be a sense of [illegible] with the ground and all the multi[illegible] forces it genders in spring in hav[illegible] feet press close and pliantly against [illegible] contours, in knowing without looking [illegible] differing qualities of the soil trod[illegible], in sensing deliciously the spring[illegible] of the moss in damp places, and let[illegible] the delicate nerves of touch thrill [illegible] messages of understanding to the [illegible] consciousness.

[illegible] trail, lying on the south side of [illegible] mountain, was baked hard and dry, re[illegible] as the rains were. It seemed a long [illegible] to the ridge. Our muscles were soft [illegible] neglect of climbing ways, and our [illegible] was not all diaphragmatic. We [illegible] to rest at intervals more frequent [illegible] approved of, or stood with our [illegible] to the mountains, looking off toward [illegible] ranges of La Crescenta, the dis[illegible] shoreline veiled in fog, or far [illegible] to two remote peaks which lay [illegible] above a sea of haze mixed with [illegible] of city smoke. There in the still[illegible] of the mountainside we heard bird [illegible] in solo and chorus. One agitated [illegible] was evidently scolding his wife for [illegible] to flirt with some handsome stranger. [illegible] now! Quit it now—now—now!" [illegible] reiterate in tones of conjugal ex[illegible].

[illegible] on the trail to Chaney's Camp, [illegible] could not see as yet around the [illegible] of the mountain whose arm we [illegible] climbing up; but above, on a higher [illegible] of the ridge, Camp Sierra appeared, [illegible] patch of canvas, and on above it [illegible] of summit, although separated [illegible] by a chasm of canyon invisible to [illegible], and the circular bridge of the Mt. [illegible]. Soon we passed the scat[illegible] group of rude shelters comprising [illegible]. Glancing in at the open door of [illegible] tenthouses, we saw an old man [illegible] kneading a batch of bread. This [illegible] to the fact that it was near[illegible] and that the hunger which lies in ambush along all trails in the open was about to claim us for its own.

We took one last look out across the wide, mysteriously veiled valley, which we would not see again that day from so great a point of vantage, then off to the north, where a gap in the nearer blue mountains showed peaks of a paler tint which must have been as far away as the Tejunga.

Then we turned to where the trail branched off from the one leading up to Camp Sierra, and plunged into a dim, cool, ferny and mossy way cut in the north side of the great mountain which hung like a narrow shelf high above beautiful Millard Canyon.

It was when we topped the ridge on which Chaney's is situated that the sound of the big stream flowing down Millard Canyon struck upon our delighted ears. I wonder if in all nature there is any more alluring sound than the call of waters? It was probably the first music that broke the divine stillness of Eden. It is woven into the fairy lore of all languages, and its own speech being universally understood, it sings the same songs to the hearts of all men. And man in his turn has sought to reproduce it in his own way by a multiplicity of devices. I never hear the brave dashing song of a mountain stream such as this that I am not reminded of Schumann-Heink's organ-like voice pouring out the melody of Schubert's "Wohin?"—Whither?—with its ceaseless ripple of accompaniment:

> "Ich hoert' ein Baechlein rauschen
> Wohl aus dem Felsenquell."

That song embodies both the sound and the philosophy of the happy, singing, vivacious brook in the mountains.

We quickened our pace in response to the sound of the brook now, thrilling in every nerve with such joyful anticipation as none can know except those who first pay the price of the earlier toil in the sun and heat. There was recreative power in the sweet clamor of the water below and in the increasing variety of the greener, fresher, springier growth on this new trail, damp to the foot and cool to the grateful body.

Thick moss with a sheen like gold mantled the rocks. Gold backs and coffee ferns clung to the walls near it. Holly bushes appeared bearing clusters of small green berries, evidently unaware that the Christmas season was past and forgotten for another year. Towering spruce trees, shimmering green in the upper branches, but with bare broken tusk-like projections below, told us how truly we had penetrated to the high mountains.

The gray of wild lilac, or buckthorn, shrubs almost matched the gray of fleshy-leafed manzanita, except for the polished mahogany stem of the latter. With her love of scientific exactness, Chloe told me that the botanical name for wild lilac is ceanothus. I don't know by what possible chance I happen to remember it. Along in April this plant will be blue with feathery bloom, and make the mountains smell sweeter than "ceanothus" could ever hope to sound in all the length of its botanical career. We found little green "hen and chickens" nesting in crevices of the rocks. These were so numerous that we looked around for egg-plant, also, but none discovered itself to us.

The trail narrowed in places to five or six inches, winding in and out half-way down the canyon side. We halted as we rounded one point and another, to look down and marvel over the beauty below us. It was two years, lacking two months, since we had traversed this fascinating way. On that former time, the trees filling the canyon bottom were so full of leaf that their mass was impenetrable from above. Now, however, alders, maples and cottonwoods were bare. Only the perennial white oaks and dark glossy bays spread their green below us, and through the graceful unclothed limbs of the other trees we could see plainly the clear brown water of the stream, slipping over gravel and gray pebbles or dashing itself against obstructing boulders.

Just to stand still and look down on this canyon world, shut off from the world of men in a paradise all its own, shimmering in the soft spring sunshine which poured from a forget-me-not sky as if into a cup made for the holding of peace and beauty, was enough to deepen all one's conception of the goodness of living. Spring in these mountains and canyons never fails to bring me bits of the "Vision of Sir Launfaul," for

> "Whether we look, or whether we listen,
> We hear life's murmur or see it glisten.
> Every clod feels a stir of might,
> An instinct within it which reaches and > towers,
> Till, groping above it blindly for light,
> It climbs to a soul in grass and flowers."

According to that, there were a myriad little new souls gathered around our feet on that very trail, in the tender grass, the frail ferns, the lovely light green miner's lettuce; while down below, the full-grown souls of the alders and sycamores were showing evidences of new activity in golden tassels and greening twigs.

The patience of the seed that gropes for the light until it finds it; the perseverance of the sap that pushes and tugs and pulls through every fiber of the tree until it achieves a self-expression in bud and leaf—how these put to shame the little virtues and small attainments upon which we mortals are more than prone to felicitate ourselves!

Nothing here in the canyon showed the blight of frost such as had marred the exposed side of the mountain. This was a "garden barred," where the course of growing nature, uninterfered with, ran serenely on.

When we had finally made our delicious way down to the floor of it—partially by sliding upon small avalanches of the damp soft loam of the mountainside—we chose a sunny spot by the stream in which to give ourselves the very human and altogether welcome pleasure of eating our lucheon. The canyon was all ours. Not a soul had we seen since the old man away back at Chaney's.

The air was chilly if one remained quiet in the shade. Our nook was partly under a bay tree filled with pale gold blossoms set in close bunches against the glossy dark leaves of pungent scent. Maple and sycamore leaves, red and bronze in tone, made soft cushions among the stones and over the damp sands. The stream, dammed up just here by a fallen log and banks of the sodden leaves, made a beautiful pool. The water was so clear and the colors at the bottom were so varied—leaves of differing shape and color, stones and rock formations of still other strong hues—that it was quite like having a marine garden all our own to enjoy.

And oh, the zest of eating good, satisfying food out in the midst of such stimulating, vital beauty! One of the most grateful sensations in the whole realm of sense is to feel keen hunger and to appease it with wholesome things.

All the nerve weariness I had brought from town, the accumulation of rushed and illogically crowded days ever since Christmas, went farther from my presence with each quiet moment spent there by the stream, until, luncheon over, I spread my haversack on the soft brown leaves for a mattress, laid out a clean paper bag for a pillow, pulled my sweater over my shoulders, propped my hat over my eyes, and gave myself to the complete relaxation of sleep, lulled by the song of the water, and warmed by the soft coverlid of the afternoon sunshine.

When we sat up, we saw that high, far fog was blowing like smoke across the strip of blue visible above the canyon walls, so we decided to begin our course down stream, by which the homeward road lay. An adjusting of hat pins, a glance into the femininely-indispensable pocket mirror, the swinging of a haversack and a kodak strap over our respective shoulders, and we were once more fresh for journeying.

Past cataract after cataract, where more fallen trees and accumulated leaves formed dams, leaping from rock to rock we went down stream. Again I wished for moccasins on my feet, that I might cling more surely to the smooth, slippery surface of the great stones which formed so large a part of our path.

We gathered sprays from the bay trees with their pale gold blossoms nestling amid the glossy leaves, and beautiful branches of the wild gooseberry, whose thorny stems dripped with little fuchsia-like flowers in white and maroon. These latter flowers were fragrant as wild honey, but delicate enough for Titania's toilet table. On some of the shrubs the furry green berries had already formed. We hadn't the heart to pluck any of the infant ferns starting up beside the path, though there were bits of maidenhair among them.

Past pool after pool we found our way leading, then in placid stretches the stream curled quietly over golden gravel and red leaves. Again memory's door opened to its knock, and I found myself trying to hum the beautiful bass aria from the "Creation," part of which reiterates through florid cadence after cadence the words:

> "Softly purling, glides on > Through silent vales the limpid brook."

Only two phrases of the music would come back to me, but the voice I used to hear singing it re-echoed in the tones of the brook there at my feet.

We came to where we heard the roar of the big falls of the canyon. We were above them, but the stream bed had grown so wild and forbidding that the trail had to leave it and skirt the canyon wall again. In vain we essayed to make our way to where the waters tipped over the steep drop, but had to abandon the effort and follow the trail.

When we reached the canyon floor again we retraced the up-stream way, led by the sound of the falls, until, as we cautiously crossed from rock to rock around a sudden bend, we came upon them, in a rocky chamber all to themselves—a white streak of water sliding with wonderful swiftness down about thirty feet of almost perpendicular rock. The chamber of the falls was cylindrical in form. The afternoon sunlight came clear of the trees just there, lighting up the grotto with a soft brightness.

It was about a mile and a half below here that the sentient quiet of our great canyon teeming with growing things was disturbed by the sound of barking dogs. I was filled with inward dismay. I would choose to meet a rattlesnake any time rather than an irritable dog. The rattlesnake is a purely defensive fighter, while the dog—well, one never knows what a dog is going to do.

Two boisterous animals soon burst upon our vision, ramping toward us with challenging voices, but welcoming tails. They crossed the stream to meet us, leaping safely and daintily from rock to rock. One proved to be a mere puppy, and one of the most attractive, lovable little shaggy fellows that we had ever seen, with wonderful eyes and a merry countenance

Here were two tenthouses revealed to view, with a buckboard, various screens, tables and chairs outside, and a very masculine laundry on the clothes line—two pink shirts and a blue one. Besides the dogs, the wild animals in sight were a couple of burros, browsing white goat, and a man.

The man sat at a large table with his back toward the trail. He had a heap of cut ferns—large lacy brakes—in front of him, which he was carefully trimming and packing together as if for shipment. He did not look up, more than to give the dogs a fleeting glance from the tail of his eye, as we passed. The dogs sped the parting, as they had welcomed the coming, guests, going with us as far as the next crossing of the stream, where they left us and returned to camp.

Stillness fell gradually about us once again. We came to wider open spaces green under foot with fine new grass. The sunlight came through the wide-spread branches of big canyon oaks. New shoots of blackberry vine showed beside the water.

Our trail had long since widened to a road, and several unoccupied camp bungalows showed that the invasion of the summer settler with his goods and chattels had already doomed the lower canyon to exploitation. It made us sad, not only with the selfish sadness of the pioneer who is loth to lose one iota of his earlier isolation and freedom, but with the deeper sadness the reverent must always feel at the entering of the money-changer into the temple.

Then the road deviated from the stream, climbed the canyonside and led us into the valley road, paved with asphalt and traversed by the superficial sightseer in an automobile.

Then the sun dropped lower and changed the gray mists in the west to a bank of rose and lavender. The decorative eucalyptus loomed black against this color, so clear that the articulation of twig and leaf was apparent. And into that color we went, toward the west, where home lay.

The Greater Patriot.

ONE of the eloquent Bourke Cockran's best St. Patrick's Day stories concerns two Irishmen, Tim and Pat.

Tim and Pat were congratulating themselves upon their nationality.

"Well," said Tim, "if I wasn't an Irishman, I guess I'd wish to be an American."

"A good wish, Tim, my boy," said Pat. "But, faith, if I was not an Irishman, I'd wish I was one."

A Startled Guest.

"BOOTH TARKINGTON, now that he has returned to novel writing, is more celebrated and more beloved than ever. At the same time——"

The speaker, a magazine editor, chuckled and resumed: "Imagine my horror when, at a tea at the Colony Club in Madison avenue, I heard a young matron, a very pretty and elegant young matron, say:

"'Tarkington behaved so abominably at my luncheon! After the oysters he suddenly took a dislike to the butler and the two serving maids. He actually flew at them. He wouldn't let them come near the table. If they ventured to try, he growled dreadfully.

"'But there was a platter of cold quail on the sideboard that happened to catch Tark's eye. He seized two of the birds and stalked sullenly off with them to the drawing-room, where he ate them, seated on the floor. He left the bones scattered all over our best Kirmanshah rug. Did you ever hear of anything so awful?'"

Here the magazine editor laughed again.

"It took me a minute or two to grasp the fact," he explained, "that this charming lady had named her dog Tarkington in honor of our prose master."

The Blessing of Contentment.

CHARLES TELLIER, the inventor of cold storage, was banqueted in Paris at the age of 85 years.

"Tellier," said a New York correspondent, "has now been granted a pension, but up to now he was poor almost to the starvation point. He could not even afford cold-storage food.

"I interviewed him on his poverty, and he lit up the interview with an epigram.

"'I was never really unhappy,' he said, 'for I learned the lesson of contentment. Contentment, you know, is being satisfied with what you haven't got.'"

Away Too Much.

MISS MARY GARDEN was asked the other day if she thought outdoor exercise was good for women.

"Yes, I do," Miss Garden answered, "provided a golden mean is maintained. Under-exercise has wrecked countless women's digestions. Over-exercise has wrecked countless women's homes."

Going Half Way.

RUTGERS JEWETT, the literary adviser, was urging a young novelist to take up his residence in New York.

"Come to New York," he said, "and then, in every emergency, the publishers and magazine editors can turn to you.

"Men continually tell me," Mr. Jewett continued, "that things never come their way. I feel like shouting in reply:

"'But why not try putting yourself in the right place?'"

Nothing in It—But Money.

THE late Charles Major, author of "When Knighthood was in Flower," was a sincere if not a very subtle writer, and he had no patience with the literary trickster.

Mr. Major, at a dinner in Shelbyville, once condemned the literary trickster with the epigram:

"You can fool some of the people all of the time—but when you consider what kind of people they are, does it really seem worth while?"

The Trend in Fiction.

JUDGE BEN B. LINDSEY, at a dinner in Denver, discussed with no little scorn the "white slave" novel that is now the fashion.

"The publishers are crazy for white-slave yarns," he said. "Anyone who wants to get printed need only write a novel about white slaves, and he is sure to find a ready publisher.

"It is like the story about Penn. Penn said to a publisher's reader:

"'I've written a novel 300,000 words in length.'

"'It is long,' the reader objected.

"'But it's as broad as it's long,' said Penn.

"'Then send it in,' said the reader eagerly, and we'll give you a 30 per cent. royalty and $10,000 advance.'"

Takes No Vacation.

APROPOS of a gold-mounted electrical massage machine worth $40,000 that occupies the dressing-room of a New York woman's house, Miss Mary Garden said:

"Undoubtedly a rich woman can look younger than she really is. What with Turkish and Russian baths, open-air exercise in abundance, temperance in eating and drinking, massage and so forth, a woman can, to a remarkable degree, preserve her figure and her complexion."

She smiled, then added:

"But the trouble with fighting time is that time works twenty-four hours a day."

A Brilliant Financial Coup.

CHAIRMAN PUJO of the now famous committee was condemning, at a dinner in Washington, certain market-rigging tactics.

"These tactics," he said, "remind me of Gobsa Golde. Gobsa in his younger days was a shoe salesman in the West, and once the stage coach he was traveling in was held up by a band of robbers.

"All the passengers, Gobsa included, were made to elevate their hands above their heads, and then one robber went through their pockets while the rest of the band covered them with revolvers.

"When the robber came to Gobsa Golde, the millionaire-to-be said hurriedly:

"'Excuse me—just a minute, Mr. Road Agent.'

"And he took out his wallet, drew a $10 bill from it, and, extending the bill to the fellow-passenger next after him in line, he said:

"'Here's that ten I borrowed from you yesterday, Smithers.'"

Ignorant, But Ready.

VINCENT ASTOR, at a luncheon in New York, was congratulated upon the model farm of 6000 acres that he is establishing on his Rhinebeck estate.

"I am going to devote myself to the development of New York agriculture," Mr. Astor said; "but of course, at the present time, I'm as ignorant of farming as the 'longshoreman was of seamanship.

"A 'longshoreman, you know, borrowed an able seaman's discharge papers during a strike, and enlisted on a full-rigged ship.

"On his first watch on deck the order rang out: 'Haul in the jib!' and the 'longshoreman in his ignorance tore aft like the wind.

"Abaft the wheel he ran foul of the captain, who roared:

"'Didn't you hear the order? You don't expect to find the jibboom jutting out from the stern, do you?'

"The 'longshoreman pulled his forelock as he had seen old shellbacks do.

"'How was I to know?' he said. 'Different ships, different customs.'"

For Paddy's Day.

THERE is a story, appropriate to St. Patrick's Day, about Henry Labouchere.

"Labouchere, the editor of Truth, led a wild and harum-scarum life in his youth, and often would find himself without a cent.

"While an attache of the British Embassy, young Labouchere one day turned up hungry and penniless in New York. At noon, with his usual reckless daring, he entered a Broadway chop-house—one Muldoon's—and ordered a modest meal. But he had no idea how he would pay for this meal. Perhaps he would leave his hat or boots in pledge for it. As he pondered the matter he noticed that the waiters, who were staring at him oddly, were all Irishmen. Were the waiters aware of his lack of funds? His luncheon seemed strangely long in coming. But just then a waiter bent over him and whispered:

"I beg pardon, sir; but are you the patriot Meagher?"

Now Meagher, Labouchere knew, had aided Smith O'Brien in his Irish rising, had been deported to Austria, and had escaped thence to New York. The ready young man, in answer to the waiter's question, put his forefinger upon his lip. "Hush," he murmured. And he looked round the room cautiously.

It was at once felt that Labouchere was the patriot Meagher. And so the choicest wines were set before him, and, in place of the modest chop he had ordered, a luncheon of nine or ten elaborate courses was brought on.

At the end, lighting one of the establishment's finest cigars, Labouchere demanded his bill. His waiter smiled, retired, and soon came back with a big, handsome man—the proprietor himself. The proprietor, bending over the youth, said earnestly:

"From one like you, a sufferer in the good cause, I can take no money. It has been a privilege to serve you, sir. Permit a brother patriot to shake you by the hand."

And Labouchere shook hands with the proprietor and with the dozen waiters, and stalked forth into the cold world with the stern, sad, but indomitable look which it seemed to him that an exiled patriot should wear.

Pop Was Out.

"NO, the shoe is on the wrong foot—absolutely on the wrong foot."

The speaker was Senator Gronna of North Dakota. He was arguing a tariff clause.

"Yes," he continued, "our friends are as mistaken in this matter as the little lady from the Middle West. A little lady from the Middle West, on her return from a winter on the Riviera, was recounting to a friend the delights of Nice.

"'And did you visit Monte Carlo?' her friend asked.

"'No, I didn't,' she replied. 'Pop called on him, though. But, judging from pop's disappointed look when he got back to the hotel, I guess Monty must have been out.'" of the darkness of the night comes the voice of a sweet singer. You may heard it as you fell asleep that you may hear it as you awake the morning, and all through the day the will swell out joyously on the passing, and likely it will be the same singer, that tireless songster, the of the birds of our Southwest- mocking bird. During his singing you may well wonder when he gets or when he sleeps, for his song ever sounding. You will see him in on the highest point, on the tallest tree, pouring out his very ecstasy of sweetest melody. His of song is not very extensive of some variety. He is an im- an imitator of no mean ability. the practice of this talent of his he deceive even those familiar with. Sometimes he will lead you to that a child is crying in distress or is calling. His imitation of the the quail given to the scattered correct and deceiving as are other imitations. At times he is a plain and his loud "Cheep-up cheep-up" is accompanied by a quick motion of his long. He is the same bird in song and as the mocker of the Southeast, but he has a somewhat longer tail. Southwest he makes his home he will remain throughout the there are that complain that them awake at night, but one imagine that there were other to which they might attribute their It would seem as if the coming out of the night might more in the nature of a benefaction denied sleep and to the watchers night, than an annoyance to be deplored and complained of.

Our Feathered Songsters. By Frederick R. Miner.

WEALTH OF BIRDS.

song is there than that of the yellow-breasted singer whose profruit diet makes him an outlaw. principally a fruitarian and for that is considered an enemy of the and consequently he is re- the protection of the law. The linthere are other offenders in this not content to finish his meal piece of fruit or return to the another meal but he will peck fresh fruit and then go on and take a bite at that. Followthe bees who find the pieces of the fruit has been broken they feast to repletion. Occapicking peaches you may grasp to be a fine large peach only you have a handful of bees for as the fruit has been hollowed out from the other side leaving but a shell of skin which is filled with the busy insects. It is a pity that the linnet has this strong propensity for fruit, as his song is profuse, cheerful and melodious, and there are a great many of them in the Southwest.

Another sweet singer who has come at times under the ban of the law but is now protected—although the question is still debated and undecided as to whether the grain he eats is compensated for by the good he does—is the meadow lark. May the lawmakers refrain for all time from changing the law that protects the meadow lark and may the silvery note that comes from his golden throat never be silenced by man's machinations. His song is very sweet and cheery, although short, scarcely more than a call. No bird notes are there more significant of the out-of-doors than the meadow lark's. And they are heard at all seasons. They seem symbols of our three great gifts, the sun, the air, and the earth. One might close his eyes and, hearing the song of the meadow lark, he could see in his mind's eye the sun glinting across the meadows, where the lark makes his home, the breeze stirring the grasses of the lowland, with the blue sky over all. You will come upon him in the lowlands and the meadows, among the grasses or in the stubble of the open fields where he is busily picking up the grain that was left by the reapers. He may start up suddenly directly under foot, for he is friendly and unafraid in places where he has been unmolested. His flight is clumsy, as he is a large bird about the size of a dove, and his wings do not appear large enough for him. He wears a mottled brown coat with yellow breast slashed by one black stripe.

One would think that the oriole's possession of the beautiful coat of orange and black that is ever his, and the ability to make one of the most beautiful and interesting swinging nests imaginable, would be gift enough for one small bird, yet he is doubly blessed in possession also of a very sweet song. Parenthetically, one can but wish that there were more synoyms for the word "sweet" while attempting to describe the song of the birds, for it applies to them more fittingly than any other.

Song-sparrows are here as well as in most other parts of our country and their songs, although not loud nor insistent, add materially to the chorus of those of the other joyful feathered singers. The small, wild canary is commonly seen flitting about among the trees like animated bits of sunshine. He is smaller than the caged canary but his songs are varied and charming. A singer of modesty of mien and raiment—he wears a quiet brown—is the thrush who sings from his hidden retreat in the brush as the sun is leaving the earth to the twilight and the darkness. His song is refined, mellifluous and animated. The ubiquitous robin, the bird beloved by all, is of course with us and his loud, cheerful notes are heard in all parts of our Southwest. His sweet song has so long been associated with such occasions that when we hear it at other times we are reminded of the time immediately following the cessation of the rainstorm, when the sun has come from behind the clouds and the earth is drenched and sweet-smelling and the air is fresh and pure. We find him nearly everywhere we go and are always glad to see him. He seems to fight rather shy of the more civilized places in the Southwest, preferring the wilder regions, which is contrary to his eastern custom. From among the tall trees—in the canyon or along the stream usually—comes the plaintive call of the mourning-dove, sweet and low as one would expect from that gentle, retiring bird.

There are a great many species of songbird in our Southwestland and a great many members of each. It would require a good-sized volume to describe their songs and themselves and at all do them justice. Their songs greet us from all sections and from all sorts of places. Far away in the mountains some of them roam, living in the high altitudes among the pines and along the streams and waterfalls. Here we find our old friend, the robin, and many another. And here that wonderful bird that you will not find away from the mountain-stream, the water ousel, who sings in fair weather and in foul, ever sweetly, always cheerfully, never fault-finding or complaining. In the canyons the birds sing their matinal songs long before the morning sun penetrates the depths of the canyon, and sing their vesper songs as the sun again leaves them to the darkness and the night. In the fields the cheery meadow lark, song-sparrows, bluebirds and others, fling to the breeze their full throated songs. Even out on the desert where one would scarcely expect a bird song, the sage-thrasher, the song-sparrow, and other brave singers cheer the waste places with joyous song. Song seems to be a part of the bird nature and those birds not blessed with what one could not by the greatest stretch of the imagination call a song seem to strive after it as best they can with their calls, their notes, their twitterings, and their guttural sounds. It would be difficult to imagine what the world would be like without the birds and their beautiful songs. What would fill the void of the songless fields and woods? The wildwood would be weirdly silent, strangely quiet without them. We welcome thankfully the joyous songs of the birds, their sweet notes, their cheery calls. Even the clamor of the jay, the harsh call of the woodpecker, the hubbub of the magpie, the raucous outcry of the crow, and many another bird note or call, though lacking in any semblance of song or melody, we welcome as adding life and piquancy to the woods and fields.

Colloidal Gold.

[London Morning Post:] If suitable electric means are applied, a piece of gold can be torn to fragments so fine that they remain suspended in the liquid where they are formed. This is the way in which colloidal gold is prepared, and colloidal gold is almost like a sticky fluid. It is a preparation which has remarkable properties, and Zsgismondy, after preparing it, thus describes its appearance when he first saw it through his ultra-microscope: "The small gold particles no longer float—they move, and that with astonishing rapidity. A swarm of dancing gnats in a sunbeam will give one an idea of the motion of the gold particles in the hydrosol (solution) of gold. They hop, dance, jump, dash together and fly away from each other, and they flash with color. This motion gives an indication of the continuous mixing up of the fluid, and it lasts hours, weeks, months, and if the fluid is stable, even years." The movements Zsgismondy thus describes are not oscillating movements merely; the smallest particles move from a hundred to a thousand times their own diameter in the eighth of a second; the oscillatory movements are slower. In these particles we seem to approach as near as we are likely to attain to seeing molecules, for it is suspected that some of the particles may be of no greater mass than a few hundred molecules. What their shape may be is a disputed question.

Several physicians have attempted to estimate it by the wave length of the light they absorb, but Zsgismondy deprecates these estimates on the ground that green, red and yellow particles appear to him to occur in various sizes and stages of subdivision. Prof. Gans, however, from other considerations, has come to the conclusion that most solutions of colloidal gold have particles which are spherical in shape. Some exceptional solutions of colloidal gold in which the color is blue are probably made up of particles which are egg-shaped.

The Phrase "Home Rule."

[New York Sun:] In view of the passage of the Home Rule Bill by the House of Commons it is interesting to recall the beginning of that movement. According to Barry O'Brien, author of "The Life of Charles Stewart Parnell," it was at a meeting at the Bilton Hotel, Dublin, in 1870, that the movement was launched, and it was Isaac Butt, counsel for the Fenian prisoners, who invented the phrase "home rule." He thought these words reasonable and innocent, while the old cry of "repeal" would frighten the English.

IMPARTIAL REVIEWS BY WILLARD HUNTINGTON WRIGHT.

EXCELLENT SATIRE.

A CHRISTMAS GARLAND. By Max Beerbohm. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

GOOD satire is a rare literary bird. Alas, that we have not more of it in this country! But it will come when we are more sophisticated, when we have mastered the lesser arts, when we have outgrown our provincial self-conscientiousness and hyper-sensitiveness, and are able to look upon life and ourselves with understanding eyes. Satire is essentially the product of culture, for it is, in one of its principal phases, a burlesque of culture, and until we have genuine culture, we are sensitive of any criticism of our actions. Then again, an intellectual capacity of high order is needed for the attainment of this most difficult of the literary arts. There have been several attempts in America at satire, but in nearly every successful instance the author who has wrestled with this form of writing has had temperamental affinities with the Continentalists. I am thinking now particularly of Henry L. Mencken's "The Artist." Mencken is more Teutonic than Saxon, and his German blood and temperament give him those qualities which fit him for satire.

The greatest living satirist in England today is Max Beerbohm. When his novel, "Zuleika Dobson," was printed in this country, I tentatively made this assertion, and I find now, that on the publication of his second book in America—"A Christmas Garland," this idea seems to be gaining a foothold among the more discerning critics. It is interesting to note that only one copy of "Zuleika Dobson" was sold in Los Angeles. Yet here was perhaps the one modern satirical masterpiece in our language.

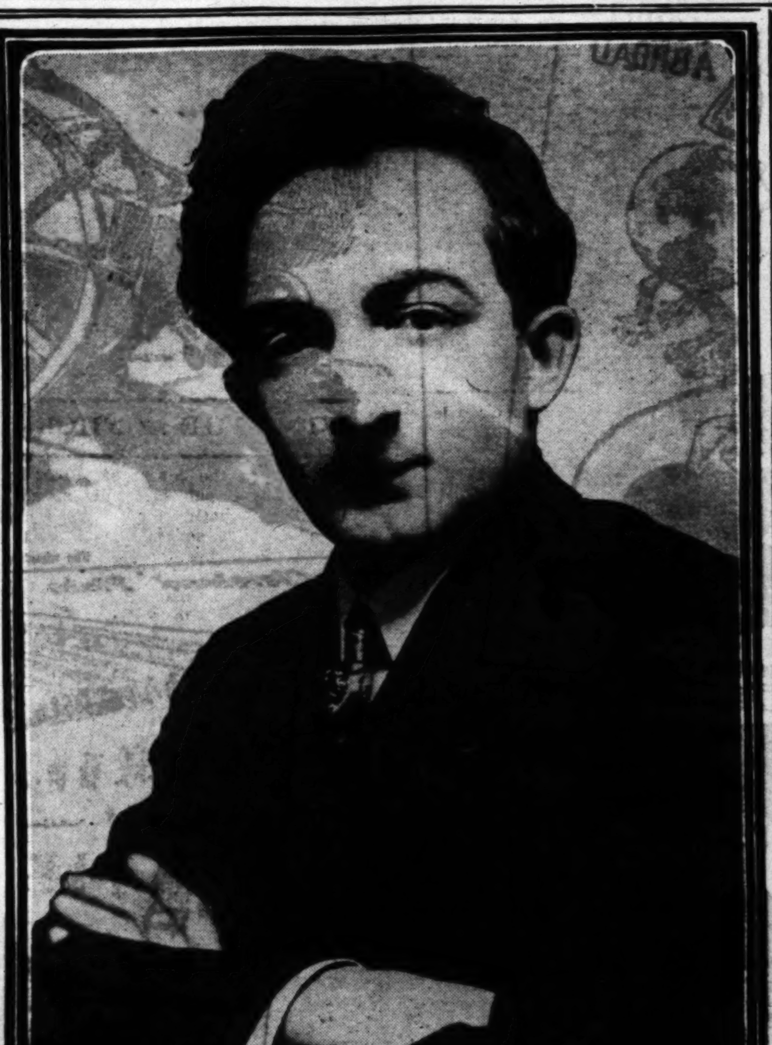
It is with the hope that more than one copy of "A Christmas Garland" will be sold in Los Angeles that I am devoting this space to it. The book is deserving of recognition—even of popularity. It is the raciest and most pointed bit of literary artistry of the season. What Max has attempted to do in this book has been attempted 100 times before by lesser men, but in every previous instance the result has been a burlesque and not a satire, and there is a vast difference between these two forms of literature.

Taking seventeen well-known writers, Max has written an essay on each, satirizing their different styles. To obviously accomplish this feat is not a difficult matter. Anyone, perhaps, who has read these writers is capable of giving an imitation of them. But to reflect their subtleties and nuances, to catch the temperamental spirit of these writers, to reflect their innermost processes of thought, and yet at the same time to ridicule their idiosyncrasies is the most difficult of literary stunts. Yet this is what Max has done, and has done it with sheer artistry, with subtle and telling strokes. The result is that we have before us some of the most delicate literary caricatures in the language.

His first imitation is Henry James. Every one imagines that to imitate Henry James is to write a sentence of two pages, full of conjunctions, interpolations, apologies, reiterations and parentheses. But this is the obvious thing to do, and after all it is merely an external and physical phase of Henry James, whose style is simply a reflection of his mental processes. When Max satirizes him he catches the internal workings of this expatriated American, which is really the cause of which his style is but the effect. As a matter of fact, the sentences used by Beerbohm in this satire are not particularly long, but the ratiocinations, as brought out in the essay are replete in those psychological circumlocutions which have made Henry James at once the delight and the despair of the critics.

Then comes a short story by Kipling, so close to that gentleman's style and so accurate in the atmosphere it reflects that nine out of ten magazines would have paid $1000 for the story as an original.

Then our amiable and maundering friend, A. C. Benson. Here is delicious pseudo-introspection in "Out of Harm's Way." What could be more subtly imitative of Benson's style than the following: "And even, once more in his rooms, with the curtains drawn and the candles lit, he would turn to his book shelves and choose from among them some old book that he knew and loved, or maybe some quite new book by that writer whose works were most dear to him because in them he seemed always to know so precisely what the author would say next, and because he found in their fine-spun repetitions a singular repose, a sense of security, and earnest of calm and continuity, as though he were reading over again one of those wise copy-books that he had so loved in boyhood, or were listening to the sounds made on a piano by some modest, very conscientious young girl with a pale red pigtail, practicing her scales, very gently, hour after hour, next door."



T. EVERETT HARRE, AUTHOR OF "THE ETERNAL MAIDEN."

H. G. Wells follows with the twentieth chapter of "Perkins and Mankind;" and then our old friend, G. K. Chesterton, on "Some Damnable Errors About Christmas." It is a satire on that fat Mullah, which in many respects is a better piece of paralogy than Chesterton himself has written in some time. Here is an exquisite bit culled from the peroration: "I look for the time when we shall wish one another a Merry Christmas every morning; when roast turkey and plum-pudding shall be the staple of our daily dinner, and the holly shall never be taken down from the walls, and everyone will always be kissing everyone else under the mistletoe. And what is right as regards Christmas is right as regards all other so-called anniversaries. The time will come when we shall dance around the Maypole every morning before breakfast—a meal at which hot-cross buns will be a standing dish—and shall make April fools of one another every day before noon. The profound significance of All Fools Day—the glorious lesson that we are all fools—is too apt at present to be lost. Nor is justice done to the sublime symbolism of Shrove Tuesday—the day on which all sins are shriven. Every day pancakes shall be eaten, either before or after the plum-pudding. They shall be eaten slowly and sacramentally. They shall be fried over fires tended and kept ever bright by Vestals. They shall be tossed to the stars."

Thomas Hardy's "A Sequelula to 'The Dynasts'" is as good and I have no doubt as sincere as the original.

Frank Harris, that diverting Shakespearean playboy, is ridiculed in an essay called "Shakespeare and Christmas," and it is proved from Shakespeare's own writings that he hated Christmas.

Arnold Bennett, the abrogated literary fashion in America, writes through Beerbohm two chapters called "Scruts."

Then comes a subtle parody on John Galsworthy and one on G. S. Street, a conventional English essayist whom I detest in the original, but enjoyed in the pseudo-original.

The most difficult undertaking that Max had in this book was to satirize Conrad, for Conrad is not a stylist, but a man of subtle vehemence. The spirit of Conrad's writing is an intangible thing; it approaches that quality which we speak of as genius, and as such is difficult to imitate. Yet Max has done a good piece of work here.

Edmund Gosse and Hilaire Belloc follow.

Then we have a preface to "St. George; a Christmas Play," written by the august George Bernard Shaw, whose success has been due to his ability to state the obvious in the terms of the scandalous. Here is the opening: "Flatly, I stole this play. The one valid excuse for the theft would be mental starvation. That excuse I shan't plead. I could have made a dozen better plays than this out of my own head. You don't suppose Shakespeare was so vacant in the upper story that there was nothing for it but to rummage through cinquencento romances, Townley Mysteries, and such-like insanitary rubbish order that he might fish out enough for his artistic fangs to fasten pend on it, there were plenty of original notions seething behind ble brow. Why didn't our them? He was too lazy. And so It is easier to give a new twist one else's story that you take ready than to perform that highly- form of skilled labor which ing artistic coherence to a story have conceived roughly for yourself

One of the best satires of the the one on Maurice Hewlett called Hearts Askew," and following this Max's masterpiece, a sketch by Moore entitled "Dickens." I would quote from this, but if I start I finish it, and so I leave it for reader. It alone is worth the price of book; in fact, the price of the tion.

BOOK NEWS.

Every little while the human race learns that some new discovery it has made has long been the instinctive property of animals. This is the case with many of our modern educational theories. Froebel was one of the first to show that the play of children could be used for educative effect and Montessori with her new methods has gone even further along the same idea. It is, therefore, interesting to read in "The Childhood of Animals," by Dr. Chalmers Mitchell, published this spring by Stokes, that the play of young animals is almost entirely educative in effect. The ways in which this play relates itself to the problems of life make a very interesting study when compared with advance in modern education.

"The Critic in the Orient" is the title of a book of travel impressions by George Hamlin Fitch, literary editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, and the author of "Comfort Found in Good Old Books," and "Modern English Books of Power." Mr. Fitch recently made a tour of the world and this is the first of the two volumes in which he recalls his impressions. The chapters of this first volume cover Japan, China, the Straits Settlements, India and Egypt. The book will be illustrated in novel style. A section of plates is to follow each group of text in addition to numbers of beautiful mounted prints scattered through the pages. The book will contain some practical hints to travelers, which will save them trouble and expense.

"New Leaf Mills," a novel by William Dean Howells, is just published by the Harpers. It recounts the experiences of an unsuccessful city bookseller who bought a paper mill in the country, enthusiastically certain that fate would help him turn over a financial new leaf. Opposition and disappointment could not sour the lovable optimist. In addition to its fictional interest, the book is a genre picture of country life in the Middle West during the period following the Mexican War.

"The Combined Maze," a novel by May Sinclair, is announced by the Harpers. The hero, a clean-minded, athletic youth, grows fond of a girl companion at the gymnasium, but one of her friends, coquettish and unscrupulous, wins him away. Marriage brings out all the selfishness of her nature and the young husband cannot help contrasting the two women. His wife deserts him and her two children, but a divorce is impossible for lack of money. The man's nature is tested to the utmost, and the story reaches its denouement in the opposing claims of the two women.

"One Wonderful Night" is the title of Louis Tracy's forthcoming novel—his first story of American life. The scene is in New York City, and the action covers a period of only twelve hours.

Joy note: The publishers of Harold Bell Wright's novels, of which "Their Yesterdays" is the most recent, announce definitely that he will have no new book of any description published this year.

The popular Peggy of Spinster Farm, familiar to readers of Helen M. Winslow's well-known story, will soon reappear in a new book by the same author, entitled "At the Sign of the Town Pump."

Eleanor H. Porter, the author of "Miss Billy," has ready for early publication a new story entitled "Pollyanna."

The publishers of Henry Sydnor Harrison's new novel, "V. V.'s Eyes," have just placed their order for forty-two tons of paper to be used in the printing of this new book by the author of "Queed."

A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, "The Happy Warrior," appears to have acpticated critics and public alike, for a fifth printing was announced ten days after publication. In England a third printing is announced.

A new novel by Sir Gilbert Parker is a literary event all too infrequent. His story entitled "The Judgment House," which has been appearing serially in Harper's Magazine, will be published in book form on the 19th of this month.

Having completed his new book, "The Amateur Gentleman," which will appear this week, Jeffery Farnol is now at work at his home in Kent in dramatizing "The Broad Highway." The latter book has just gone into a fifteenth printing—140th thousand.

WITH THE AUTHORS.

Edna Ferber, the author of "Roast Beef Medium," to be published this spring by Stokes, has recently returned to Chicago after a visit of several weeks in New York. Miss Ferber always leaves New York with a certain feeling of relief, because there are so many distractions that she finds it difficult to work; also she gets little opportunity to cook in the great metropolis. Miss Ferber claims that she is as good a cook as Emma McChesney herself, which is indeed high praise. She was discovered not long ago begging one of her friends, who has a home in town, to let her come up and cook a dinner. The night before Miss Ferber started for Chicago she visited the night court at Jefferson Market, something she had long been anxious to do, and had an interesting talk with Justice Herbert.

There will shortly come from the press of Paul Elder & Co. a volume of essays, entitled "Intimations," by John D. Barry. It will deal with subjects of every-day interest. Already Mr. Barry is known as a novelist, essayist and lecturer. For many years he was dramatic critic of Harper's Weekly and of Collier's. His best known novels are "Mademoiselle Blanche," "A Congressman's Wife," "Our Best Society" and "A Daughter of Thespis," It was "A Congressman's Wife" that won the first prize of $2000 in The Smart Set competition for novels several years ago. For the past few years Mr. Barry has been devoting himself to literary work in San Francisco. His new volume is drawn from his daily essays in the San Francisco Bulletin.

"Arthur Stringer, author of "The Shadow," has just been added to the active writers making up the council of the newly formed Authors' League of America. Among the other names on this council are Augustus Thomas, Gertrude Atherton, Winston Churchill, Prof. Sloane and Arthur Train.

Farnham Bishop, author of "Panama Past and Present," is a son of the Hon. Joseph Bucklin Bishop, secretary of the Isthmian Canal Commission and official fountainhead of information for all writers and lecturers on the subject. Mr. Farnham Bishop, therefore, possesses a fund of reliable data on all phases of the Panama Canal Zone life, and his book tells just what every wide-awake lad—and adult, too—wants to know about the history, conditions of living, and work of that interesting region.

Owen Johnson, author of "The Sixty-first Second," to appear in March, who is now in Florence for the winter, is delighted over his ease in learning colloquial Italian. He writes: "You say 'no' by wagging a finger, 'yes' by wagging your head, 'too much' by raising your eyebrows, 'how much' by simply pointing. You say 'good-bye' by showing your teeth, and when you are angry with a cabman you double up your fist and say in English, '——, ————! You can't cheat me!'—and they understand perfectly."

Alfred Noyes, the young English poet, called the greatest living, by Theodore Watts-Duncan, Edmund Gosse and others, arrived in New York for his first visit to America on the Carmania February 22. Mr. Noyes is an ardent advocate of international peace and one of his great dreams is a union for that purpose between the English-speaking peoples. His wife is an American, daughter of the late Col. C. B. Daniels of the United States army. It is a curious fact that this poet, bringing a message of good-will from England, should arrive on the birthday of Washington, the leade of our revolution.

Dr. Chalmers Mitchell, author of "The Childhood of Animals," just published by Stokes, is a Scot and a fellow-townsman of Andrew Carnegie, having been born and schooled in Dumferline, Scotland, but has devoted himself to science and letters instead of to money-making. At the University of Aberdeen he took honors in philosophy and was university gold medallist in English literature. At Oxford he devoted himself to zoology, attained first-class honors and was appointed assistant professor. Twenty years ago, on his appointment as lecturer in biology at the London Hospital Medical College, he came to London, and devoted himself to teaching, writing, lecturing and zoological research. He is the author of many learned treatises on comparative anatomy and on the philosophy of evolution, and was editor of the zoological parts of the eleventh edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica, but he has the art of treating the most difficult subjects as if they were simple stories.

When Dr. Sclater, the secretary of the Zoological Society of London, retired after nearly fifty years' service, Dr. Mitchell, after a hotly contested election, was appointed secretary. Since that time he has devoted himself almost entirely to the affairs of the society, which has prospered greatly, and has stopped almost all other scientific work to interest himself in living animals. The book that he has now written shows what advantage a scientific naturalist can make of the special opportunities the Zoological Gardens afford for the study of living animals.

Samuel Hopkins Adams, the author-athlete, who wrote "The Secret of Lonesome Cove," made football a regular part of the sports at Hamilton College. He is an expert in Japanese wrestling.

The death of Charles Major, the Indiana author, robs the literary world of one of its most distinguished figures. The greatest achievement in the career of Charles Major was "When Knighthood Was in Flower," a story which took the country by storm when it first appeared in novel form; gained popularity in Canada and England, and later, upon being dramatized, experienced a vogue both in England and America and was translated and interpreted from the stage in almost all of the European countries. The first dramatic version was presented for several seasons by Julia Marlow and E. H. Sothern, and later, with lesser stars in the leading roles, was exceptionally successful. Today it stands as one of the most popular stock productions.

Martha Evans Martin, whose new book, "The Way of the Planets," has recently been published by Harper & Bros., has been having a month of quiet work at Atlantic City. Among the sharp-eyed native boys down there on the board walk, she found two who at night could clearly see the shape of the planet Venus without a glass. One said "Look! It's just like a little moon." Such sharp sight, Mrs. Martin says, is rare, though it is occasionally found among people who are accustomed to looking over broad expanses, such as are afforded by the sea and the plains.

Within a few weeks, Maria Thompson Daviess, whose new southern romance, "Andrew the Glad," has sprung quickly into the best-seller class, will leave her home in Nashville, Tenn., and go to live in her cabin on the crown of Old Harpeth Mountain to complete a new story of the Harpeth woods. Harpeth Mountain overlooks the Valley of Harpeth, Tennessee, which Miss Daviess has used as the setting for most of her stories. Late in the summer, Miss Daviess expect to go to the Maine woods for a short stay and in the fall will make a trip to Europe.

Dr. Albert Hale, who writes books on South America especially for traveler and business man who is new in that field of trade, is at present in South America, lecturing and doing research work. Dr. Hale's book, "The South Americans," was given prominent mention in another volume on South America by Ambassador James Bryce, which has just been published.

Hilaire Belloc, who wrote "The Four Men" and who critics say is the most entertaining intelligence in the field of English letters today, is a modest college professor, head of the department of English, at East London College. But when a young man Mr. Belloc was a driver in the Eighth Regiment of French Cavalry at Toul Meurthe-et-Moselle.

Lilian Whiting has gone abroad for the purpose of securing material at first-hand for her next illustrated book, which will deal with Athens.

Elizabeth Robins, whose story entitled "My Little Sister" has been arousing extraordinary comment, is an American woman, though she has lived in England for the last twenty years or more.

"The Girl of the Golden Gate," a sea story by William Brown Meloney, to appear shortly, is the author's first book, but not his first story, as he has been a writing man for many years, and is known as a story-teller of unusual imaginative and descriptive powers.

Cosmo Hamilton, the author of "The Outpost of Eternity," a novel dealing with the dangers of ill-assorted marriages, and also of the successful play, "The Blindness of Virtue," now filling a Chicago theater, has settled in New York for several months and will make his home permanently in America. Mr. Hamilton states that the novel appeals to him more strongly than plays as a medium to work with. He is now absorbed in a new book which will appear during the current year.

Emerson Hough, author of "John Rawn," is preparing to embark on an expedition into the Arctic Circle early in the spring. Mr. Hough has made several trips to Alaska. He is a great lover of the trail and hunts and fishes in the most out-of-the-way places more than half the year.

Among modern fiction writers, perhaps, there is none who have passed through more of the experiences he describes in his books than has Ridgwell Cullum. He was a participant in the Indian uprising described in "The Watchers of the Plains;" the logging camp that formed the background for "The Trail of the Axe," was his home for an entire winter. In the rough border town described in "The Sheriff of Dyke Hole" he learned to know "the sheriff," that man of philosophy and quaint humor, whom he has so admirably depicted. His new story, "The Night Riders," depicts some of his most exciting experiences as a cattle rancher in the far West.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Carolyn Sherwin Bailey, author of "Boys' Make-At-Home-Things" and "Girls' Make-At-Home-Things," says that in order to discover the future vocation of children one should watch their play because then children show unconsciously just where their talents and the natural trend of their minds lie. In accordance with the theories of Froebel, Montessori and others, Miss Bailey says: "The main thing about playing is the doing and the great thing about that is to find out what the child is interested in and arrange his play along those lines so that his play will teach him something." Her own books are written for the same purpose since they show boys and girls how to make things out of the material at hand, which will amuse them and educate them at the same time. Miss Bailey has had long experience in kindergarten and settlement work.

W. L. George, author of the anarchistic novel, "Until the Day Break," was recently asked if his hero, Israel Kalisch, was drawn from life. In reply he writes: "The hero is largely drawn from life, and his fellows and surroundings are, too, but you will realize that such information can come to a man only in the most secret and confidential way and that it might be almost . . . perilous for me to reveal my sources of information. As it is I may have said too much!"

Toscanini, the Metropolitan Operahouse conductor, is one of the most striking figures in the world of music. His memory is so prodigious that he can conduct without the aid of written music almost 100 operas. In the March Century appears a character sketch of this remarkable musician, including an account of his rise and a detailed description of his methods. Those who are interested in opera will find the article unusually entertaining in view of the fact that the newspaper accounts of Toscanini have been so meager. The article is illustrated with photographs and original sketches, one by Caruso.

Through the mouth of one of his characters in his just-published novel, "The Mystery of the Barranca," Herman Whitaker, who has spent much time in Mexico, seems to voice the fear in that country of the results of a possible American invasion: "We are an old people, we Mexicans. The old blood of Spain added no effervescence to the Aztec strains that were grown stagnant long before Cortez landed, and when a people ages, nature removes it to make way for younger stock. So, though I refuse to acknowledge it, I have known many years that just as the Moors overran Spain, and the Spanish overran the Aztecs, so will your people overrun Mexico from the northern Sierras to the Gulf."

Apropos of the centenary which fell on February 25 of the capture of the British ship Peacock by the U.S.S. Hornet, James Barnes, author of "Naval Actions of the War of 1812," says that the British vessel surrendered fifteen minutes after the first shot was fired. Her captain was killed by the last broadside, while the Hornet sustained scarcely any loss or damage. The captured officers and men were so well treated that—to use their own phrase—"they ceased to consider themselves prisoners."

During the last fifteen years, more than 1,500,000 copies of the various books in the celebrated collection of poems by James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, have been sold. This is an average of more than 100,000 books annually in that period and it is doubtful whether any other poet's works, outside of the Shakespeare productions, have ever experienced such a remarkable sale. The Riley vogue has not been confined to any special section of the country, or even to America. He is remarkably popular among the English and some of his non-dialect works have been translated into other languages.

Mary Roberts Rinehart in a recent interview stated that she had cleared more than $100,000 on her novels and fully as much in royalties on her plays during the last few years. The smallest amount that one of her books brought, she said, was $1200, while the greatest amount received in royalties for any one of her stories was $50,000. And then Mrs. Rinehart added, "Literature is more a business than a passion with me."—So one might judge!

It has been suggested by those intimately acquainted with Mr. Pocock, that it his latest novel, "A Man in the Open," he has visualized many of the experiences of his own career as a young man in the great Canadian Northwest.

The success of "Linda," a story of the untamed West Virginia mountains and the cultivated Back Bay district of Boston, has been so great that the author, Miss Margaret Prescott Montague, is now at work on a sequel.

It is not often that the first three books issued by a new publishing house reach either second or third editions within a few weeks after publication. This, however, is the record just achieved by the publishers of "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," "Pilgrims of the Plains" and "The Stain."

The fiftieth anniversary of Gettysburg, to be celebrated this year, will be the occasion for the publication of a story by La Salle Corbell Pickett, widow of Gen. Pickett, who led the famous charge up Cemetery Ridge on the third day of the battle. Mrs. Pickett's story is entitled "The Bugles of Gettysburg."

Harry A. Franck has finished the manuscript of his "Zone Policeman 88," much bothered at the last by the problem of finding an available typewriter in Quito: and is planning to stay for a time in Ecuador, working at whatever offers until the rainy season is past. After doing eight more South American countries he hopes to be back in New York some time in 1914.

NEW YORK LETTER.

W. H. W.

NEW YORK, March 14.—It was indeed bad news to hear that Mr. Louis Wetmore had severed his connection with the New York Times as editor of the weekly literary review of that paper.

There is a crying need for vigor on the part of our newspaper criticisms. The literary department of the average newspaper is little more than a sop to advertisers, run by some incompetent young man, or more generally a young woman, whose one aim in life it would seem is to offend no one; and in four cases out of five—according to the reports of a recent book reviewed—reviewers follow out that purpose by reprinting the canned reviews sent out by the publishers. Even those papers who do not openly print the reviews of publishers, are deficient in critical ability. It was a hopeful sign when Wetmore took hold of the New York Times' literary supplement. Wetmore is undoubtedly a competent man. He knows a good book from a poor one, and under his administration saw to it that those books deserving space received it.

In spite of many errors in judgment, Wetmore nevertheless saw that many good things were printed. He was criticised at one time for favoring English writers and critics, but his idea, as he told it to me, was to inspire the American writer to turn out that sort of semi-popular matter which stands somewhere between hack newspaper work and academicism. Wetmore, so I understand it, was trying to stimulate our native writers to hit off this type of writing. Certainly much interesting stuff was being printed with this in view. The work of the best of the younger journalists of England was being given an outlet in the Times Review, and although some of it could very easily have been left across the water, on the whole it could not help but have an excellent influence on American critics, provided it could have been kept up. In the reviews by American critics a certain unconventional note was struck which also added to the merit of this supplement. While it was not exactly what was wanted in this country, it nevertheless was a decided step in the right direction, for it is unfortunately true that many of the smaller supplements and book review pages throughout the country take their cue from the Times.

But Wetmore is out, and beginning with his editorial demise, this literary supplement has dropped back into the conventional rut for which it has always been noted. However, Wetmore was with the Times long enough to make his influence felt, and it was a needed influence as long as it lasted.

In the very near future there is going to be a weekly book review of a genuine and unacademic kind. Already there is a demand for it, and already there is talk in a certain quarter as to its advisability. Let us hope it may materialize without further delay.

One of the warmest nights that Will Irwin ever spent was last Friday. I beheld him sweating horribly—as did 300 others—but no one was able to relieve his suffering.

Arriving at the Kit Kat Carnival, an annual Bal Masque given by the artists of New York, Irwin endeavored to break past the door-keeper in nothing more exciting than an evening suit. But a rigid mandate had been issued by the officers of the club, that no one would be permitted on the floor except in costume. In spite of Irwin's protest that he was disguised as a waiter, his entry was barred. It was 2 a.m. and the costumer's wardrobe had been depleted except for a fur grizzly-bear outfit. There was no alternative. Irwin attired himself in heavy furs from head to foot and proceeded to join the festivities. Turkey trotting, even in the lightest of integuments, is warm exercise, but in tight-fitting furs it is—even worse. However, febrifuges were at hand, and so the dimpling dawn brought with it only regret.

At a luncheon of the Vagabond Club last Monday, I had the pleasure of hearing Richard Barry, a former Los Angeleno, give a short talk on the sentimentalism indulged in by the American press regarding the deaths of Scott and Madero. Barry made the point that both of these men died as a result of something lacking in their natures, and that their death did not call for more than a few words of regret.

is the air of "Waning Autumn." Through the almost bare branches of the sycamores we see the blue of the sky and the pale purple of the mountains. A small canvas but a charming one is "Wild Buckwheat," giving us a study of Arrowhead from the lower foothills. The picture is as subtly colorful as a bit of rare old tapestry, its pattern picked out by the wavering lines of tawny buckwheat meeting the varying dull greens of trees and shrubs.

Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel's pictures are all in water color. In this difficult and elusive medium she has attained a strength, a sureness of hand, a simplicity and a directness that are little short of marvelous. Apparently there is nothing she sees and feels that she cannot express—and she sees and feels so much that is beautiful!

What a magnificent sky she gives us in "After the Rain," and how broadly she has painted these piling rain clouds. How subtly, too, she has rendered the feeling of rain in the air, even though the sun is shining. Another lovely and most simple picture is "The Rising Moon," painted in Matilija Canyon. The moon floats in a "daffodil sky," while toward us rushes a mountain stream, coldly green. "Matilija Canyon," powerfully painted, has most attractive, haunting blues in its shadows. The picture has a fine dramatic quality, with big moving clouds and with vast hills on which the sunlight lies rich and warm.

A pastoral note is struck in "The Indian Shepherd," which is as interesting because of its straggling flocks and its quiet herder as its pink afternoon glow on hills and mountains and dreaming valley. "Spring Flowers" also introduces figures with pleasing effect. A group of little maidens are happily culling the gorgeous treasures of a field of yellow poppies in bloom. The feeling of springtime is well rendered. "The Sunlit Valley," from Santa Barbara, has an unusually fine sky even for Mrs. Wachtel. Clouds trail over and before the mountains, and the sunlight is seen through a delicate haze.

The exhibition will remain at the Steckel through March.

The Armory Show.

The international exhibition of modern art now being held at the Fifty-ninth Regiment Armory on Lexington avenue, New York, is attracting wide attention. It has been well financed and well advertised. It is bringing into undue prominence men who stand for nothing, and it is proving a money making scheme. Some of the greatest of modern masters are represented, but it cannot be denied that the post-impressionists and cubists predominate.

We are always interested in the sincere work of any artist. An artist is a monarch, sole sovereign, in that he paints as he pleases. For generations we have thought of art as a harmony—a fine relationship of spaces, of lines, of color. It is hard for us to think otherwise of it. The cubists and impressionists and post-impressionists and post-post-impressionists and so on are endeavoring to convince us that art is not necessarily a harmony. From an impression of some of the canvases, we should say that they distinctly want us to know that art is a jarring, screaming, eye-aching farce—and worse—created solely for the purpose of shocking the public. There are hundreds of canvases in the exhibition as repulsive and ugly as could possibly be imagined. Harmony is the highest type of man's achievement. Some of these men have thrown the inheritance of the ages aside and are endeavoring to begin art anew. If they use the mediums of the past—that is, paint, brushes, canvases, etc., they must of necessity express in like manner.

Imagine, if you please, a canvas seen at a distance of fifty feet. Crude, hard, white lilies outlined with a cruder, hard, black line placed on a flaming red-orange background. No thought is there of fine spacings, or line, or color—only a very crude "impresion" (poor overworked phrase!) Imagine, again, a picture styled "Lady Descending Stairs," which, by one's twisting and turning this side and that, is for all the world but a bundle of shingles! If these people insist that they must not in any manner represent nature, why do they give their canvases nature's names to puzzle the layman?

It is said (and after seeing the pictur one is fully prepared to believe the preposterous story) that a canvas signed by "A Progressive" (it should have been by "An Ass") was painted in the following manner: In Paris a beautiful large new canvas was prepared. It was placed on the easel, outdoors among cool green trees and singing birds (for atmosphere.) A donkey was led up, its hind-quarters smeared with paint, and backed up to the canvas. The result was a typical post-post-post-impressionistic creation. Fancy such stuff being exhibited before the public!

It seems to be the disinterested observer that the general atmosphere of this exhibition is unhealthy. Hundreds of the pictures are vilely and lowly conceived. Please bear in mind that the expression used was "general atmosphere"—for among the common riff-raff are some of the finest pictures of the greatest artists of today and yesterday. These are by far in the minimum, however, and it is very hard to see them, placed as they are.

Now for some individuals. Rodin is there with all his rugged strength. George Gray Barnard is well represented with some very feeling marble. Puvis de Chavannes, one of the greatest of artists of modern times, has a number of glowing compositions. There are two very typical Corots; an exquisite portrait by Whistler; some very high-keyed Childe Hassams; some fine Innesses, and several vigorous, glowing outdoor pictures by Jonas Lie.

Charles H. Davis, one of our best landscape painters, controls attention, as does Charles Hopkinson, who is fine in color and texture. John Marin, a very advanced impressionist, is there with some lovely color. Monet and Sisley (the Englishman) with their vibratory, colorful creations; Goya, a magnificent designer; Ingres, very meagerly represented; Dodge McKnight, a watercolorist of splendid power; Manet, the first impressionist; George Bellows, with some very clever work; Mary Cassatt, with her lovely subjects, and Robert Chanler—all have one or more canvases.

Cezane, the post-impressionist, works in rather a low key. Gustav Cimiatti has some fine composition. Paul Gaugin has one canvas which is primitive, yes—but lovely, rich and warm in color, and harmonious. Other canvases of his are decidedly impressionistic—crude, horrible. Matisse, also, seems to be contradictory; in one room is a most charming picture—in the next are some hard, brutal, horrible works. Before the works of Francis Picabia you hold your breath at their boldness and crudeness. One could mention many, many other would-bes, but they are not worth while.

ART NOTES.

An exhibition of oil paintings and sketches by Rena Cating Morse will open in the Royar Gallery, No. 744 South Hill street, to continue to March 29. There will be twenty canvases shown.

On March 23 Anna A. Hills will show forty or fifty pictures, studies made in Europe and Southern California, at the Kanst Gallery. The exhibition will continue for two weeks.

Pastels by Xarifa Towner, eighteen of them, were exhibited in the Gold Room, Hotel Raymond, Pasadena. Later they will be exhibited at the Catherine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club, No. 802 Broadway, New York.

The City and the House Beautiful. Gardens, Grounds, Streets, Parks, Lakes

By Ernest Braunton.

UNDER the title "Save the Trees." this department had something to say upon a purely local problem, just two weeks ago. Since that time there has arisen at Riverside, a controversy that, like the local one herein dealt with, is of far more than local importance. Ten days ago the following news item appeared in correspondence from Riverside in The Times:

"The feeling engendered as the result of the cutting-out of a number of the peppers from the center row of trees on Magnolia avenue for the accommodation of switches of the Pacific Electric Railway Company brought out a record-breaking attendance at the meeting of the Board of Trustees this morning.

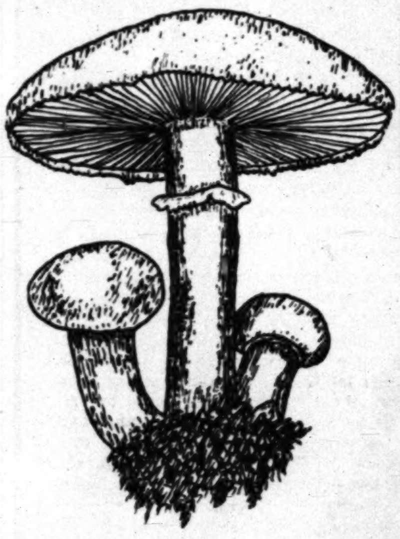
"Avenue residents by the score, and the most prominent citizens from all walks of life, were on hand to hear Mayor Peter's report of his investigation of the situation, of which the avenue residents complain. Many of the speakers injected personalities into their arguments, and there ensued a number of heated denials of some of the statements made.

"The residents along the avenue profess to see the handwriting on the wall in the tree removals already accomplished, holding that when the railway company is ready to lay a second track on the avenue to complete its interurban connections with Los Angeles by way of La Habra, the entire row of trees will come out. The board agreed to go over the route in a body Friday morning and confer with the property owners in the matter of tree removals for an important switch or crossing track yet to be installed.

"The center row of peppers, which some regard as the distinguishing feature of the avenue, has had to be heavily pruned, owing to the interference with lighting and trolley wires, and the installation of another track on the opposite side of the row, will present a problem not far removed from that of trying to make two bodies occupy the same space at the same time. What will be the result of the controversy does not appear at the present time."

In years but recently passed the strongest tourist attraction possessed by Riverside, next to being the "original home of the Riverside Washington navel orange," was Magnolia avenue and its grand old trees. And passing time has but enhanced the value of the latter. The orange-growing industry has developed to such an extent, over so large a territory, that Riverside may no longer claim the unique distinction which it once possessed, of being the one great center and attraction in regard to this gigantic golden crop. Magnolia avenue still remains a famous highway and the judicious care and protection exercised over the aligning trees by J. H. Reed has of recent years much improved their condition and attractiveness, both individuality and collectively.

Surely and steadily, yet quite rapidly this planting has been supplemented by the general planting, under official supervision, of all her streets and highways, until Riverside is becoming renowned as the best-planted city on the Pacific Coast. To keep pace with her street planting has come the gradual development of another great attraction, Rubidoux Heights. First came the making of a fine ascending road of easy grade and each year some well-conceived planting and forestation have been carried on, so that each year this miniature rock-bound mountain range reaches a greater and growing importance and landscape beauty. Next in the procession of live civic upbuilding came the transformation and enlargement of Fairmount Park through plans prepared by the famous Olmstead Bros. All this has materially added to the prestige and fame of Riverside as an attractive tourist resort, to which list should still be added what a cousin of the writer's, now returned to his home in England, wrote of as "the most comfortable, home-like inn" he had stopped at while on an extensive American tour. Riverside is peculiarly dependent, during the winter season at least, upon the specific attractions noted and among them Magnolia avenue is not the least. The city cannot, at present, afford to dispense with or destroy any one of them. Therefore it is with deep regret that the writer and all tree lovers, who have visited this charming and important highway, hear of the destruction of a single one of the gigantic old trees. The loss of even the dozen or so already taken out is a serious matter, and the residents of our sister city may well view with alarm the establishment of a precedent which may eventually rob this avenue of its chief charm and effectiveness as viewed from both a visitor's and a resident's point of view. We sincerely trust some other solution may be found, looking to the preservation rather than the destruction of these grand old trees; otherwise Riverside will be divested of a glory that has been chiefest of all in making her world-famous to the travel-loving public.



COMMON EDIBLE FIELD MUSHROOM.

Mushrooms and Toadstools.

A BULLETIN has just been issued, under the title "Mushrooms and Toadstools," by the University of California, that should prove of interest and value to all consumers of edible fungi, also to mycologists. In common parlance a toadstool is considered poisonous, while the name mushroom is applied to supposed edible species. No such distinction really exists, nor is there any tenable or even distinguishable ground for such terms.

The purpose of the bulletin is to safeguard the public against reliance upon so-called "tests" as to the poisonous nature of certain species, and all popular theories are exploded. The most prominent of these is the "silver test." As there are poisonous and non-poisonous species that act alike on silver, this test is of no value whatever and this is likewise true of every test so far known except the test of eating and this is obviously both unpopular and dangerous. The "peeling test" works the same on both edible and poisonous species, so does the "bitter" or "peppery" or "disagreeable taste." How then may one distinguish between the two classes? Experience is the only true guide. To this may be added an intimate botanical knowledge of the many species and varieties—a knowledge possessed by but few. If in doubt better refrain from eating, for one may have no chance to repent.

Avoid all these: 1. All toadstools in the young or "button" stage. At this time it is impossible to determine, except after long experience, some poisonous species from some edible species. 2. Avoid all those with pores on the under side of the cap until sufficient acquaintance teaches the difference between edible and poisonous varieties. 3. Avoid all species with this combination: Gills, white spores, a ring, and a volva or bulb-like base. The most poisonous species are in this group. 4. Avoid those having a milky juice unless the milk is red. 5. Avoid those having the cap thin in comparison with the gills, especially if they are bright colored. 6. Avoid all toadstools which are not strictly fresh, since decay sometimes greatly increases poisonous substances. By following these rules implicitly one may avoid the most poisonous kinds, but the novice should experiment with the greatest caution.

Barren Chestnut.

A CORRESPONDENT has a large and beautiful Spanish chestnut highly prized as a shade tree, yet barren. Each year it blossoms profusely, sets thousands of large-sized burrs, but scarcely any of the latter ever contain a perfect nut.

The tree is in a condition known as "self-sterile," in that while it bears blossoms of both sexes, no fruit results. A nice little discussion might be laid on this curious provision of nature and how and why these things are as they are, but our reader wishes the problem solved of how to get chestnuts. Shakespeare's Garden at Present.

IT IS not often that celebrated men end their days in the town or hamlet which gave them birth, although there are some few instances of this. William Shakespeare, however, the Immortal Bard, after a prosperous career in London, returned, a wealthy citizen, to spend the rest of his life amid the pastoral scenery of his youth. Of the poet's deep love for nature we possess abundant proofs in all his plays. More than one hundred flowers were mentioned by him, all of which are now cultivated in the borders of the garden in Henley street, at Stratford-on-Avon, behind the birthplace. The place was purchased in 1861 by trustees who converted it into a public garden. It is an interesting record to us which states that: "the old foundation had to be fenced in on account of the rapacity of American tourists."

Useful Native Plants.

THERE is surely no plant which grows, in any part of the world, without its use either to insect, bird, beast, or man. But to wander amid the marvels of the insect world or to trace the life-history of bird and beast; to examine how far one plant affords food and other shelter would lead us far afield, and it would become impossible to follow clearly the infinite intricacies of that chain which links together the vast machinery of creation.

Even when considered in regard to the human race, and limited to our own country alone, how very many plants there are not merely pleasing to the eye, but of use directly, or indirectly, in their various seasons. In every age mankind has sought among the herbs of the field not merely sources of food and of clothing, but of healing and of strength as well as of delight. Many of those numerous plants either grown by our forefathers in their gardens, or patiently culled from field and wayside, as remedies for all the physical—nay, even the mental—ills to which man is liable, have now fallen into desuetude. From other climates we bring herbs, roots, and flowers which, in their efficacy, have supplanted our more homely pharmacopoeia. In remote country places, however, many herbs are still valued which long since have been forgotten by dwellers in our arid towns. Much that is of interest might be brought together as to the almost forgotten uses, in medicine, of many of our native plants.

Official Additions to German Cities.

A LARGE area is undertaken at once. The city is not made to conform to the grade of the district. The district is made to conform to the grade of the city. I have seen great areas of from one-half to a mile square in which a fill was required of from eight to fifteen feet. Tracks are laid from the neighboring railway to make the fill, and the streets are constructed high in the air. Sewers are not of the temporary crock type. They are adequate for a century to come. Gas, water, telephone, and electric mains are laid at the same time and connections made to the curb.

Salads from Weeds.

WATERCRESS—formerly spelt "kerse," whence our saying, "not worth a kerse" (curse)—was among the ancients thought to cure mental diseases. It is, however, now valued not only as an excellent salad plant, but also as an anti-scorbutic, possibly because sulphur is said to exist in its foliage. Its popularity among all classes sufficiently attests the value of this little plant now growing wild everywhere.

Chicory, or wild succory, makes a good salad, and for that purpose is sometimes blanched so as to remove all bitter taste. It is also sometimes used as a fodder plant for sheep. The large tap root is also used for the adulteration of coffee. Though escaped from cultivation locally, it is much more common in Central California.

Celery in its wild state is unwholesome, and even sometimes poisonous, and is found along all our streams. It was to render the stalks wholesome that they were first earthed up and blanched in our gardens. Its name is derived from the Greek word sellnon, through the Italian sellari. The old herbalists declare that it had "a peculiar virtue against the biting of venomous spiders."

The wild prickly lettuce is known as the parent of the varieties now in use. Of these one comes to us from the island of Cos, in the Grecian Archipelago, and is known always as Cos lettuce. As soon as the juice of the lettuce becomes milky it tastes bitter, but is said to be calming to the nerves. This pernicious plant was unknown to Southern California a quarter century ago but is now rapidly spreading.

The Nasturtium: A Butterfly's Flower.

WHY does the long projection exist so well balanced? Why are the petals of such vastly different shapes? What reason prompts the flower to dab its colors and graceful dark lines over its surface? What is the purpose of the fence just within its throat? The flower seems to actually invite investigation, so plain are its intentions. It is essentially a butterfly's flower.

The long outstanding shaft is a honey-pot, as may be easily proved upon chewing it, or squeezing it while holding it before a bright light, when its nectar will be pumped up and down. But besides the sweet taste a more pungent bitter one will be noticed. This latter deters biting flies from approaching the valuable substance by gnawing their way through the shaft, and, as a rule, they would be too large to force their way down the interior. The amount of honey which might be removed by very small flies would be too insignificant for consideration.

Bees cannot reach this coveted substance. How then are the far larger butterflies enabled to succeed in the attempt? From beneath its head projects a trunk about as long, roughly speaking, as its own body, but very thin, and almost resembling a hair. As a rule this trunk is coiled up tightly like a spring. The legs of the insects are provided with a few pairs of large spikes or spines which project at sharp angles from the limbs.

When a butterfly alights upon a nasturtium, the throat of which is so charmingly exposed outwardly to receive it, it pushes its head and forepart as far as possible inside the flower, and hitches the spikes on its legs over the fence of bristles, from which there is then no fear of dislodgment. Uncoiling its delicate trunk it thrusts it down along the shaft, and easily makes its meal, abstracting the pollen unconsciously for transference to another blossom to fertilize it.

[New York Sun:] One of the best-known London newspapers, in a review of "Lincoln's Own Stories," collected by Anthony Gross, commented upon the anecdote which Lincoln was fond of telling of a family of such migratory habits that they were able to get everything into one wagon and even the chickens were so used to being moved that "whenever they saw the wagon sheets brought out they laid themselves on their backs and crossed their legs ready to be tied." The British reviewer, with an insular sense of humor, remarked: "One feels a little as though something must have been accidentally left out of this and of many other stories in the book."

DEAR PLAYMATE: I want to call your attention to the fact that I own and now operate the most up-to-date factory in the West, wherein I scientifically invent, design, manufacture and fit all kinds of mechanical orthopedic apparatus, such as elastic stockings, and other hosiery, and men's suspensorie bandages, for correcting sprains, enlarged or swollen veins, limbs or joints. Many people meekly fold their hands and perish just because others have spent their knowledge and skill to cure them and failed.

Where there is sufficient life it simply awaits your action. But you've got to be up and doing, or you'll soon be down and done. Natural law won't wait, neither can you. Your vitality—fire of life—may burn too low to rekindle—then all is lost. If a decaying spot on an apple can be called rotting, then a pimple or boil on you should be likewise expressed. As big weeds from little plants grow if not weeded out, so big dis-eases from little pains and ills grow if not treated out. Thus it gnaws at your soul until you are dead.

Bear in mind, you begin dying the moment you fall ill—not when the doctor tells the family at the last moment.

Many people grow gnarled like a storm-tossed oak, then become decrepit and dependent upon the charity of others who abuse them because they were "penny wise and dollar foolish" in these matters of vigorous health.

Remember, vigorous health is the preferred wealth-earning-efficiency and long-happy-life-inducing stock in the bank of your HumaNatur or body, nonassessable if you live right, but assessable if you live wrong.

Without obligating yourself in the least, you are cordially invited to exact this test from me—FREE.

This is a work of unselfish human interest for me, therefore I know whereof I speak and can and will do all I claim for you. You cannot get mistaken treatment here.

Briefly, when you are ill, you are out of harmony with natural law, and must get back in tune to be well. I know the law—that's the difference.

City Life or Poultry in the Country?

By Prof. Frederic H. Stoneburn.

[Popular interest in the poultry industry is widespread and growing. The series of articles on poultry husbandry, which has appeared in these columns, has attracted wide attention and, has been the means of disseminating much reliable information concerning the business.

The present contribution to this series takes the form of a letter of inquiry sent to Prof. Stoneburn and his reply thereto. This reply will serve to answer a host of similar questions which interested individuals have asked or would like to ask. It is a square, fair, frank discussion of a problem which is vexing many men and women.

Mr. Graham's drawing of Dark Cornish fowls brings forward a breed which is particularly attractive and which possesses much merit, from the standpoint of both the fancier and the producer of table poultry.]

NEW YORK, Feb. —, 1913: Prof. Frederic H. Stoneburn. My dear sir—For some months past I have been reading your poultry articles with greatest interest. I have been impressed with the obvious fact that you are sincere in your belief in the industry and its possibilities. May I not, therefore, impose upon your time sufficiently to state my personal case and ask your honest advice? I will speak frankly.

Can I take my family into the country and make a comfortable living raising poultry? Here are the facts in the case. I am 42 years of age. My family consists of my wife and two sons, the latter being 15 and 12 years of age. I am employed by a big business house, on an annual salary, which has remained practically the same for several years past, and which is probably as large now as it ever will be.

During recent years the cost of living has increased so rapidly that I have experienced considerable trouble in making income and outgo break even. We simply cannot lay by a dollar under present conditions. Further, my health seems to be suffering, probably because of continuous confinement in the office, and I am apparently developing a case of "nerves," which makes me uncomfortable and impairs my business efficiency.

For some time I have been investigating agricultural matters and wondering whether I might not do as well on a little farm as I am now doing in the city, merely make a comfortable living, and also regain robust health through outdoor work. As a boy I lived on a farm, so I am not entirely ignorant of farm life. However, I went to the city at an early age and for over a quarter of a century have lost practical touch with rural affairs. Personally, I am satisfied that I would enjoy living and working on a little place. The boys are crazy to try it; the wife is willing to do what is best for the family. But modern agricultural methods are so different from those I learned at home, and my responsibility to care for my family is so great, that I hesitate to break loose from a permanent salaried position and enter a new field. In a word, I lack experience and exact information, and that naturally makes it difficult for me to reach a decision. Will you not help me?

We have rather limited assets, say about $3000 in cash, plenty of decent clothing and a complete outfit of household furniture. That's the total, with no more in sight. Shall I make the plunge?

For the last three years we have been keeping a few chickens in our back yard, about twenty on an average. We all enjoy working with them, and I believe have done fairly well with them. At any rate, we have made them pay a few dollars profit each year in addition to furnishing us with plenty of eggs for the family and more or less meat as well. If I could make a thousand head average as much profit per bird as the little flock has, I would be satisfied, and "live happy ever after."

Please write me frankly. Your interest in the matter will be most deeply appreciated.

Awaiting your reply with greatest interest, I am, yours very truly, —— ——

My dear Mr. ——:

Your letter of recent date came to hand in due course. Inquiries of this character often reach me and I hesitate to reply to them as positively and definitely as the writers naturally desire, as one hesitates to assume the responsibility for possible failure.

Had you asked whether or not a living can be made from poultry keeping, the answer would be easy. It can be done. It is being done in all parts of the country. But you inquire whether you can do it, and the reply to this must be that it depends entirely upon you. Are you able and willing to meet the conditions which are essential to success in this work? If so, you can succeed, because the opportunity exists. In fact, there is scarcely a section of this country in which the professional poultryman cannot do well if he will only study local conditions and intelligently plan his work accordingly. I do not mean to say that he will find success easy to attain, that he will experience no loss or disappointment, but the business has great possibilities, and if the drawbacks are overcome success will follow.

Instances of city men making good in the country could be multiplied indefinitely. So could the stories of failures, partial or complete. And so the matter sifts right down to this: The poultry business is a good business for the right man.

But there are other considerations aside from that of mere money-making. Social life, the opportunities for self-improvement, educational advantages, all have their bearing on the subject, especially where wife and children are concerned.

Fortunately, the improvement of country schools, the building of good roads, the

A Desirable Heavy Table Fowl.

BY LOUIS PAUL GRAHAM.

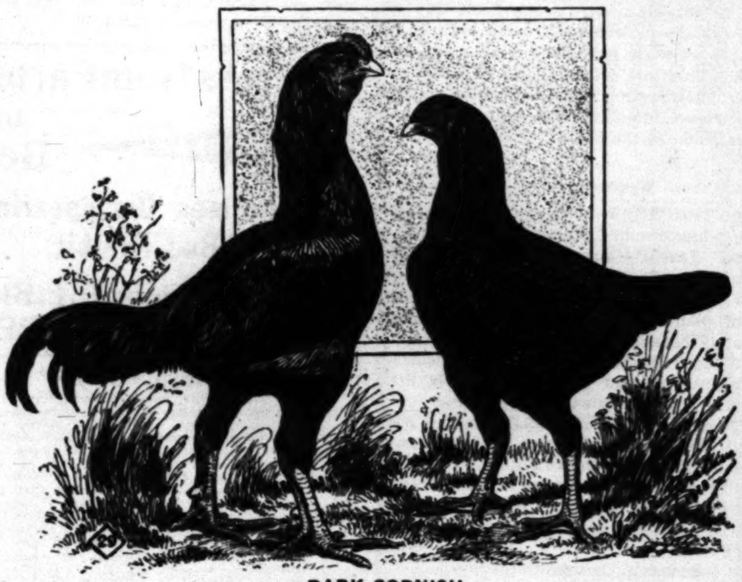
The Dark Cornish, formerly called the Cornish Indian Game, originated in the county of Cornwall, England, where it is largely bred. From there it spread over the British empire and to the United States.

Statements regarding the origin of this fowl are very conflicting. At one time it was maintained that the breed was a direct importation from the East Indies. This was probably due to its resemblance to one of its progenitors, the Aseel Game, which is of Asiatic origin. However, the consensus of opinion leans toward a cross of the Aseel on old English Game and a top cross of Malay Game. These crosses were made and the breed originated about seventy years ago, and the breed established and improved both in fancy requirements and table qualities, so that it is now a most desirable fowl. It has been used extensively for crossing with other varieties to obtain fine-grained heavy-meated table poultry, and is itself included in the ancestry of some of our most popular American breeds.

The Dark Cornish was extremely popular in America about twenty years ago, its full, plump breast and rich yellow skin and legs making it a desirable and attractive addition to our table fowls. It is, however, a heavy-boned fowl, slow in growth. This latter fact operates against its successful use in its purity on large poultry farms making the growing of table poultry a specialty. It is, however, used by them extensively for crossing with other fowls for this purpose, and such crosses produce the finest quality of roasting fowls.

As a layer, the Dark Cornish hen does not rank high in the number of eggs per year, but her eggs are conceded to be very rich and fine flavored.

In shape the Dark Cornish is like the illustration, giving the impression of massiveness and muscular development and creating the wrong impression that it is a ferocious fighter, which it certainly is not. The males will, of course, fight among themselves about as do Wyandottes and other like fowls, but it has none of the "fight-to-the-finish" disposition of the Games. Its legs are short, thick and set wide on the fowl; its shoulders broad and prominent; the breast full and round, and the head broad and short, with the distinctive characteristic of an overhanging brow. In color the male is glossy, greenish black, excepting the secondary feathers of the wings, which are dark red edged with black, and the neck hackle, each feather of which is shafted with crimson. The female has a black hackle with a red shaft to each feather. The main tail feathers are black. The balance of her feathering is a deep bay, double laced with glossy, greenish black. The formation of this lacing follows the outline of the feather. The males weigh from seven and one-half to nine pounds and the females from five and one-half to six and one-half pounds. It is one of our most interesting fowls to breed to perfection, and its breeders are very ardent fanciers. There is no doubt that it is a source of considerable satisfaction to raise exceptionally good specimens of this breed and exhibit them to fellow-fanciers. There is a decided increase in the number of these fowls being shown, which seems to indicate that the Dark Cornish are regaining their popularity.



DARK CORNISH.

This striking fowl originated in Corwall, England, about seventy years ago. Its reputation for desirable table qualities made it popular throughout the British empire, and from there it was imported into the United States. It is a heavy, thick-set, short-legged fowl and gives the appearance of being massive and muscular. Its breeders are enthusiastic fanciers and pay good prices to import exceptionally fine specimens from over the water. It has been used extensively for crossing on lighter-boned breeds for the production of table poultry and its blood is traceable in the origin of many of our most popular American varieties.

Scratchings

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] The ideal poultry yard produces eggs all the year round; there are always a fair number of the hens laying. But in the real poultry yard the proportion now laying is very small indeed. It is, of course, just a matter of having the right breeds hatched at the right time and fed in the right way. The eggs should follow automatically, as it were, but they do not always. The reason is that the secret of poultry keeping lies in attention to detail, and no one man can see what ought to be done more quickly than another. In winter the eggs have to be coaxed out of the fowls, and some poultry keepers know instinctively how to do this.

[Philadelphia Record:] A setting of eggs does not stand the breeder much (as compared with his advertising expense,) and this you can certainly cut down 500 per cent. a year by giving every customer a square deal. Every time you rectify a mistake which you know to be your own, you will be saving a $20 advertisement. At first glance this might not seem to be so much to you, but a single trial will show you the truth of our contention. This is only too true, as many an unscrupulous breeder has found to his sorrow, giving insufficient value for the money received and imposing on the man who trusts you enough to send cash in advance for his order, has been the cause of more than 50 per cent. of the failures in the fancy poultry and egg business.

[Philadelphia Record:] Hens are good hatchers, but cannot be depended upon to set when wished, and hence to wait until biddy gets ready to do the hatching the season is well on the way toward late spring, too late for early-hatched chicks, the kind that make our profit-payers, the winter layers. For the largest profits the poultry raiser must resort to artificial incubation.

[Baltimore American:] Poultrymen may increase their egg profits by the production of infertile eggs. The presence of the male bird in the flock is not essential for the production of eggs, as many seem to think. It is said—and on good authority, too—that the egg yield will be slightly increased if there is no male allowed to run with the flock. Then, too, infertile eggs will keep best and thus reduce the loss from bad eggs. As soon as the breeding season is over sell, kill or confine all male birds.

[Farm and Fireside:] Cold air will not injure fowls when they are turned loose in the yard and can exercise, but when on the roost at night and a cold stream pours on one of them from sunset to sunrise the chances are that the bird will soon begin to droop, perhaps have roup, and then all the others will take the disease. An open crack or nail hole is worse than the whole front of the house open, as small streams of air on fowls nearly always prove harmful.

[New York Sun:] Every season experiment and practice go to prove that, though soft mashes are desirable for a high egg yield they are not the best for stock birds if fertile eggs are wanted. To get the best hatching results a slight falling off in the egg yield must be put up with—the birds can't do both things at once. The soft mash must be cut down to twice a week, and good grain food substituted. Wheat and oats and a good scratch food should form the staple feed, to which may be added a few peas, while in cold weather corn in moderation may be introduced. Other grains, such as millet, sunflower seed, buckwheat and the like, may be given occasionally as a variety.

[Sunday Magazine:] The biggest rewards come to the women who are able to breed and to sell fancy fowls. Yet, several years of experience are necessary before any woman can hope to breed birds that will win prizes and sell at from $5 to $500. Also, it is essential to have first-class stock with which to make a start. It may seem almost sinful to pay $50 or $100 for a trio of birds, but such a beginning may lead to an annual income of many hundred dollars. On the other hand, the money may be as good as thrown away.

The Chemistry of the Blood.

ALTER the chemical composition of the blood, and you alter the health and ability of each and every cell. Destroy the blood, and you destroy every cell, and forever arrest the vital function of the individual.

The chemistry of the blood directly controls the functions of the body and determines health and disease. Hence, it is necessary to treat the blood first in disease. The chemistry of the soil, the chemistry of foods produced by the soil, and the chemistry of the human body, are made up of the same elements.

It is the chemistry of the blood produced by the chemistry of food taken from the chemistry of the soil that circulates through the capillary system and distributes the strength and nourishment of your food through your entire body. If your circulation is congested your body receives little benefit from the food you eat, and your blood does not carry off the accumulated waste matter, and in consequence, chemical changes take place in the body.

Your health depends upon the chemistry and the free flowing circulation of your blood; congested circulation is a cause of disease. To maintain normal circulation the blood must contain or be supplied with the essential chemical elements from which all parts of the body are built. Very few people realize how important the chemistry and the circulation of the blood is to the sustaining and the building up of the body.

A Man Is No Older Than His Arteries.

THE hardening of the arteries (arterio sclerosis) is a disease which is killing good men and women long before their time; that is, before the time promised them in their youth from all the indications then existing. It is due to a chemical deposit in the lining of the arteries—brain or body—because the natural channels through which this deposited material should go out are clogged. This deposit causes a brittleness of the arteries. The elasticity of the blood vessels is destroyed. They become like old and hardened rubber pipes, which are incapable of carrying any stream without bursting.

Undue Blood Pressure.

LET such a condition as the foregoing prevail in the small arteries of the brain and you can readily see that when any extra blood pressure is put upon them something will happen. A man may think he is in perfect health and unknowingly put some strain on his vessels, such as overindulgence in eating or drinking, perhaps some physical strain, as lifting or running for a train, some slight or big strain, it matters little. The inelastic and clogged blood vessels cannot stand it and one or more bursts, allowing the escaping blood to flow over the sensitive cells of the brain.

Disastrous Results.

NATURALLY we would expect nature to assert herself in no uncertain way, inasmuch as the blood stream has been seriously interfered with. And we get what may reasonably be expected from such a condition—sometimes paralysis, sometimes apoplexy.

The extent of this shock depends upon what region of the brain is flooded and the size of the artery which has burst. Usually it is one of the smaller arteries in the region of the motor center of the brain—the part which controls the movements of the limbs.

Fortunately for some, the blood clot becomes absorbed and the victim recovers the use of his limbs. Nature may do the adjusting or she may need assistance; it depends upon the general condition of the individual. If nothing is done to prevent a recurrence the arteries remain in a breakable state and the next rupture will be a larger one, and hence the damage more serious—perhaps fatal. Each time it is a larger artery which breaks; consequently, a greater brain area is flooded. Centers governing the action of the heart or respiration are flooded and death is sure to follow. These are the only reasons for the old saying: "The third attack will kill him."

If it is one or more of the tiny arteries or vessels in the kidneys similar conditions are produced. That is, some of the functions of the kidneys are affected or stopped and we have serious trouble. If it is the vessels of the liver, then this organ becomes a menace to health and eventually to life. Cirrhosis of the liver is one of the diseases resulting from this condition.

Chemical Compounds Arranged by Nature.

YOU can demonstrate to your own satisfaction that the health of man and of the vegetable kingdom are so closely related that one may be said to be actually dependent upon the other. Everything in life is a matter of transformation or progression with the mineral which goes up to man. It is the mineral that produces the plant, the animal satisfies upon the plant, man satisfies upon both plant and the animal—it means health and strength for one and health and strength for the other; that which brings weakness, disease and death to the lower strata of organic life brings the same inheritance upon the higher organism or upon man himself.

Chemistry as a Science.

SCIENCE is a knowledge of facts and forces. This being a self-evident fact, it needs no argument to prove that chemistry stands high in the list of the sciences. It is intimately connected with all the phenomena of nature; the causes of rain, snow, hail, dew, wind, earthquakes; even the changes of the seasons can never be explored with any chance of success while we are ignorant of chemistry; and the vegetation of plants and the most important functions of man have received all this illustration from the same source. No study can give us more exalted ideas of the wisdom and goodness of the great first cause than this, which shows us everywhere the most astonishing effects produced by the most simple, though adequate means, and displays to our view the great care which has everywhere been taken to secure the comfort and happiness of every living creature.

Food Prepared for Absorption.

THE chemistry of the body prepares the food for absorption. Through its relation with the nervous system, the blood controls many of the unconscious functions of the body. As soon as the food enters the gastro-intestinal tract it is indirectly controlled by the blood. The condition of the blood and the nature of the solvents, ferments and waste material it contains, decides the amount of hydrochloric acid, ferments, various juices and alkalines to be secreted; and these in turn control the chemical formula of digestion.

The various digestive secretions act chemically on the widely-different foodstuffs, splitting them into chemical compounds, thus preparing them for absorption. Through its influence upon the epitherial cells, the blood receives directly or indirectly the materials it needs to carry on its functions, and whatever material is refused by these cells is passed out as waste.

A part of the material taken into the blood is further prepared by tissue cells in the liver, while a part passes through the lymphatics and is split up into chemical compounds by the action of the ferments and thrown into the blood. The organic materials absorbed by the blood are again modified by the blood itself and rendered fit for the blood and tissue cells.

To Maintain a Perfect State of Health.

GIVE a man the right kind of food, that contains the essential chemical elements, in the proper proportions, and he will maintain a comparatively perfect state of health. Deprive him of some of the chemical food elements that his body requires and a disease develops. A plant secures its nourishment from the chemistry of the soil, and if the chemical elements are not there disease and death follow.

It is these chemical elements that the human body demands, if it is to enjoy a healthy existence. Take away any of them, and to that extent, at least, you weaken the body.

By correcting these chemical errors—supplying the body chemically—the cause of disease can be eliminated. If you are familiar with the chemistry of the human body you understand that only the chemical elements used in the creation of the body are required to restore it to health when once its functional power becomes impaired. It must be understood that the success of treating a disease depends upon giving to the body, in some form, that which is daily taken away. In each case the physician should ascertain the cause and then the cause may be removed by correcting the dietary. It is not always wrong foods, nor unwholesome foods, but may be the wrong combination of pure foods, or an overindulgence of pure foods.

Impoverished Blood.

ANYTHING that weakens or destroys the chemical elements of the blood is instantly felt throughout the whole body. The heart and stomach fail to act with vigor, constipation ensues, the liver becomes congested, the kidneys work irregularly, oftentimes we develop congested or poor circulation, causing nervousness, pain, rheumatism and neuralgia. Then again, physical derangements may follow—paralysis, loss of movement, convulsions, jerky, spasmodic movement, tremor and agitated movement. Just as poor soil will impoverish that which it produces, so will poor food impoverish the blood, and the blood is the life of the being. When buying foods too little attention is given to the quality. The carelessness and ignorance that exists accounts in a great measure for the miserable physical life lived by so many.

It is now generally agreed among chemists that we manufacture enough poison in our alimentary canal and small intestines to kill us before the day is over, were it not that these poisons are neutralized by the chemical substances thrown off from the organs of the body before they enter the blood and thus reach the brain and other vital parts of the nervous system. The nerves are important conductors in the human body, and it is therefore through them that the benefit of normal circulation is brought to bear upon the organism.

Every bodily organ and, above all, the brain, needs its never-failing current of blood to be rapidly coursing through it; and so surely is this true that the brain will work only according to the quality of its blood. Mix poisons, manufactured by the different organs, with that blood and its thinking will be deranged accordingly.

Nerves, in a state of health, are magnificent servants. In diseased conditions the nerves become the most despotic of tyrants, carrying misery into nearly every waking moment that slave the owner. We know that in healthy sleep the circulation of the blood in the brain is less than it has been in waking hours. If by any misfortune or any folly the blood presses upon the brain, you do not sleep, and the blood vessels of the brain are more heavily gorged than in waking hours. We know that when the vessels are too heavily gorged the result is stupor. We also know that this overcharged condition of the blood vessels should be relieved, and may be by means given in a previous article on "sleep," in which the subject of insomnia received due consideration.

Twenty-four hours of right thinking will bring the color back into the face and start the subject on the road to health. This does not mean self-hypnotization, but intelligent direction of the thought and nerve fluids.

Cut Open the Heart Sack.

Dr. G. A. Van Lennep of New York recently performed the unusual and difficult operation of cutting open the sack enclosing a man's heart in order to remove the congestion resulting from pleurisy following a long illness of pneumonia. In order to provide against every possible contingency arising from a failure of the vital organs, a pulmotor, an auxiliary oxygen tank and the ether apparatus were ranged side by side in the amphitheater.

With unusual care a mixture of ether and oxygen was fed to the lungs, weakened from the long siege of pneumonia. Then Dr. Van Lennep made the incision between the fourth and fifth ribs, cutting clear into the swollen membranes about the heart. This organ was revealed to the eyes of a number of local surgeons who had come to witness the operation.

A few moments for a general cleaning of the vicinity of the wound and of emptying the distended cavity sufficed. Then the laborious task of placing a tube and carefully packing the aperture. Thus the heart's containing sack was left subject to continuous drainage, and that organ itself, relieved of the external pressure and the poisons generated by the pneumonia, resumed a more normal functioning.

After being about an hour under the ether the patient, whose vitality was dangerously at the ebb, was immediately placed beneath the influence of the pulmotor. The ether fumes were driven out in double quick time and inflowing oxygen brought color back to his cheeks with marvelous rapidity and the patient is reported as being in excellent condition.

False Teeth in Man's Throat.

Twenty years ago Capt. Henry Wagner of Allentown, Pa., swallowed a small plate of false teeth, and they remained in his throat until last week. During all this period he had been compelled to live on fluids. About a week ago he went to Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, where with the aid of an electric light tube the teeth were disovered in the throat covered with a thick layer of tissue. The old soldier was asked whether he was willing to have an operation performed. "Sure, go ahead," he replied. Two attempts were made to reach the plate with forceps and a third proved successful.

Edison's Longevity Scheme.

In a recent magazine article Mr. Edison expounds his theory of longevity which he says he has tried out not only upon himself, but upon his wife, with results that have convinced him. He talked to his wife for fifteen years before she would adopt his theories about eating and sleeping, but she has been living strictly in accord with the Edison system during the past seven years, with the result, as Mr. Edison declares, that strangers often mistake his wife and daughter for sisters.

Mrs. Edison now never sleeps over four or five hours in the twenty-four. She sits up until one or two and gets up before six. She is just as particular in limiting her food as in limiting her sleep.

By his system Mr. Edison believes it is possible to round out a century of existence and maintain vigor all the way along. Put in brief form, the system is, don't eat too much, and don't sleep too much.

Infantile Paralysis Not Contagious.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] Infantile paralysis, which has inspired terror in the hearts of anxious parents because of its resistance to medical skill, is not contagious.

This conclusion has been announced by some of the highest authorities, who have made through studies of the disease in all its uncanny phases.

Dr. M. J. Rosenau, professor of preventive medicine in Harvard University; Charles T. Brues, instructor in economic entomology, and Dr. Mark W. Richardson, secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Health, agree that infantile paralysis is not a contagion.

When they first began the study of the deadly disease the experts were misled into believing that the sickness spread from person to person, but late developments in their course of investigations show that their first conclusions were in error.

A striking resemblance between the action of the virus of infantile paralysis and that of hydrophobia has been noted.

Boldness of Primitive Surgeons.

[The Lancet:] One of the most interesting studies in connection with the evolution of the surgeon's art is the extraordinary similarity which may be found between the procedure of modern active practitioners and those that were apparently practiced by their remote ancestors, for the native practitioner is a remarkably conservative type.

The earliest form of splint known, discovered in situ on the body of an Egyptian of the Fourth Dynasty, finds its exact counterpart in that which is at present in everyday use among the barber surgeons of Upper Egypt.

Many modern savage and semi-savage people perform surgical operations—and have done so from time immemorial—that wholly surprise those who, following a rather prevalent mode of thought, regard the major operations of surgery as being of a very recent development. And yet surprise at the boldness of these operations should always be tempered by the reflection that the more primitive the state of society the greater the familiarity with the details of severe wounding and subsequent repair of the human body.

Warned Against Sleeping.

[Minneapolis Journal:] A Viennese physician has made the startling discovery that too much sleep causes diseases quite as menacing to comfort as overeating and infinitely more dangerous to life itself. Gallstones, gravel and other allied diseases, he declares, are frequently caused by oversleeping.

He goes on to say that during sleep a change occurs in the metabolism of the body—that is, in the chemical changes of the living cell. The change in cellular tissue is much slower during sleep than in the waking state, a fact which is generally known and frequently referred to when in convalescence we hear someone remark, "He doesn't need much food because he is sleeping so much."

When a healthy person unduly prolongs the hours of slumber there is an insufficient waste of cellular tissue, while the food supply as a rule is not diminished. What becomes of the tissue and juices of the body which normally would be drained away during the waking hours, but which, because of long sleeping hours, remain in the body? They are deposited in one or more of the vital organs—as, for instance, the kidneys or the bladder, where ultimately they cause the severe and dangerous disturbances known as gravel and gallstones.

Contrary to general belief, brain workers do not require as much sleep as manual laborers. Undue indulgence in sleep engenders a desire for more sleep. Everybody has experienced the peculiar brightness and lucidity of the brain following a sleepless night, and everybody knows from experience the stupid and heavy feeling which frequently follows a deep, dreamless slumber. The brain is not refreshed, particularly during a dreamless sleep. It is the body whose ravages must be repaired.

Nervous people particularly make a grave mistake in remaining in bed late in the morning in hopes of falling asleep again. The success of many a sanatorium for "nervous wrecks" consists in forcing the patient to get up early— in some institutions before sunrise—whether they have slept through the night or not. By fatiguing the muscular system through constant exercise through the day, sleep for the following night is insured, and this regime rigidly adhered to for three or four weeks is bound to cure the worst state of "nerves" that ever happened.

BROOKS AND BROOKLETS

[From "Brain and Brawn," edited by Harry Ellington Brook and issued monthly by the Naturopathic Publishing Company, Los Angeles.]

People talk too much nowadays without saying anything.

Cancer is due to the ingestion of more proteid food—especially flesh food—than can be assimilated. Sometimes the digestive organs are too weak to handle a reasonable amount. Among vegetarians cancer is exceedingly rare.

The Associated Charities of Los Angeles might be engaged in better business than in lending its name, for the sake of a small percentage of profits, to such a cruel performance as a "rodeo."

Why force food on militant suffragettes? Many have fasted with benefit for over six weeks. A fast might cure them of some of their "cussedness."

We are now in Lent, when good church people are expected to deny themselves, by not eating fish and flesh at the same meal--unless they are sick. There are millions who never eat fish or flesh at all.

Carnegie giving to the cause of peace money earned by building battleship plates is a sight to make the Angel of Peace have an attack of angelic paralysis.

A woman conducting a "beauty culture" class for mothers tells her pupils that "at all times mothers should be happy and care-free." How easy! What an awful lot of sickly slush one encounters in these "beauty" and "health" columns of the daily papers.

There is no truth in the rumor that the Los Angeles City Council is preparing an ordinance requiring a permit for a man to kiss his wife—with a more expensive one for kissing someone else's wife.

Martin Luther hurled an inkstand at the devil. If you doubt it they will show a stain on the wall. I'm doing the same sort of thing, after a fashion—slinging ink at the devils of Ignorance and Superstition and Cruelty and Greed. Some of it may miss its mark, but much of it will stick for printers' ink, you know, is hard to efface. Therefore those who write for publication should be sure that what they set down is true and just, for after it is once printed it cannot be recalled.

One of the meanest developments of what we call "civilization" is the stereotyped sneering, sickening: "What does he get out of it?" whenever a man does a good deed.

Of many conscientious healers it may be said, as was said of Jesus: "He saved others; Himself He cannot save." Enthusiastic in doing good to their patients, they neglect their own bodies.

The fact is that the dollar of our daddies is gradually declining in purchasing power to that of Mexico which is worth only 50 cents. It follows that the man who received a hundred dollars a month fifteen years ago, and is today receiving a hundred a month, is really getting only about $60 a month, for money is worth only what it will buy. Five hundred years ago the English peasant was well satisfied with a groat a day. Why? Because gold was exceedingly scarce, and the groat would buy what he needed to live on. Should the prophecy of a conservative English chemist, that we may soon be able to turn lead into gold, come true, that would settle it—or rather unsettle it.

The main difference between Man and Woman is: Man is a selfish animal; Woman is what Man makes her. Yes, of course, dear reader, you are one of the exceptions.

There's one feature the anti-cigarette people don't enlarge on sufficiently—the immense loss of property and of life these "coffin nails" cause every year.

See that woman wearing in her hat the corpse of a bird? You may estimate her heart and her brain as both below normal.

"The heights by great men reached and kept were not attained by sudden flight, but they, while their companions slept, were toiling upward in the night."—[Longfellow.

Men, Women and Affairs in the Kaleidoscope.

The Poor Relation.

She bends above her rations, and forbears
  To lift her eyes the while the jest goes round;
For sneers and heartless jibes she little cares—
  Her sensibilities one cannot wound.

The witty thrust went home without a pang,
  Though barbed and poison-flecked with irony;
So often she has felt derision's fang
  That strangely calloused has she grown to be.

Yet when she sees the faces of the young
  About her, softly laughing her to scorn,
An unsuspected living nerve is wrung,
  And in her side the pricking of a thorn.

Perhaps her memory harks back to days
  When she was slender-limbed and fair of face,
With liquid eyes of innocence and ways
  Of winsome modesty and girlish grace.

Where has she wandered with the weight of years
  That drag her feet upon a downward path?
Flogged on by poverty and hate and fears,
  Consumed by malice, jealousy and wrath—

Belittled, spurned, and humbled to the dust,
  Defiantly she eats the food of wealth,
By deprivation poisoned with a lust
  To get, by force, by flattery or stealth.

The Woman Who Dares.

She is a special genius in her line, the woman who says and does daring things, and yet who means no harm by them. When she has the genius she is seldom misunderstood, she is seldom criticised; what she says and does seems so utterly a part of herself. She is always very bright-eyed, most thoroughly alive, and bubbling with mischief and vivacity. She is usually a most healthy young person, with plenty of color, and a flashing wit. She is never at a loss for the word of repartee, for she knows the danger of her profession. She must never be worsted in a tilt of wits—she must never run upon the reefs of commonplaces or vulgarity. She must never, through her own challenge, be spared to a corner where her only recourse is indignation. But it is second nature to her to avoid the pitfalls of her daring. She is good, proud and sympathetic, but a merciless adversary when her wit is aroused.

She makes the women about her seem dull and commonplace. Therein lies a danger. The other women listen and strive to imitate her, and they imitate her by the letter, not the spirit. Some charming and attractive girl, perfectly delightful when she adheres to her own genius, takes up the weapons of the woman who dares, and at the first brandishing runs into difficulty. Her friends are shocked, her new acquaintances misunderstand her at once, and she goes on record at a most unjust estimate. She goes on blundering until something shocks her to wake her up, and after a tearful time she returns to her own sweet self, realizing that she was not cut out to wield the dangerous, double-edged weapons of the woman who dares.

And there are a whole lot of us just like this little imitator, girls. We all have a good deal of approbativeness, and covet the social qualification to entertain not one or two individuals at a time, but to successfully hold the interest of a whole room full. It is a great accomplishment, and requires a close study of the science of culture. Physical health and magnetism are also well-nigh indispensable to this qualification. But as to utterances and actions that hang upon the ragged edge of the proprieties, without tipping over—well, let the woman who dares have her fling. Admire her, if you please, with her pretty scarlet and gold wings, as she skims over and flutters just out of reach of the dragon, Vulgarity; but do not try to imitate her. Say she is a genius, and let it go at that. You will be rewarded when your own best boy, instead of allowing himself to be lured from your side by all this brilliancy, tightens his grasp upon your arm.

Do's and Don'ts for the Domestic Man.

Don't, when you are a growing lad, be bullied out of helping your mother with the heavy housework, which may be too much for her strength, by your idle comrades, who stand about with cigarettes pasted to their upper lips, and some of whom let their mothers take in washing to support them.

Don't neglect to get some knowledge of housework, cookery, sewing buttons on, and all of those delicate little arts which come in so handy when "wife's gone to the country," and taken all the money with her.

Don't be one of those men who has allowed his mother to work like a dog to keep his boyhood home happy and comfortable, with no comprehension of her burden and sacrifice, and who therefore expects the same thing of the wife. There may be a mother-in-law to reckon with.

Don't waive aside the idea of helping your tired little mate with the simple reason that dirty work is disagreeable to you. It may be equally so to her. And if she has too much of it, with too little appreciation, there may some day be a strike and a "walk-out."

Don't think that a little domestic sleight-of-hand is going to unsex you. One of the most masculine men I ever knew, calling and finding his sweetheart washing the clothes on the back porch, took off his coat and vest, lit his pipe, and rubbed them out for her while she deftly rinsed them and ran them out on the line.

Don't, on the other hand, become too deucedly interested in those duties which properly the woman should assume.

Don't hang about the kitchen idly when your little wife is very busy with her cookery, tagging her, and making suggestions from the lofty standpoint of inexperience, getting in her way, and in other ways impeding domestic progress. Don't blame her if she goes all to pieces, throws the salt at you or hits you over the head with the batter spoon, even though you think you have a case of assault and battery. You may be lord and master everywhere else, but in the kitchen you are mere man, and can figure in no higher degree than as assistant, unless you come with some really superior knowledge of a special bachelor tid-bit—or unless you occasionally kiss the cook and tell her how sweet she looks in her white apron.

Don't poke about the house looking for dusty corners and neglected duties.

Don't nag your wife for the duties she may have left undone and find fault with those she has performed. Unless her neglect of certain things necessary to the cleanliness and comfort of the household is constant, and obviously the result of slovenliness or laziness, give it no heed. When you do find it necessary to speak to her about such things, wait until you have an accumulation of evidence, and speak to her rather from the standpoint of principle and sanitation than in a manner of fault-finding. If she is one of those women with whom you cannot reason, and who considers you a brute for wishing your home clean and hygienic, drop the subject, and try "going home to mother's" for a few weeks.

If you happen to be around the home in housecleaning time, don't expect the whole machinery to stop because of your presence. Jump in and help so as to get the thing over as quickly as possible. Don't run away to dodge some of the unpleasant duties that need a man's strength. This may be a good subject for jokes, but it is no joke to the little woman who labors sturdily to maintain the comfort of your home.

Don't interfere with mother's education and disciplining of the children simply because you have nerves, and because their howling interferes with your selfish comfort. Take a stroll until it is all over, and if you think mother has made a mistake talk it over when you are alone with her.

The Unbeaten Path.

In bringing up your child, don't follow in some beaten, conventional path, just because it is the easiest way, the generally-accepted way, and because you feel safer in following the footsteps of others than in striking out through a path of your own making. The beaten paths are not always the safe paths—in fact, they are often the most dangerous ones. We know by the infant mortality as disclosed to us in the recent International Health Congress at Washington—a death every second—that the beaten path has not proven what it should be in the rearing and care of infants and little children.

And yet quite naturally a mother feels a grave responsibility in setting aside tradition, and taking the chances in bringing up her child according to some absolutely unorthodox rules and regulations.

But here we have it in a nutshell. Don't experiment, good mothers, with your child's physical safety along lines in which you are utterly inexperienced, and where you are not absolutely sure what you are doing. Neither shall you experiment along such lines morally. But we commend you, Everymother, to think—not to be afraid of thinking along original lines. To study all the signs of the times—to keep abreast of the changes in the spirit of the times from day to day, to know what the most advanced minds are thinking and saying concerning child culture, and then to study your own children and to realize that you cannot bring them up by machine, one like the other, and perhaps after the pattern cut out by your mother, and by her mother before her. Either your children will rebel and fall into dangers beyond your ken and control, or they will develop into automatons. And really the first is preferable, for then they have some chance to develop individuality and character.

Have You a Hog?

Have you? A fat little sleek fellow who really means no harm—who is good-natured as long as you give him what he wants; who does not object to your spiritual qualities, your philanthropies, your friendships, providing they do not interfere with his comfort and convenience? Sometimes he is very cute, his antics amuse your friends, who think it great fun to humor him and feed him. When you go out with your friends you always take him along. Sometimes he runs ahead of you, sometimes beside you, but never behind. Sometimes he will go very sedately for a long time, and both you and your friend will be unconscious of his presence. But he is an approbative little cuss, and does not like to remain too long unnoticed. He has probably been pampered and petted since you were a "wee bit of a——," so he has grown to think quite something of himself.

Pretty soon he will get up on his hind legs and squeal coaxingly, and very soon you and your friend will make off to get him what he desires. Sometimes it is ice-cream soda, sometimes it is candy, or it may be just "eats" pure and simple. It may be, too, cocktails, highballs, cigarettes. Sometimes it is fine clothing, jewelry, luxurious living, or romances. Whatever it is, piggie indulges himself with a growing appetite. He commences to grow large and fat. The soft creamy hair that covered his little pink body begins to grow long and coarse, and the flesh itself loses its fineness and soft texture. With these changes, piggie loses his cuteness. And still another change causes him to be at first tolerated by your friends, and finally to become repellant. They look upon your fatuous fondness and indulgence of him as imbecility and an injustice to yourself as well as to them.

This other change is piggie's increasing obtrusiveness. When he was little and cunning his willfulness and exactions were amusing. Your friends called it "temperament" — much-abused term — quaintness, cuteness. But as his body grows bigger and grosser so do his exactions. He has developed the propensity to stand lengthwise in the trough. If any spiritual or friendly tendency within you has interfered with him to handle. His pride, his vanity, or presently only its poor little ghost remains to wake up now and then, and mourn in the defiled chambers of your soul. But for the most part it remains quiescent, and piggie has his own way.

Not content with crowding out the moral tendencies, piggie next invades the mental chambers—for remember he is growing very big and obtrusive. He wallows about, and splashes up the windows so that the mental vision becomes discolored, distorted. Try as you may, you may never again look forth and see things from a clean, fine, high standpoint. You see them as piggie wishes you to see them.

His next inroads are on your physical body. Being one grand squeal of appetite, whatever that appetite may be, he is, with his growing indulgence, at last entirely oblivious of the rights and the

It is not only done better, but you save washing an extra dish and losing a large proportion of the egg yolk that sticks to dish and egg beater.

Sterilizing Milk.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] Milk is sterilized by heating to a temperature of 212 degrees Fahrenheit and keeping at that temperature for half an hour to one hour and a half. To remain sterilized, milk must be kept secure from contact with outside germs. To pasteurize milk, put the milk into glass fruit jars, adjust the covers, but do not turn them down, set the jars on the rack in a steam kettle (aluminum ware is good for this purpose, because it holds the heat,) and fill the kettle with water to the height of the milk in the jar. Heat the water until the thermometer in the water bath registers 171 degrees Fahrenheit. The temperature of the milk will be several degrees lower. Keep the kettle covered. Now remove the kettle to a place where the water will remain at this temperature. Put two stove lids under the kettle, or remove to a table and throw over it a heavy comfortable—cotton wadding is a nonconductor of heat—and allow it to stand thus for half an hour. Now cool as quickly as possible, but gradually at first, or the bottles will break; then set away the jars in a cool place. The double boiler may be used, but the steam kettle is more convenient for the use of the thermometer, and the glass jars are proper vessels in which to store milk. If a double boiler be used, let it be a large one, so that the water in the bath may rise to the level of the milk.

ABOUT HOME PLUMBING.

The Trap.

[St. Paul Pioneer Press:] With the advent of open plumbing and the laws regarding the trapping of all waste-water pipes, it would not seem necessary to say much on this score. When a water seal in the trap remains at the proper level, no amount of disease germs or foul air can penetrate it, and so gain admission to air of our rooms; but, unfortunately, the average housewife seldom knows or realizes that this seal can be easily drawn down or below the level of safety, thus leaving a clear passageway for impurities from sewer or cesspool to enter. The most ordinary way for this to happen is by evaporation, water inside a trap evaporating in about two weeks.

In the Guest Chamber.

A spare room, for instance, where the set bowl may be used only infrequently, should have its pipes flushed with hot water once a week or so; indeed, the flushing of all pipes frequently is essential. We know how sediment even from clean water will collect on bottom or sides of a vessel when left standing. We cannot wipe out the inside of our pipes, but we can see to it that a cleansing flood of clean water is sent through them often. A disinfectant when used should not simply substitute one odor for another, but should be an actual germ killer, like carbolic in solution, or a product like formaldehyde; chloride of lime for outbuildings in country should be in frequent use. These should supplement actual cleanliness and not in place of same.

HEARTSEASE.

Example Versus Definition.

[Sidney:] Nothing is so infectious as example. No person is so insignificant as to be sure his example will do no hurt. Alexander received more bravery of mind by the pattern of Achilles than by hearing of the definition of fortitude.

Three Runes for the Road.

Mastery.

Thou art the master of the word unspoken:
In that safe silence thou art free.
But let the guarded silence once be broken,
The word will master thee.

Hillel's Great Word.

I think of Hillel as an elder brother,
Who threw a ray of heaven upon the race.
He said of old, "Dare not to judge another,
Till you yourself have stood within his place."

Love and Truth.

They fought for truth with wild and whirling words,
That frightened from the heart the singing birds:
Then cried the judgment angel from above,
"You have not truth unless you first have love!"

The Popular Educational Food Campaign Health The New Brainy Diet System

VITAL OR BRAINY
EGGS
BLOOD PURIFIERS OR LAXATIVES

The everyday BRAINY or LIFE-GIVING foods are the most strengthening, healing forces in nature. They promote the highest efficiency in brain workers. When correctly combined they maintain health permanently.

Wrongly combined foods ferment and poison the system, causing rheumatism, appendicitis, apoplexy, etc., lack of appetite, and frequently death. The different foods causing expectoration, catarrh, fevers, nightsweats, coughing, etc., are specified in the instructive free booklets. Fat people have reduced one pound daily by a DIGESTIBLE brainy diet of everyday foods, gaining strength, without fasting, or exercises. Thin people gain flesh by the DIGESTIBLE weight-producing foods.

NO FOODS SOLD.

People write: "My brain power and general efficiency have been nearly doubled this year by selecting brainy foods. I have made a fortune in real estate, and the credit is honestly yours." * * "The hints on foods for curing congested liver, nourishing the brain, etc., are worth untold dollars."

ODDITIES.

Accident Makes Man Bark Like a Dog.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] Twenty-seven years ago Frederick Saunders of Shamokin, Pa., was struck on the left eye by a baseball bat and knocked unconscious. When he revived several minutes later he started to bark and yelp like a dog and speak with convulsive movements, and never has recovered.

Saunders talks in soft tones. Suddenly, however, his voice will break into a series of barks and yelps, his feet pawing the ground. When the attacks, which occur every few minutes, are over he continues his conversation where it was broken off.

A "Twin" Farm.

[Washington Post:] Who will move on the Balster farm, near Edwardsville, Ill., and run the risk of twins?

The farm belonged to Diedrick Balster, who died a few years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Bruno Johnston moved onto the farm. In the course of time Johnston shouted at passing neighbors one morning:

"Stork came to our house last night."

"Girl or boy?"

"Twins."

After the Johnstons came the families of Edward Newman and Henry Gerdes. Twins came to the Newmans and three sets of twins to the Gerdes family, and now a new tenant is sought.

Live on Four-Leaved Clover.

[New York Times:] M. and Mme. Tardout, who have a small farm at St. Michel-sur-Orde, France, were brought to the verge of ruin a few years ago by a bad season. Mme. Tardout found some four-leaved clover plants in their garden, and since then she and her husband have made a living by selling the "lucky plant," chiefly to actresses and to jewelers, who set it in brooches and pendants between two pieces of crystal.

Don't Give All to Wife.

[Baltimore American:] "A man who gives his wife all his salary is no man at all," said Judge John J. Dobler of the Supreme bench of Baltimore. This dictum was delivered after Thomas Nichols had been arraigned for non-support and had promised to give his wife all his salary each week.

"I don't want you to do that," said the judge. "The man is the treasurer of the family, and he should be the financial head in reality as well as theory. A man must take some pride in the fact that he is a man and the head of the house."

It was arranged that Nichols, who admitted that he was making $24 a week, should give his wife $8 a week.

Worships King Cobra.

[New York Sun:] One of the greatest mysteries of the New York Zoological Park is the identity of a middle-aged man who seems to worship the deadly king cobra of India which is on exhibition in the reptile house.

The man is a frequent visitor to the park, and upon entering the reptile house he will make for the glass-fronted cage where the king cobra, said to be the most poisonous snake in the world, is on exhibition and bow down in an attitude of prayer before the deadly reptile. If there are a number of visitors in the snake house, the man merely inclines his head, but if the place is deserted he sinks to his knees and bows over the rail in an attitude of extreme devotion.

Curator Ditmars of the Zoo has frequently spoken to the man and asked his name, but the worshiper merely shakes his head and leaves the place. What sect the man belongs to that worships this horrible reptile as a deity is not known.

Woman May Change Her Mind.

[Kansas City Journal:] A woman has a right to change her mind about marrying if she desires, and she is not guilty of obtaining money under false pretenses if she receives transportation and accepts a trousseau from a man and then decides not to marry him.

This was the decision today of Justice Bell of St. Louis in deciding that John Day had no recourse because his Austrian sweetheart, Barbara Herroola, spent his money to come 4000 miles to wed him, accepted her wedding garments and then decided she did not want to wed him.

The Meanest Man Found.

[New York American:] "Old Man" Curtis, a character long familiar to the people of New Milford, Ct., has been sent to the poorhouse despite the fact that his son, William Curtis, who lives near there, is one of the wealthiest farmers in the section and reputed to be worth $80,000. The son said that he let his father go to the almshouse because, when a small boy, his father forced him to work and then took every cent of his pay.

"Old Man" Curtis said his son was "too mean to give him a meal without making a fuss over it like it was a million dollars."

Boy Slayer is Happy.

[New York Times:] Little "Sammy" Moore, 7 years old, laughed when Coroner Dean said he would hold him, without bail, for the grand jury on a charge of killing Herbert Dorsey, a farmer, near Pilottown, Md.

The hearing was held in the jail, and, although the youthful defendant's father, Charles Moore, and his 11-year-old brother were in tears, the boy saw nothing solemn in the proceedings.

"How's the calf, dad?" was the greeting of the lad when his father appeared at the cell door. "Gee," he continued, "I'd like to go skatin' today!"

The boy received a shotgun for a Christmas present, but after he had fired at a playmate who refused to give back some marbles won in a game his father hid the weapon. But the boy found it, and when Farmer Dorsey refused to let him ride on the tailboard of his hay wagon he shot him. Dorsey died in a few hours.

The boy attempted to set fire to his grandmother's barn a few months ago because he was reproved for stealing apples. A few days before the shooting of Dorsey he was expelled from school as incorrigible. His mother died two years ago, and his father says that she was the only person who could manage him.

Chains Herself in Jewels.

[Chicago Record Herald:] Mrs. Charles H. Anthony of Muncie, Ind., who appeared in Peacock Alley last year with shoes having diamond-studded heels, has flashed a new sensation on the East. Here it is:

A tiara-like diamond armlet four inches wide and four inches high, all intricately bejeweled on platinum. Connected by a long chain of big diamonds, with a diamond ring, large and heavy, set with two-carat gems, twelve in all.

With the armlet Mrs. Anthony wears earrings consisting of three diamonds each, the largest being three carats and the others two carats each; also a brooch and fifteen diamond rings.

Parcel Post Carrier's Troubles.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] A Chicago firm sent a woman's dress form to Mrs. Annie Tracey at Gary, Ind., by parcel post. It fell to the lot of Mail Carrier Bayard Pittinger to deliver the "lady." Pittinger slipped his arm around the waist and sallied out into the street. Before he was able to deliver his charge he was interrupted by two policemen, who came in response to a call from a near-sighted woman who rang up police headquarters and said that a mail carrier had entered the flat adjoining her home and was carrying away the mistress of the house.

Marriage Proposals in Writing.

[New York Sun:] A bill to require marriage proposals to be made in writing and to be properly filed has been introduced into the Massachusetts Legislature by Winfield T. Prime of Worcester. These clever girls who coax an unsuspecting swain into their net, make him confess that he's madly in love and force him to propose marriage, then wait for the victim's passion to cool and sue for a healthy breach of promise reward, surely would be thwarted by the legislation.

Wolves No Match for Woman.

[Omaha Bee:] Miss Dora Shafer of Hudson, Colo., who has a local reputation as a huntress, started from her home to pay a neighborly visit. On her way she was attacked by three wolves. She shot and skinned them and continued on her way.

Lunatics Run Amuck.

[New York Tribune:] One person was killed and nine others seriously injured by five terrified maniacs released by firemen from an insane asylum in the outskirts of Elvas, Portugal.

Altogether thirty-five lunatics were set free because of fire in the asylum. They rushed howling through the streets for some time. Thirty of them were easily gathered in the municipal building, but the other five secured some iron bars from a scrap heap, and attacked every one they met. Several hours passed before they were overpowered.

Man in Bed Struck by Bullet.

[Dallas News:] Sick in bed in his house and slightly injured by a bullet discharged several hundred yards distant, was the experience of Clayton Reed, one-half mile from Dallas, Tex. The leaden missile was shot by some boys shooting at tin cans some distance from the house. The bullet went through the roof, turned and plowed through the ceiling of the room.

Fat Man Commits Suicide.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] M. Edmond Carlier, a well-known personality in Belgium, committed suicide last week because he was so fat that he could only move about with great difficulty. Aged 64, he weighed 266 pounds.

M. Carlier was the chairman of a society which had for its object the preservation of beautiful landscape.

THE BULGARIAN NATIO[illegible]
The Greatest Food-Tonic [illegible]
The Secret of Long[illegible]

Several years ago, a body of scienti[illegible] on vital statistics found to their [illegible] little Bulgaria, with only four million [illegible] had 3800 people over 100 years of ag[illegible] one out of every thousand is a [illegible] E. Metchnikoff, leading bacteriologist [illegible] teur Institute, Paris, when he heard [illegible] culiar fact, started a very thorough [illegible] to get after the real cause of this [illegible] gevity. The daily life of the Bulgar[illegible] habits were closely observed. Special [illegible] was paid to their food, and noticed [illegible] an oriental sour milk preparation, [illegible] their daily meals. This sour milk [illegible] delicious taste, is not to be compared [illegible] common sour milk, when analyzed [illegible] atory it was found to contain [illegible] bulgaricus," a germ that is the [illegible] acid producer. By further research [illegible] that this microbe, when eaten [illegible] destroyed by the gastric juices of the [illegible] but would enter the large intestine [illegible] fect the bowels completely, [illegible] of bacteria so harmful to our system [illegible] poisons produced by them [illegible] up a new healthy intestinal [illegible]

When the result of these investig[illegible] first published (Metchnikoff, [illegible] life, 1908,) the world was aroused [illegible] ple Bulgarian national dish seemed [illegible] elixir of youth.

At once everybody went to it. [illegible] beauty experts recommended the [illegible] milk. The ever obliging manufacturer [illegible] to the stable picking up any and [illegible] producing germ, the market was [illegible] with lactic acid cultures that [illegible] sour milk, to say nothing of [illegible] ful bacteria from the bowels. GOOD LITTLE POEMS.

To Joaquin Miller.

In Memoriam.

He lived true-souled to nature; gave
His life to modeling in thought;
The rhythm of the wind and wave
Were moods wherein this monarch wrought.

Nature his God! he stood aloof;
Pregnant with all that makes men; this
And more—the poet's insight—proof
That simple ways are ways of bliss.

His final cry—fine soul!—for man
Must ring forever as today.
He knows the secrets of God's plan;
He touched the great finality!

But no! there is no first nor last!
Man comes and goes and comes again.
Form cannot serve to hold him fast,
For spirit rules its own domain.

And so a brother did but pass
Within the shadow; to our eyes
No more revealed. The flowering grass
Goes back to earth; its beauty dies.

In its own season—Essence lives
And blooms again each coming year.
And so our growth goes on and gives "Life after life" in some new sphere.

ROSE M. de VAUX-ROYER.

"At Final Parting."

Could I but teach man to believe,
Could I but make small men to grow,
To break frail spider webs that weave
About their thews and bind them low,
Could I but sing one song and lay
Grim doubt, I then could go my way
In tranquil silence, glad, serene
And satisfied, from off the scene.
But, ah, this disbelief, this doubt,
This doubt of God, this doubt of good.
The damned spot will not out.

Wouldst learn to know one little flower,
Its perfume, perfect from the hue?
Yea, wouldst thou have one perfect hour
Of all the years that come to you?
Then grow as God hath planted, grow
A lordly oak or daisy low,
As he hath set his garden; be
Just what thou art, or grass or tree,
Thy treasures up in heaven laid
Await thy sure ascending soul,
Life after life—be not afraid.

—[Joaquin Miller's last poem.

Today.

Today is mine: I've time to go
Upon my way and work and know
Through work, I can achieve and learn
Before my steps on earth must turn
Into the gate that points the way
To that blessed home, where loved ones stay.

Today is mine: On this one day
There's no eclipse to dark the way;
The sun is shining joyous, bright;
In this my hour, I should delight;
On this my day, I'll be sincere
Not groan and moan because I'm here.

Today is mine: Oh, glorious thought.
Forgot are failures, yesters brought.
Unwasted shall these moments be
That my dear Master's given me;
I yet have time, I'll haste to use.
Lo! Here am I? Come! my work choose.

Today is mine: My recompense
For other days when light was dense;
Yet still I plodded on, if slow,
And all ungarlanded below
And now, today, it is my own,
Its radiant light I've never known.

Today is mine: Its hours are fleet
And every one I count them sweet;
Oh, may the work I do live on
When all my days are past and gone;
I plead for some great living task—
Dear Master, grant me what I ask.

—[Alice Mathews.

HUMOR.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] Stubb: What's the trouble, old chap? You look angry enough to fight.

Penn: Oh, I'm sizzling. It took me an hour to button up my wife's waist in the back, and then I told her a joke and she laughed so much the buttons all flew open. What's the use in telling a woman a joke, anyway?

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] Briggs: Here's a fellow who writes about the acme of selfishness without having the slightest idea what it really is.

Griggs: Well, what is it?

Briggs: Having your wife a cold-air fiend, insist upon leaving both windows in the room open and then rolling herself up in all the bed clothing!

[Harper's Weekly:] "Are you denying yourself anything this Lent, Bobby?" asked Winkleton.

"Yes," said Bobley, "I am denying myself to my creditors. Shan't see anybody I owe for six weeks."

"Gosh—you'll be lonesome, won't you?" said Winkleton.

[Woman's Home Companion:] Judge (to spinster:) Your name, please?

Witness: Cornelia Rent.

Judge: Now your age—but first let me warn the public that if there is any outbreak of hilarity the courtroom will be cleared.

[Detroit Free Press:] "Have you a set of Shakespeare?" asked the young woman at the door.

"No, but we don't need it," was the reply. "We had a splendid set of Haviland given us for a wedding present."

[Chicago Record-Herald:] When the young husband reached home from the office he found his wife in tears.

"Oh, John!" she sobbed on his shoulder "I had baked a lovely cake and I put it out on the back porch for the frosting to dry and—and the dog ate it!"

"Well, don't cry about it, sweetheart," he consoled, patting the pretty, flushed cheek. "I know a man who will give us another dog."

[Philadelphia Record:] Blobbs: Do you think the death of old Closefist will be a loss to the community?

Slobbs: Well, I understand the loss is fully covered by insurance.

[Harper's Magazine:] "James, there's a burglar downstairs. I'm going for help."

"Wait a minute. I'll go with you."

Call on Us for Relief

BIS-BIS
BISHOP'S Cracker Factory
LOS ANGELES
The cracker that has put Los Angeles on the map as a cracker baking center

—When a business has grown to be some size and has acquired success, there is primarily one reason for it—good goods. The business that stays small, that is not a success, that is little known, is not producing the quality of products you would wish to buy.

—The sole reason that BIS-BIS Crackers are so well known throughout the great Southwest, are sold in practically every store and eaten in practically every home, is because they are good goods.

—Every product from the factory of Bishop & Company—whether Bis-Bis crackers or something else—is a quality product. When the Bishop factory was started it was started with the one idea—"success" and back of the word "success" has always been "quality" and "good goods."

—Sticking closely to these high ideals has made the Bishop cracker factory what it is today, and has put Los Angeles on the map as a cracker-baking center.

—Such a factory is a big factor in the growth of a city, in the matter of employment for workers, property investment and the patronage of many other lines of business.

—And, more than all else, it produces such crackers as [illegible] people delight to eat. There are none better than Bis-Bis.
